INTRODUCTION.

“THE origin of many religious houses has been the operation of domestic grief on superstition. About the middle of the reign of Henry I. a great Norman baron of this neighbourhood, Walter L’Espece, had a son of the same Christian name, who was extravagantly addicted to swift horses and hard riding. This impetuous and spirited young man, impelling his steed near Frithby with his usual violence, the animal fell down and broke his rider’s neck. By this calamity his father was left without any consolation but that of religion. In the first distress of an afflicted parent, he had recourse to his uncle William, rector of Garton, who, having great influence over his conscience, earnestly recommended to him the foundation of three monasteries endowed with part of his possessions, which was successively accomplished in the houses of Kirkham, A.D. 1122, and of Rivaulx, A.D. 1131, both in this county, and of Warden, A.D. 1136. The vast possessions of this ancient baron may be estimated, partly from the circumstance of his having endowed these houses successively with a portion only of his lands, and partly from his having devoted to the endowment of Kirkham alone a revenue estimated in the earlier part of the twelfth century at the annual sum of 1300 marks.<sup>1</sup> At an early period in the history of this house, the ancient monastery of Augustinian canons, the eldest foundation of Walter L'Espec, which seems to have been placed at a distance inconveniently near for both houses, was removed by consent of the parties, Kirkham and Rivaux, and an exchange of their respective estates made for the accommodation of each."<sup>1</sup>

This is the way in which what is called "history" is written when dealing with such matters as come under review, the subject being the foundation of an ancient monastic establishment, an old family, a time-hallowed usage or custom, or a hoary memorial of the elder ages. Although Kirkham stands where Kirkham stood when its first buildings were reared, still—so this writer alleges—it was "removed by consent of the parties," and although the several endowments of the two Houses never changed hands till the dissolution fell upon the owners, still "an exchange of their respective estates was made for the accommodation of each," as though such an exchange would have remedied the "inconvenient nearness" of the two monasteries!!

But I cite this careless misreading or misunderstanding of the historical documents referred to by the writer of the recited passage, as a more than possible illustration of earlier misreadings, misunderstandings, or possible (though maybe unintentional) falsifications of the elder sources of information. For myself, I feel no sort of certainty that the story of the younger Walter Espec, of the catastrophe which resulted in his alleged premature death, and of his father's seeking, in consequence, and finding “ religious consolation ” in the founding and endowing of the three monasteries named, is in any respect one to be depended upon. When we turn to the second and final so-called Endowment or Foundation Charter of Kirkham, we find the souls of the fathers and mothers of the Founder’s nephews mentioned, as also those of all their fore-elders and benefactors, and those of all the faithful dead, mentioned, but no reference to the son of whom he had been bereaved. Should we examine the corresponding clause of the so-called Foundation Charter of Rievaulx, what we meet with is thought of the salvation of the dead King William, of the living King Henry, and of all their ancestors ; of that of the Founder’s father and mother, of Hugh de Wildecher, of that of his wife’s father and mother, and of all their fore-elders and ancestors in common, but no hint even—not even so much as that in the phrase “ all the faithful dead ” in the Kirkham deed—of a lost and lamented child, grief for whose removal had inspired and led to both the one foundation and the other.

I know, of course, that this is not a conclusive consideration, and that, if dwelt upon too much, it might prove a very broken reed indeed to rest upon. But what is to me much more conclusive is that in the earliest and, undoubtedly, most authentic statements relative to Walter Espec we have, no mention is made of an heir that had been, but was gone, no possible or even latent suggestion that he had ever been a father. The account referred to is printed in the Monasticon (vi. 209), and is headed, “ E Libello Alredi Rievallensis Abbatis, de Bello Standardico (Lelandi Collect., vol. ii.

p. 312),” and it runs as follows :—“Aduit etiam Walterus Espec, vir senex et plenus dierum ; acer ingenio, in consiliis prudens, in pace modestus, in bello providus ; amicitiam sociis, fidem semper regibus servans. Erat ei statura ingens, membra omnia tantæ magnitudinis ut modum excederent, et tantæ proceritati congruerent ; capilli nigri, barba prolixa, frons patens et libera, oculi grandes et perspicaces, facies amplissima, tracticia<sup>1</sup> tamen ; vox tubæ similis, facundiam quæ ei facilis erat quadam soni majestate componens. Erat præterea nobilis carne, sed Christiana pietate nobilior : nempe cum liberis careret hæredibus, licet ei strenui nepotes non deessent, de optimis tamen quibusque possessionibus suis Christum fecit hæredem. Nam in loco amœnissimo, Kircham nomine, monasterium regularium condidit clericorum, multis illud denariis ornans et ditans possessionibus.”

Such is the picturesque description given by a contemporary, and one evidently as able to convey by his words that which he meant to deliver—even had we

<sup>1</sup> The word that is printed here in the Monasticon is “tracticia,” a word as to which some doubt is allowable. Certainly the adjective tracticius is employed by Aurelius Victor, and is applied by him descriptively of the dead body of Heliogabalus, which was ignominiously dragged along the streets and thrown into the Tiber ; and it is of course apparent that, however far-fetched the idea may be, the sense of the word, as applied to qualify a man’s face, might be “lengthened,” “elongated,” from forehead to chin, that is. Mr. Walbran translates the word by “well-featured,” but without apparent reason. It may further be incidentally mentioned in connection with this description of Walter Espec’s personal characteristics, and as besides illustrative of what I have spoken of in the text as “careless misreading or misapprehension,” that in The Mirror of Literature, Amusement, and Instruction of Sept. 30, 1826, in a notice of Rievaulx Abbey, we read of Walter Espec’s son as follows :—“This youth is described by Aelred, the third Abbot, as being tall and graceful, with a voice like a trumpet, yet sweeter with the charm of eloquence” !!

not his other writings to appeal to for confirmation of our view—as any of his compeers well skilled in the arts of description. And while, on the one hand, we draw the inevitable inference that he spoke of a man childless by no mere casualty, there is, on the other, the distinct statement that he made Christ his heir, not because he had lost a son, but because he had no heir after the flesh.<sup>1</sup>

For the story itself, as usually told, this is what Mr. Walbran (Mem. of Fountains, ii. 178) has to say :—“The facts of the incident were first published in the Monasticon Anglicanum, from a volume of collections, now preserved among the Cotton MSS. in the British Museum, where it is marked Vitellius, F. 4. It records with considerable minuteness that, in the reign of King Henry I., Walter L’Espece was the lord of Kirkham and other large estates in Yorkshire and Northumberland—the rewards of uncommon bravery in the wars of the period ; and that by Adeline his wife he had an only son, who bore his father’s Christian name, and was distinguished by the same mental qualifications and noble form ;” and then comes the story of the foundering horse and the fatal casualty to the rider. But we cannot but notice that no name is cited as that of the author of the story, no authority of any kind quoted, no hint even of its date, its local origin or connection, or, in short, of any claims that are recognisable on our attention even, and much more our acceptance.

locus erat horroris et vastæ solitudinis, mansionem acceperant, præfato viro tradente, et Venerabili Turstino episcopalem, cum affectu paterno, favorem præbente.” So too Walter of Hemingburgh thus speaks of the “Fundatio Rievalis” :—“Sane paulo ante (foundationem Abbathie de Fontibus) a nobili viro Waltero Espec fundata fuit domus Ryevallis, consistente Thurstino Archiepiscopo, et assensum præbente, ubi Monachi Clarevallenses, felicitis memorie Abbate Bernardo directi, sempiternam acceperunt mansionem.”

To a thoughtful and attentive mind, considering and pondering the circumstances of the case and the times, there would seem to be a much simpler, and at the same time a much nobler, explanation of Espec’s action than any suggested by the sentiment of the story as it is told. Aelred describes his friend as a great man and a good man, in the best sense of either word. Surely the man, with the experience of many years stored up in his brain, who was a wise and sagacious counsellor, energetic by nature, foresighted and farsighted, prudently ready even in the sudden emergencies of the actual battle, would not lose either the possession of, or the power of using, such faculties as these, when able at last to lay aside the sword, and, if not de facto transform it into a reaping-hook, yet still attend to the wants, necessities, emergencies of his vast possessions, and of those who dragged on a miserable, uncared-for, almost midnight-dark existence upon them. I cannot bring myself to believe that Espec “cared for none of these things ;” that he was blind alike to the exigencies and the possibilities of the case—the exigencies taking being and form in the necessity for the presence and operation of some purifying, enlightening, humanising energy in those wilds of Yorkshire ; the possibilities in active leaven for good already experimentally known to be obtainable by means of a monastic settlement in the district needing to be influenced for the better and higher. Let us not forget that there lay a motive, an object, a purpose, a principle at the very foot of the great movement of which the founding and raising of religious houses at the time we have to think of was but only an outward token or symbol.<sup>1</sup> No doubt it

<sup>1</sup> Let me here ask attention to the following sentences, which were not seen by me, and, indeed, I believe were not published, until several months after the above paragraphs had been written, and which, while (as perhaps might have been anticipated) ignoring the religious principle, yet in all other respects more than indorse the view taken in the text. They are from Mrs. Green's Henry the Second, pp. 39, 40-43. . . . "The restoration of outward order"—by the young king, that is—"had not been difficult. . . . But the new ruler of England had to begin his work of administration not only amid the temporary difficulties of a general disorganisation, but amid the more permanent difficulties of a time of transition, when society was seeking to order itself anew in its passage from the mediæval to the modern world. . . . We see everywhere, in fact, signs of the great contest which in one form or another runs through the whole of the twelfth century, and gives its main interest in our eyes to the English history of the time—the struggle between the iron organisation of mediæval feudalism and those nascent forces of modern civilisation which were fated in the end to shatter and supersede it. . . .

It is still plain that even through the terrible years of Stephen's reign England had its share in the universal movement by which the squalor and misery of the Middle Ages were giving place to a larger activity and a better order of things. A class unknown before was fast growing into power—the middle class of burghers and traders. . . . Merchant and cultivator and wool-grower found better work ready to their hand than fighting, and the appearance of mercenary soldiers marked everywhere the development of peaceful industries. Amid all the confusion of civil war the industrial activities of the country had developed with a bewildering rapidity ; while knights and barons led their foreign hirelings to mutual slaughter, monks and canons were raising their religious houses in all the waste places of the land, and silently laying the foundations of English enterprise and English commerce. To the great body of the Benedictines and the Cluniacs were added in the middle of the twelfth century the Cistercians, who founded their houses among the desolate moorlands of Yorkshire, in solitary places which had known no inhabitants since the Conqueror's ravages, or among the swamps of Lincolnshire. A hun-is easy to speak of the "various and conflicting motives that originated the foundation of religious houses," and to suggest "conscience-stricken pangs that were comfortably to be stifled by the bestowal of a superfluity which cost the giver nothing," the "death-bed concessions that were to charter a seat in heaven by a foregone inheritance in earth,"<sup>1</sup> "the operation of domestic grief on superstition," and the like: but the question really is whether such suggestion is very much better than a species of clap-trap. I prefer the tone and spirit of the man who, although he is not an enthusiastic apostle of the religion of Christ, yet recognises in the life of Bernard of Clarevallis "the greatness of the place he dred and fifteen monasteries were built during the nineteen years of Stephen's reign, more than had been founded in the whole previous century; a hundred and thirteen were added to these during the reign of Henry. In half-a-century sixty-four religious houses were built in Yorkshire and Lincolnshire alone. Monastery and priory . . . towered above the wretched mud-hovels in which the whole of the population below the class of barons crowded. . . . We may gain some faint idea of the amazing stir and industry which the founding of these monasteries implied, by following in our modern farms and pasture-lands the traces which may even now be seen of the toil of these great preachers of labour. The whole water-supply of a countryside for miles round was gathered up by vast drainage works; stagnant pools were transformed into running waters closed in by embankments, which still serve as ditches to the modern farmer; swamps were reclaimed that are only now preserved for cultivation by maintaining the dykes and channels first cut by mediæval monks; mills rose on the banks of the newly-created streams; roads were made by which the corn of the surrounding villages might be carried to the central mill, and the produce of the land brought to the central storehouse. The new settlers showed a measureless cunning and industry in reclaiming soil hitherto worthless." As the soberly arrived-at conclusions of one of the most competent historical inquirers of our day, all this is surely well worthy of attention. But, may we not ask, were the results thus stated alike unintended and unanticipated both by founder and donor, and scarcely even forecasted by the monkish settlers themselves? For something approaching to that would be the conclusion we should be forced upon if we accept the customary claptrap sentimentalism about the prevailing motives, as assumed, of the great originators of many or most of our most famous religious houses.

holds in the history of civilisation," and who, besides reminding us that his (Bernard's) "monastery was built and established, that its influence spread, that industry and cultivation prospered through its example, that its abbot was the symbol of order and the source of protection and of comfort for the distressed," adds this expressive sentence:—"Civilisation, moral and material, radiated from it through that dark tract as from a centre of light and warmth,"<sup>1</sup> and I no more doubt that the monks of Clairvaux, invited by Walter Espec to found and build up the House of Rievalles, and directed by the saintly Bernard, were so invited and directed with those selfsame ends and objects and purposes in view as Bernard's own at Clairvaux, than I doubt the existence of the wonderful proof of their energy, wisdom, systematised purpose, and performance which appeals to our higher and better judgment in the stately ruin of their great work, raised, as it was, in the fulfilment of one part only of their magnificent intention and aim.

On the whole, then, while discrediting, so far as my own personal convictions and persuasions go, the story, legend, or myth touching Walter Espec's supposed son, his death, and the manner of it, and its assumed influence on the father's mind and action, I see a far more than merely equivalent or countervailing motive and intent in purposes and objects which could not but have been suggested in St. Bernard's times, and which we do our thoughtfulness and candour but little credit in not assuming to have been present and potential in such a mind as that of Aelred's Walter Espec must have been.<sup>1</sup>

Perhaps before proceeding to deal with the details of the Foundation of Rievaulx, it may be expedient to direct attention to a matter which, though at first sight it may not appear to belong to a notice of the Cistercian establishment which is our especial topic, is yet found to be so much entangled with the early history of that house that it is impossible to treat of the one without adverting to the other. What I mean is the early relations of Rievaulx with Kirkham, the negotiations which went on between the two houses—originating, it may be, though I hardly think so, in the practically inconvenient propinquity of the several establishments and their possessions—and the conditional agreement to remove from the original site entered into by the elder of the sister foundations. As we have seen, Dr. Whitaker, with a comprehensive and accommodating oblivion of the facts as they were, as well as of the facts that still are, writes of the cession as made valid and effective, and the removal as an accomplished fact; while in other quarters a degree of misapprehension, and misapprehension of a kind which it is hard to comprehend, exists, and which a priori we should

<sup>1</sup> In writing thus, I do not wish to be understood as intending to ignore the possible existence in the minds of many founders of, and donors to, Religious Houses, of such feelings and motives as remorse, repentance, sorrow, or what we call superstition, or the like, or their potentiality in instigating, in some cases, the grant or the donation. Only I am unable to see in such Foundations as Rie-vaulx, Kirkham, Fountains, Byland, and the scores of others like, only the desultory action of inferior motives, alike undirected by purpose and foresight, and uninfluenced by any of the worthier aspirations which in other efforts of self-denial, energy, and resolute perseverance—such as building a hospital, or forwarding Missionary enterprise—we are ready enough to allow for.

hardly have anticipated. Thus, in Dodsworth, No. ix. fo. 161, is copy of the document which finds a place twice in the Cartularium, and is printed hereafter as No. ccxvi., with the heading—"Ex chartulario Rievallis in Com. Ebor. in Bibliotheca Cott. remanente, Id. Jun., 1622. Secunda fundatio de Kirkham. Transcriptum Foundationis Prioratus de Kirkham." The superscription by that eminent collector, "Secunda fundatio," is sufficient to show what was the thought present in his mind, however far mistaken he was even as to the relative date of the record he was engaged with ; while more recently a paper on Kirkham Priory has been republished, of which I can only think that had its able and most painstaking author had the opportunity of revising it, with the added knowledge and investigation of the subsequent years of his diligent life, it would have been recast as to the greater part of its historical matter. But I would not for a moment have it understood that, because I find myself unable to accept some of Mr. Walbran's conclusions touching this "indenture or agreement between the monks of Rivaux and the canons of Kirkham," or even in some instances to indorse his statement of facts, it is my wish or my purpose to derogate from his well-earned reputation for careful and intelligent research, or undervalue the extent and the results of his unexampled diligence and devotion. Any thought or intention of that kind would be put to silence and to shame at once, by the merest reference to the singularly full, instructive, and interesting volume of Memorials of Fountains, for which the Surtees Society is indebted to his brain and his pen.

Without counting the duplicate just now referred to, there are in the Rievaulx Chartulary itself five principal documents connected with Kirkham. There are the two Fundationes, the indenture or agreement, and two shorter pieces headed "Carta de Kirkeham de decimis," and "Carta de Kirkaham secunda;"<sup>1</sup> and it is from these documents that such inductions must be made as are reasonably possible.

In the first place, I would remark that neither of the documents ticketed with the label "Fundatio" can in any true sense be regarded as the original foundation deed at all.<sup>2</sup> For although they differ in date, and perhaps by from five to seven, or even eight years, yet the earlier of the two postdates the foundation of Rievaulx. For in the said earlier of the two Fundatio documents there stands this decisive sentence:—"Et pro decima quinque carucatarum de Tillestona, et pro decima quatuor carucatarum de Grif, et pro omnibus quæ Canonicis pertinebant, quæ modo habent Abbas et monachi Rievallenses, donavi eis meum purprestum de Kircham, et domos meas, et molendinum, et prata mea,

<sup>2</sup> It may be remarked that in the Cartularium itself greater reticence or caution in the description of the deeds mentioned is very observable. Thus the first of the two copies (No. CCXVI.) of what is labelled by Dods-worth as "Secunda fundatio de Kirkham," is simply headed with "Transcriptum cartæ de Kircham," while the indenture or agreement (No. CXLIX.) is noted as "Cyro-graphum inter nos et Kirkeham." What is in reality the final settlement of endowment by Walter Espec is derived from Dods-worth (ix. fo. 157), and is headed "Fundatio Monasterii de Kirkham in Com. Eboracensi," but whether that heading is a part of the document itself, or merely a title prefixed by the copyist, there is no means of deciding, any more than there is of determining from what source the said copyist obtained it.

et omnia quæ habui inter boscum et aquam, et piscationem de aqua de Kircham et de Husum.”<sup>1</sup> If, then, we accept the usually received and accredited dates of the several foundations of the one house and the other—namely, 1122 for that of Kirkham, and 1131, 1132, or 1133<sup>2</sup> for that of Rievaulx—and, so far as appears, there is no valid reason, if any at all, alleged for rejecting them, it is absolutely clear that this so-called Foundation Charter is from ten to twelve or fourteen years, at the least, later than the actual foundation of the Priory itself.

But it will be well to show that the allegation, that the charter under special notice is the later of the two, does not rest upon a mere ipse dixit. There is no question, I think, that at the dissolution the Priory of Kirkham was de facto owner of Kirkham in its entirety, that the whole township<sup>3</sup> of that name was in the hands of the monastery. In No. ccxvi., however, Walter Espec grants as follows:—“Ecclesiam de Kircham, cum una carucata terræ, et omnibus eidem ecclesiæ pertinentibus; . . . et in Kircham viginti quatuor acras terræ quæ sunt inter boscum et aquam de Derewenta, et meum novum gardinum, et mansuram quam Radulfus Presbyter ibi habuit. Etiam proprii porci canonicorum ibunt in boscum meum de Kircham

<sup>1</sup> I have quoted this in full, because there are other things in the passage besides the means it gives us of fixing the date of the charter as absolutely later than the foundation of Rievaulx, and which will have to be thought of in the sequel.

in question, and possibly an explanation of the apparent discrepancy may be found when we come to deal more specially with that particular question.

sine pannagio, cum suo nutrimento; et segetem suam ad molendinum meum molent sine molitura, et decimam denariorum habebunt de firma molendini.” I have been precise in quoting the whole passage that we may be the better enabled to compare it with the countervailing extract from No. CCCXLVII., or what I have spoken of above as the second and final Endowment Charter. What we find there is as is here given: “Sciatis nos concessisse et dedisse . . . totum manerium de Kirkham, in bosco et plano, in terris et aquis, in pratis et pascuis, in piscinis et molendinis, et omnibus eidem loco pertinentibus, et ecclesiam parochialem de Kirkham, una cum carucata terræ, et omnibus eidem ecclesiæ pertinentibus.” The very merest, most superficial inspection—comparison or contrast is hardly called for—of these extracts from these two charters is abundantly sufficient to show not only that one of them is later than the other, but that, as regards Kirkham, the second of the two is the latest and the final one. But we may go a step further yet. The first of the two charters dates itself, as we have seen, subsequently to 1131, perhaps even after 1133; but the second, as addressed to Archbishop Thurstan and Bishop Geoffrey of Durham, who were contemporaries in their several dignities only from 1133 to 1140, must take date within that interval of six or seven years, and probably towards the latter limit of it.

At this stage it may not be out of place to note a little in detail the Yorkshire part of the endowment of Kirkham as given in this second or final charter. In the first place, we note the full grant of the Kirkham manerium, as well as the church or benefice with its endowment-carucate of land and other rights. Then the church of Helmsley with its church-carucate and three tofts. Next the churches of Kirkby Grindalyth and Garton, each with its carucate, and the latter with a specified campus, or large open field besides. Yet further, the entire vill of Westow, with seven carucates of land there; the whole vill of Whitwell with nine carucates of land there; and in Thixendale eight carucates of land, besides tithes of annual money-payments made to Espec, of all his manors, and especially of the vill and mill of Howsham, with the right of fishery in the Derwent, his York houses and the tithes of his Linton demesne. Now if we check off these various items of endowment one after another, comparing them with those specified in the earlier Fundatio, and allowing for the divergency, already noticed, between the Kirkham grants in the one case and in the other, we find that the several grants at Helmsley, Kirkby Grindalyth, Garton, Westow, and Whitwell are entirely coincident, and that the variation as to Thixendale is marked by the use, in the earlier deed, of the sentence “et in Sextendale quatuor carucatas terræ, et, post decessum meum, alias quatuor carucatas quas habeo in manu mea, de octo quæ sunt in eadem villa, nisi in vita mea eis dederò; et hoc cum toto instauramento quod ibi erit in illa die,” in place of “et in Sextendala octo carucatas terræ, cum omnibus eidem terræ pertinentibus” in the later. We find the same total number of carucates stated in either case, four of them bestowed in the first instance, and with a prospective possibility of grant of the other four during the Grantor's lifetime, failing which, a certainty after his death. In the second or final deed the four previously reserved carucates are seen to have been bestowed, and by the still living Grantor of the first charter.

We are now in a position to notice, and with some attentive scrutiny, the cyrograph or agreement between the Abbey and the Priory. And, in the first place, I would draw attention to the terms employed in speaking of what the Priory was to cede at Thixendale. The words are "et quatuor carucatas terræ in Sextendala quas advocatus noster adhuc tenet in manu sua." This last expression is entirely decisive as to the relative date of the document in question. Mr. Walbran writes, "There is no date to this very singular document, but some internal evidence appears to refer it to an early period in the thirteenth century," while he also defines "advocatus noster" as the "common patron of the two houses, Lord de Ros, who, some people probably suspected, looked upon sweet Kirkham's lawn as a kind of Naboth's vineyard from his dreary moorland castle at Helmsley."

No one, I think, who takes the trouble to collate the passage just cited from the cyrograph of exchange with the contrasted extracts from the two Fundationes will be disposed to indorse Mr. Walbran's views, either as to the identity of the common patron, his motive, or the date of the "singular document" itself. No one save Walter Espec himself can fill the character of "advocatus noster" under the circumstances alleged, and the date of the deed must not only lie within his lifetime, but it must, by however short a period, antedate that of the drawing and ratifying of the later deed of endowment, and that, as we have seen, could not be later than 1139.

The deed is well described by Mr. Walbran as a "singular document." That an exchange in a certain sense—though not with the Convent of Rievaulx—and a cession in a very real sense, and a cession to Rievaulx withal, were not only contemplated, but actually, albeit conditionally, arranged, is patent to the most desultory inquirer. Why or wherefore, it is not easy by any process of reading between the lines to conjecture, apart from the motives avowed and put in the forefront of the agreement, namely, "for the love of God and the salvation of our souls, and for the establishing of our mutual fellowship, for peace' sake and to the honour of our Prior, and at the wish and desire of our patron (advocati nostri)."

Probably the motives expressed in this last clause will be held amply sufficient to illustrate, if not explain, the practical "why and because" of the entire transaction. What Espec's motive or object may have been is another, and a deeper, question. It may have been that he saw danger of conflicting interests and jarring feelings, objects, and communications; but I cannot think that that could have been a very potential factor in the formation of the wish or the purpose to facilitate the removal of the earlier foundation. It is true, there were what may be spoken of as rival interests, perhaps even clashing interests, in the Helmsley locale, and the property of the two Houses in Bilsdale marched, and there were serious eventual differences there ; but the distance between the Abbey and the Priory was considerable—at least four times that which lay between Byland and Rievaulx, and if, with only the Rye between the one and the other, these two found a modus vivendi in peace and general harmony—as it is evident they did upon the whole—it seems strange that it should have been deemed impossible, or even unlikely, that it should be so likewise between the two foundations of the same patron. Not that considerations of the supposed kind may not have weighed ; but the more likely conclusion is that they could hardly have been the chief or the most influential of the reasonings and decisions which led to the adoption of the contemplated measure.

But there is another motive or consideration enumerated in the extract from the preamble to the cyrograph which was just now cited, and which, while associated with the words “pro pace,” is of such a nature, especially when collated with other like words in the body of the document, as to make an evident demand on our attention. What I refer to is the clause “pro honore Prioris nostri” ; and the other clauses which should be collated with it are these : “Et Prior noster et sui auxiliares ædificabunt nobis Ecclesiam, Capitulum,” etc., and “Hoc quoque sciendum est, quod nec a loco nostro volumus discedere, nec Priorem nostrum amittere, donec ea quæ inter nos constituta sunt ad debitum finem producta fuerunt.” It will be observed not only that the Prior is mentioned three several times, but that he is mentioned in a way to direct special observation upon him. The proposed cession was to redound to his honour; he was not only a party consenting to and furthering the matter in hand, but he was not alone in what was contemplated and would have to be undertaken; he had helpers ("auxilarii") who were willing and able to undertake the task—no light one surely—of building a new church of adequate materials and of adequate dimensions, with Chapter-house, Infirmary, Frater, of the same material, besides all the necessary offices for a complete conventual establishment in less durable style; who, besides this, were to be at the trouble and cost of all the necessary charters and confirmations of what they retained, and of what they were to get in lieu of what they resigned, and who were even to approach the Apostolical chair and obtain the necessary Papal sanction to the whole transaction. And, eminent above all the rest, there is the final clause: "Nor will we part with our honoured and influential Prior until all these stipulations have been fulfilled to the letter."

Surely this is a consideration that should not be lightly passed by, or put on one side altogether. To me it suggests that here may possibly be contained the pith of the matter. We may not be able to pierce through all its surroundings of mystery or uncertainty, and to penetrate unfalteringly to it; but at all events we ought not to leave it without some attempt to obtain any possible enlightenment. And the first, because the most natural, question, would seem to be, Who was the Prior at the time?

If we refer to Burton's Monasticon, or to Dugdale either, or to Tanner, or any other such like authority, we find a singular meagreness of detail in the matter we are desiring to obtain information about. Take Burton, for instance: "1122. 1. William, rector of Garton, uncle to Walt. Espec, the founder, was the first prior. 2. Between A.D. 1190 . . . William occurs. 3. About 1195 and 1199 Drogo occurs. 4. Andreas occurs." Fortunately the present Chartulary enables us to supplement this unsatisfactory array, at all events as far as follows:—1. William, 1122. 2.<sup>1</sup> O. or D.<sup>2</sup> before 1135. 3. Wallevus; before 1140, and, I conclude, after 1145.<sup>3</sup> 4. Drogo.<sup>4</sup> 5. William de Muscamp, between 1190 and 1227.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>1</sup> By the insertion of these numerals, it must not be understood that it is intended to assert that the Priors, before whose names they are set, actually occurred in that precise order; but only that they occur in this relative order, and that one or more names of early Priors may still be wanting. I am, for instance, uncertain if this Prior of doubtful name was in reality the second prior. He may have been the third. If Prior William of Garton only lived a year or two after his elevation to the Priorate (as is believed), the present Prior may well have been the third in succession.

<sup>2</sup> See No. CCXXXIV. When engaged with the transcription of the contents of the Cartularium in the British Museum, I read this initial as O. It did not seem to be perfectly clear that it was O, but I did think it was more likely to be O than any other letter. In Dodsworth's transcript (ix. 162<sup>b</sup>.) the initial is written D. The date given in the text is so given because the document is addressed to King Henry I. (ob. 1135), and Archbishop Thurstan.

ham, more than once referred to above, writes: "In 1139, on the feast of St. Hilary, the Earl of Albemarle, who has been styled "præclarus comes et eximius monasteriorum fundator," founded the Priory of Thornton in Lincolnshire; and in the following year, and on the same feast, Waltheof—his kinsman, and Prior of Kirkham—went to Thornton, taking with him twelve Canons of Kirkham, whom he established in the new monastery, constituting one of them, named Richard, the first Prior." Mr. Walbran does not quote his authority: but there is no doubt on the subject. As to the second of the two dates, as the charter cited mentions the Rievaulx part of Bilsdale as now in the possession of the Convent, and as there is no reason to discredit the statement as Espec's grant of Bilsdale, and the date of it, made in No. CCCLXVIII., we may regard the said date as assured.

<sup>4</sup> There is ample space for Burton's Prior Drogo here. But so far, I have met with no confirmation of such a position in the list. No doubt he was Prior, but when is uncertain.

The name of the Prior who stands third in the list thus supplied of course answers the question, Who was the Prior at the time? and Wallevus (or Waldevus) is but another and Latinised form of Waltheof, the name of one who was kinsman to the earl of Albemarle<sup>1</sup> as well as prior of Kirkham. And as such he stands forth a man honourable by consanguinity, able besides—and for the selfsame reason—to command the aid of competent and important auxiliaries in any “church-extension” work—as it was understood then—well and wisely organised, as it was sure to be in such hands.

And now the question arises, Was this scheme, of the reality as well as the nature of which we are assured by this cyrograph or agreement of cession between the two Houses of Rievaulx and Kirkham, nullified or frustrated by the action of Prior Waltheof in taking the part he did in heading<sup>2</sup> the colony of canons who went to occupy the new Priory at Thornton?

This is an inquiry which would be less complicated, and involved in less obscurity, if we had clearer and more definite information as to the circumstances of the arrangement between the monks of Rievaulx and the canons of Kirkham; if we knew exactly not only what will be seen in several places among those of the Testes to charters of that period. He is, no doubt, the William to whose name is prefixed the number 2 in Burton's list, with the incomplete “Betwixt 1190 ————.”

<sup>2</sup> I use the word “heading” advisedly. The statement is that Prior Waltheof took with him “twelve canons of Kirkham.” But twelve canons, without himself, on such a mission, would have been an imperfect number. The inference, therefore, certainly is, that on leaving Kirkham he purposed becoming himself the first head of Thornton, and that his making Richard the first Prior simply implies that he changed his mind and returned to Kirkham, where, we have no reason to doubt, he remained Prior for several years, six or seven at least.

the latter agreed to cede, but what they were to receive as its equivalent. But that is what we do not know, and the endeavour to ascertain is beset with difficulties, uncertainties, and doubts. As to what the canons stipulated to give and grant to the monks, there is no uncertainty. They were to surrender Kirkham with their church and buildings, together with their gardens, orchards and mill, and everything else situate and being there, except one barn, which they meant to carry away with them. They were also to give up Whitwell (containing nine carucates according to the documents previously under notice), Westow (seven carucates), and the four Thixendale carucates, not those which they already had in actual possession, but those which, although promised to them as to be theirs eventually, were as yet in Walter Espec's own hands. Deducting these four carucates, the number to be resigned was sixteen, exclusively of the Kirkham lands, estimated in Domesday as amounting to a total of eight carucates. The actual extent of the surrender, then, in carucates, is represented by the number 24. What they were to receive in compensation was the whole of Linton and Hwersletorp, with all things to the said vills appertaining, quit and free from all services whatsoever.

This all seems clear and simple enough until we begin to inquire, not only where and what this Linton is, but, what is more indefinite and obscure still, what and where Hwersletorp was. It is true, Mr. Walbran makes no difficulty over the matter, for he simply transliterates — if I may so apply the word — Hwersletorp into Weaverthorp. But that identification is not only gratuitous, it is discredited by the facts of the case. For Weaverthorpe, in the Domesday spelling Wifretorp, comprising eighteen carucates, was at the time of the survey among the possessions of the Archbishop of York, and there are divers references to it as still belonging to his fee two hundred years afterwards, in the Kirkby's Inquest volume. Walter Espec could not grant what belonged to the Archbishop. And there is not the slightest reason for supposing even that Espec was subinfeuded to the Archbishop: in which case, moreover, he could not have alienated the Archbishop's fee, or any part of it, save, of course, with the Archbishop's acquiescence.

It seems sufficiently clear, then, that Weaverthorpe is not the place intended to be designated by Hwersletorp. Neither is the matter simplified when we turn to Linton and try to ascertain what place is meant under that designation. So far as I am aware, there are but four places in Yorkshire bearing that name, two in the West Riding, one in the East, and one in the North. The two West Riding Lintons, Linton in Staincliffe, and Linton in Claro, seem both to be out of the question, while the Linton in the parish of Winteringham, East Riding, is altogether too insignificant, amounting to but one farm at the present day. The other, or Linton on Ouse, besides other claims on our attention, has this, that at the date of the "Knight's Fees" and "Nomina Villarum," it was part of the fee of Ros of Helmesley. Still, although there are other reasons for thinking it more than possible that this Linton came into the hands of Walter Espec (though through what channel or means cannot be so much as surmised), the evidence that the Linton of our cyrograph lay here is so very unsufficing, that, with the identity of Hwersletorp itself, it must be left an open question. All that can be further said about the latter place is that the Domesday spelling of what is now Wilsthorpe, namely, Wiulestorp, Wiflestorp, comes nearer to the name as given in the cyrograph than any other known Yorkshire name-form.

But scanty and indistinct as is our knowledge—even if it can be called knowledge at all—of what and where Hwersletorp and Linton were, all that such want or imperfection of knowledge amounts to is the disappointment of our curiosity as to what it was that Kirkham was to have received in lieu of that which she consented to forego under given circumstances. It does not affect the fact that the surrender was contemplated, was formulated, was actually agreed to by both, or rather by all, the contracting parties ; and, keeping this steadily in view, it is seen clearly enough that there are other considerations yet to be entertained, and other speculations to claim a measure of thoughtful attention and careful discussion. And in order to lead on to something of this kind, I would ask attention to the final clause of the cyrograph of agreement. It is this : “Sciendum quoque quod omnes canonici et fratres de Kirkeham qui in præsentī vivunt, tantum habebunt in Capitulo et Ordine Cisterciensi quantum ejusdem Ordinis monachi.” What is the meaning, what the application of this clause ? It is not the less important, and surely it is not the less significant, because Mr. Walbran and other writers who advert to the mystery involving the motives which led to the formation of this plan of surrender on the part of Kirkham, and to the arrangement of the terms on which it was to be carried into effect, have passed it by entirely without notice. All the canons and brethren of Kirkham were to have—of course after the arrangement agreed upon had taken effect—the same status in Chapter and in the Cistercian Order, as any monk whatever belonging to the said Order. But the canons of Kirkham were Augustinians. How could they come to have any standing at all either in Cistercian Chapter or Cistercian Order, without joining the Order? And what is the explanation of the fact that some of the said canons and brethren were willing to have it so—for it is utterly apparent that such willingness existed, or no such clause as this final one could have been imagined, and much more formulated.

Now here I would draw attention to the circumstance that this cyrograph does not begin like the deeds, Nos. ccxxxiv. and ccxxxv.: “O. Prior et totus Conventus . . . de Kirkaham”; or, “Wallevus, Prior, et Capitulum Ecclesiæ Kirkhamensis,” but with “Hæc sunt illa quæ concessimus . . . monachis de Rievallē”; and further, that the party conceding, the “We” of the “concessimus,” are a party apart from the Prior; for towards the end of the document we find them—these same “We”—in set terms declaring not only that they will not remove from Kirkham, but that they will not part with their Prior until all the conditions stated shall have been fully complied with and satisfied in all points: “Non volumus amittere Priorem nostrum.”

There seems to me to be but one solution to the question raised by this consideration, but one explanation of the views and intentions so distinctly expressed in the terms we are considering, and that solution, that explanation depend on the existence of two variant parties in the Convent. In other words, this contemplated arrangement found its origin in no question of "peace" between Rievaulx and Kirkham, but in a question of peace within the Priory itself. The Prior and some of the canons were on one side, the rest of the canons and brethren were on the other. These latter were willing to conform to the Cistercian Order, and to become incorporated in it as members, the canons among them as monks. The other party, and, as it would seem, with the Prior at its head, were not so willing.<sup>1</sup>

All this seems fairly plain sailing. But may we not advance a step further, and call in the help of a surmise as to what might have been an additional feature of the case? Admitting that there were two parties in the Convent, and that one of them evidenced a willingness, or more than a willingness, to join the Cistercian Order,

<sup>1</sup> This is a conclusion which apparently commends itself as perfectly logical, and one that flows, as of necessity, from the facts alleged. And yet it is by no means without its difficulties. For not only is it known that at a date some few years subsequent to that of the matters now under notice the Prior's proclivities were distinctly towards the Cistercian Order, but it is alleged (although most mistakenly, as will be evident in the sequel) that he became not only a member of the Order, but even Abbot of Rievaulx and of Melrose successively. Still there can be no doubt that, at the probable date of this convention or agreement, he was still an Augustinian, and more than that, that he was practically, in all but the material endowment and construction of the Convent, the founder and practical originator of the Thornton establishment, which also was Augustinian. Up to 1140, then, we cannot look upon Prior Waltheof as belonging to that section of the Kirkham community which, it is evident, looked upon adhesion to the Cistercian Order as desirable.

was it possible to call in the mediation of "Advocatus noster," and was it not possible that he, when he found he could not heal the breach, might take the next best step in his power, and, in conjunction with Prior Waltheof and the influential friends and allies of the latter, countenance, further, and support an agreement, in virtue of which peace might be restored to the Convent by the removal of one of the dissentient bodies? And this is an hypothesis which may possibly explain the departure taken by Prior Waltheof, and the fact that the Priory of Kirkham remained in its old place and continued to be an Augustinian Priory as well. It is quite possible that some among the body might join the Cistercian Order, but the inference from all we know, and can legitimately infer, is that peace was restored to the Convent, and it was enabled to persevere in the old tracks.<sup>1</sup>

One consideration must have presented itself to the mind, and perhaps more than once, during the course of the preceding discussion—I mean that, although both of the charters, which we have had to notice more or less in detail, are spoken of or described as Charters of Foundation—it is essentially necessary to bear in mind that such a description must be considerably qualified before it becomes applicable to such documents as they in reality are. Our conclusions as to their several dates are such that they can neither be qualified nor gainsaid. It is indisputable that the earlier of the two postdates

<sup>1</sup> It must not be forgotten, in making or accepting this suggestion, that Walter Espec, in the issue, himself manifested a decided leaning to the Cistercian Order. When he retired from the world it was to the Cistercian Cloister and not to the Augustinian. The supposition that he might, in his heart, favour the supposed Cistercian movement in the Priory is quite within the range of reason and probability.

the foundation of Rievaulx, and that is equivalent to saying that its date is at least ten years—and it might easily be eleven or twelve years—subsequent to the actual or initial “foundation” of the Priory. Not that this is a very important matter in itself, or that it has any great significance in any way. The probability is that, had we the means of exact information, this might prove to be the normal condition in the foundation of many, if not most, of our early Religious Houses. Certainly it was with Rievaulx. On careful and comparative examination and analysis it will appear that there is ample reason for concluding that the so-called Foundation Charter cannot date earlier than 1145, and that most likely its actual date must be assigned to that year, or very shortly after, at the latest. But, as will be immediately called to mind, the Abbey was technically “founded,” in one sense, as early as 1131, and in a fuller sense in 1132.

What I specially refer to is as follows. There is a certain document printed by Dugdale as Num. v., among the documents connected with the Abbey of Rievaulx, and given in the present volume as No. ccclxviii., and headed as “Ex Registro Abbatiae de Rievaulx in Bibl. Cott. sub effigie Julii D. I., fo. 15a, A.D. M c° tricesimo primo.” There seems to be no reason for impugning either the authenticity or the accuracy of this record. On the contrary, the general tenor and bearing of the earlier charters in the collection, with the occasional and casual coincidences and suggestions met with in a careful consideration and analysis of their contents, all lead distinctly on to a general confirmation of the statements conveyed in the record referred to. And the first statement in it is this: "In principio datæ sunt ix carucatæ terræ B. Bernardo, Abbati Clarevallensi, scil., Grif et Tillestona, ad construendam ibi Abbatiam, A.D. mcxxxi." The terms are precise: at the outset so much was given, and no more—Griff and Tilston only. And then the next paragraph but one adds: "A.D. mcxlv. dedit nobis Walterus Espec Bildesdale, cum pertinenciis suis." . . . The grant of Bildsdale then was made fourteen years later than that of Griff and Tilston; and, consequently, inasmuch as Walter Espec's charter, described as the Foundation Charter, is as carefully and definitely precise in delineating the boundaries of north-east Bildsdale as it is in marking out those of Griff and Tilston, there can be no question that as a formal and authoritative conveyance of the former, as well as of the latter, it must, at the most, be contemporaneous with the grant of Bildsdale in 1145.

I am quite aware that in writing thus I am writing what will be possibly looked upon as heresy by some, and that the view that the "charter of endowment was placed in the hands of the Abbot William" in "the year 1131," is the view that ought to prevail. But let us take the whole paragraph to which reference is made in these extracts, and see if no mode of reconciling the apparently discordant or conflicting views presents itself. "It would appear probable," says Mr. Walbran, Memorials of Fountains, Preface, p. xxiv, "that the mission sent by St. Bernard from Clairvaux was directed immediately into Yorkshire. Turstin was personally acquainted with St. Bernard, and may have suggested the mission. Certain it is that when they arrived there he effectually promoted their object. Espec was still undivorced from his sorrow, and when Turstin counselled him to befriend them, he settled them on the banks of the Rie, not far from his castle of Helmsley, where Rievaulx now stands in hallowed beauty. The King not only sanctioned but advised the application of the gift, and Pope Innocent confirmed the whole proceeding by his pontifical authority. When the charter of endowment was placed in the hands of the Abbot William, there were present Thomas, Provost of Beverley, whom St. Bernard anxiously wished to draw into the Order; Eustace Fitz John,<sup>1</sup> of Knaresborough Castle, who became the founder of the Priors of Malton, Watton, and Alnwick; five brethren of the Priory of Wartre;<sup>2</sup> but none of the parochial clergy, unless comprehended among three Chaplains who are named.<sup>3</sup> The solemn importance of the occasion is, however, indicated by a recital, in that instrument, of the assent of several members of the founder's family interested in his estate, and of the advice of eleven of his sub-infeudatories, who, with many of his friends and

<sup>2</sup> I think this is open to question. At least, if that is the meaning of the terms employed, it is an unusual application of the terms, and one which did not suggest itself to me until I read the passage here extracted. The terms are "Gaufrido, Clerico (not Canonico) de Wartra, Ivone, Pagano, Hugone, Willelmo, Clemente fratribus ejus:" Geoffrey's brothers, not "brethren of Wartre," as it seems to me.

<sup>3</sup> Ernald, Priest of Beverley, is named next after Provost Thomas; and the three chaplains specified are the chaplain of Eustace Fitz John (already noted), Godfrey, chaplain to Henry de Munford, and Walter Espec's own chaplain, Robert, of whom subsequent mention is more than once made.

neighbours, were then assembled. The endowment consisted of nine carucates, or about a thousand acres of land, and the abbey was founded in the year 1131."

Before offering any comment on any part or particular of this extract, I would desire to draw attention to the circumstances: first, that at the outset the grantor states that by the permission (concessu) of the reigning king, and by the advice of his wife, he gives and grants in legal and formal possession (in manu Willelmi Abbatis) to the Abbot and monks there serving God, such and such lands, etc.; second, that at the very end of the deed is appended the following historical statement:—"Hanc Abbatiam Rievallensem fundavi ego, Walterus Espec, consilio et concessu Turstini, Archiepiscopi Ebor., concessu etiam et consilio Henrici, Regis Anglorum, Domino Papa Innocentio auctoritate Apostolica hæc omnia confirmante."

To me it appears that this somewhat unusual appendix to a charter of the nature of the present one receives no small amount of explanatory illustration if considered as an historical recollection of the circumstances under which the Abbey had been in the first instance set on foot and de facto founded, and that, as viewed in this light, it adds a kind of formal and solemn sanction to all that had been put forward in the earlier part of the deed. It seems to say: "I took the step of founding this Abbey years ago by the advice of the great and good Archbishop Thurstan, and with the full assent and advice of my King, the Pope himself encouraging and supporting me, and now I confirm and establish all that I did then, adding to and enlarging the means for good I devoted to the purpose at the outset."<sup>1</sup>

It will have, no doubt, been observed that three successive years are named as the years of the foundation of Rievaulx Abbey, 1131, 1132, and 1133. The latter is the date quoted in the genealogy of Ros, which is found on the fourth parchment leaf in the Cottonian Cartularium (the substance of which is printed below in the Appendix), where the statement stands—"Walterus Especke, miles strenuus Conquestoris, tria fundavit monasteria, I. de Kirkham, A.D. 1122; II. de Rievall, 1133; III. de Wardon, 1136." As regards the other two years named, the following extract from the Hexham Book (S. S., p. 108) will serve as well as any other that can be adduced to bring the matter fairly before us—"Anno Mcxxxii., Walterus Espec, vir magnus et potens in conspectu regis et totius regni, monachos Cisterciensis Observantiæ, directos a Bernardo, Abbate Claræ-vallis, recepit et posuit in solitudine Blackhoumor, <sup>1</sup> It is quite true this view is not without its difficulties. The most apparent is the way in which King Henry is mentioned in the preamble. The obvious inference seems to be that both the King and his wife are living as well as consenting parties. Certainly it is stated that the latter survived her husband, but the King died in 1135, and in 1145 Stephen was king. But while it is quite competent to us to accept the "concessu Henrici Regis Anglorum" in its historical sense only, it must also be remembered that by taking it in the other sense we ignore the direct statement in the MSS. quoted to the effect that Bildesdale was given in 1145, and not before. These difficulties must be balanced. So far as the witnesses are concerned, while some of those named were certainly still living in 1145, I do not know of any who can be identified as having passed away. And although it was the last year of Abbot William's life, still he lived to the 4th nones of August in it, and there is something not unattractive, nor without its tinge of pathetic sentiment, in the thought that Espec's confirmation of his first grant, and further benefaction of so important a character as the grant of Bildesdale, was made to his old friend on the eve of his approaching departure to another and higher sphere of duty and service.

secus aquam Rie, a qua cœnobium eorum Rievallis dicitur. Cum quibus missus est Willelmus, primus Abbas eorum, vir consummatæ virtutis, et excellentis memoriæ apud posteros;" while to this mention of Rievaulx is subjoined in a note—"Rievaux was the earliest Cistercian house in the north of England, and Prior John of Hexham could not pass over the foundation of a monastery which was the mother of Melrose, and was presided over by the famous Aelred, who was a native of Hexham, a place which had good reason to remember him." And further, "Anno 1132, tertio nonas Martii, facta est Abbatia Sanctæ Mariæ de Rei-valle, die Sabbati," says the historian of Melrose (Chron. ed. Bann. Club, 69), "and this is the date usually given. The donation, however, which brought the monks to that place had been made in 1131, when L'Espece gave Grif et Tilestona to St. Bernard for the construction of an Abbey (Chart. de Rievaux, MSS. Cotton., Julius D.). The Chronicle of Sigebert correctly ascribes the beginning of Rievaux to this year (German. rerum Chronographi, ed. 1566, 138<sup>b</sup>)."

In these notes then we have the three years in question each brought under notice, and two of them in such clear and easy connection that the reasonableness of what is advanced cannot but recommend itself to our regard. Perhaps, too, there may be something in the sentences involving the naming of the later date, which suggests something in the way of question or inquiry. The description given of Espec is, to say the least, a little startling. "Miles strenuus Conquestoris." It supposes him to be a man past the first flush of youth, not to employ more forcible words, more than sixty years before the Battle of the Standard, at which Aelred describes him as achieving a memorable renown. It is an utter impossibility, on the face of it, and it effectually discredits the statement of the Genealogy. But when we try to pass beyond merely negative allegations, such as this, we do not find much to advance in addition to what is said by Aelred. Brave, able, foreseeing, prudent, wise, good, and eager to do good—we see that he was all this and more; but as to particulars of his parentage, up-bringing, training, service, or as to the way in which he became enfeoffed at all, and much more so largely enfeoffed, who was the donor, or to whom he was successor, only a few hints can be found of such a nature as to suggest that perhaps inquiry might be rewarded by something in the way of discovery or acquisition. We undoubtedly find him the occupant of large estates; but there is a something, so to speak, elusory, almost verging on the mysterious, in the very mention of these estates. He must, like the Brus, like more than one or two of the Barons named in connection with some or other of the grants recorded in the present Chartulary, have been lord of manors by the score. And yet when we try to realise the extent and the locale of these abounding lands and territories, we find ourselves baffled almost at the outset. We know that he held lands and lordships in Northumberland and in Bedfordshire, that Helmsley, Bilsdale, Kirkham, with Westow, Whitwell, Thixendale, Garton, and with those indefinitely localised places, Hwersletorp and Linton, were his; we infer, with a precision amounting to certainty, that Sproxton, Harum, Stonegrave (or at least parts of the vills so named), and the lands held by the Surdevals, Lenveisets, Luvels, and others, his "homines," mentioned in this charter of endowment, or, more casually, in other deeds, were certainly appendages of his great fief. But even in saying as much as this, elements of uncertainty are already introduced, and our only resource still left is to try and puzzle out painfully and doubtingly what may have belonged to him, inasmuch as we hear of it as a part of the possessions of the heirs of his sisters, which may possibly, perhaps sometimes probably, have come to them from their great ancestor Walter Espec.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> It would scarcely be expedient, and it is surely unnecessary to occupy space in a chapter of the present kind with an inquiry and investigation of the nature thus indicated. But it may not be altogether inadmissible to advert in a note to some of the results of a very brief and imperfect attempt of the kind in question. In as few words as can be conveniently employed, and inclusive of the number of carucates specified as extant in the two doubtful places, it may be stated that the extent of the fees in the possession of Walter Espec in the places in such parts of the county of Yorkshire as are immediately concerned by his grants, or by the subfees of his "men," or the direct inheritance of his descendants (limiting the period to the end of the thirteenth century), must have reached to 135 carucates at the least. And another statement that may be ventured is that, of this very considerable area, a very considerable proportion again had, at the time of the Survey, been in the hands of the King himself, or of his thanes, or, and most largely, the Earl of Mortain. Thus, in the vills of Sproxton and Griff the King held six carucates; in Tilston, Helmsley, and Harum the King and the Earl held between them fifteen carucates; in Kirkham, Thixendale, Howsham, Whitwell, Garton, Stonegrave, Pockley and Beadlam, the Earl had no less than forty-five carucates, while this enumeration does not include Westow, in dependencies of which the King held six carucates, if not eight, and Barthorpe in Acklam, where the Earl had six carucates more. And the importance of not omitting these places in such an enumeration is seen very distinctly from the following entry in Kirkby's Inquest, p. 71: "Robertus de Rōs tenet de rege in capite tria feoda militis in Husum, Wyuestou, Leuening, et Barkethorp." It may occur to some to recal to mind as a parallel case, that, as regards the first grant to Robert de Brus, made quite Constrained as I have felt myself by the circumstances of the case to speak with the caution or reserve qualifying the preceding paragraph, it is not without diffidence that I proceed to offer the following facts and considerations for a measure of attention. I have noticed in a brief note on page 16 that throughout the Museum ms. Cartularium the Founder's name is invariably written Espec, and without the prefixed L ; and I might have added that the same rule prevails in all the authentic early writings in which he is named. As to precisely when the form L'Espec was introduced, or why, I am not in a position to make any assertion ; but my impression is that the earliest instance of what I look upon as an innovation on the old mode of spelling the name is certainly later by more than a century, perhaps much more than a century, than the date of the foundation of Rievaulx Abbey. The original form is certainly Espec and not L'Espec. Now, here let me draw attention to the circumstance that King Stephen in 1135, in the presence of Walter Espec himself, Geoffrey de Trailli, and all Walter's other nephews still living, confirms Espec's foundation grant to Wardon Abbey in the following terms :—"Scitote me towards the end of the Conqueror's reign, and recorded, not in its proper place, but altogether at the end in the Yorkshire part of the Domesday Book, almost all the constituents therein were withdrawn from the Terra Regis of the earlier pages of the same volume ; and that again when very large accessions to the original grant were made by King Henry, and, it is likely, within the first decade of his reign, the said accessions were made, in many and striking instances, at the expense of the Earl of Mortain's fee, and some two or three others which were in the same predicament with it, viz., forfeited by reason of the revolt of their late owners. And in the same two ways, but especially the latter, a great part of Walter Espec's Yorkshire estates would seem to have been made up.

concessisse Deo et Ecclesiæ S. Mariæ de Essartis et monachis . . . qui de Abbatia Rievallis exierunt, ut ibi abbatiam faciant, totam essartam de Wardona et de Sudgivela, et totum illud boscum de illis duabus villis, per illas divisas et metas quas Walterus Espec, qui hæc eis donavit, illis fecit et statuit.” On turning to the Bedfordshire Domesday we find under the heading “XXV. TERRA WILLELMI SPECH,” and among the half dozen manors, with sundry other lands, amounting in all to more than sixty hides, specified as held in capite by Spech, the manors of Wardone and Sudgivela mentioned as comprising, the one of them nine hides and the other five and half a yardland, together with a variety of interesting details as to the nature of the property and its value. But the fact of special interest is that William Spech, at the date of the return in question, or 1087, is the feudal occupant of the lands and rights granted forty-eight years afterwards by Walter Espec to the nascent monastery of Wardon. This can scarcely be a fortuitous coincidence ; for there is the absolute identity of the manors specified and the practical or de facto identity of the name of the tenant in capite of 1087 with that of the grantor of 1131. The inference that Walter Espec was, not simply the heir, but the son—or at least the nephew on the father’s side—of William Spech is unavoidable, for anything we can see to the contrary. And there is no apparent reason for not accepting the inference that he was son rather than nephew, and this decides the form of the name.

But this is a conclusion which, so far as it is valid, effectually disposes of the genealogy statement or assumption—already discredited by its inherent incredibility, not to say absurdity, that Walter Espec was “miles strenuus Conquestoris.” That was the rôle enacted by Walter’s presumptive father. That Walter Espec also was a “miles strenuus” there can be no doubt, as it would seem : only it would be in the service of King Henry ; and, we surmise with almost equal certainty, in the wars occasioned by the revolt of Robert Curthose, the issue of which was such as to place the large forfeited estates of Mortain and other well-feoffed barons at the King’s disposal, wherewith to acknowledge the services of the captains who had fought faithfully and bravely for him.

This may be as suitable a place as any other in which to notice another somewhat hyperbolical and much misunderstood expression employed by the later chroniclers who deal with Walter Espec’s good deeds as exemplified in his foundation of the three Houses of Kirkham, Rievaulx, and Wardon. With a species of exaggeration which is intelligible, and perhaps under the circumstances pardonable, but which is exaggeration all the same, he is described as having, under the influence of his sorrow, “made Christ his heir,” and of a portion of his lands so great that very exaggerated language is employed in detailing the munificence of his gifts. In the extract given at the commencement of this Introduction it would be observed that the endowment of Kirkham alone is estimated at 1300 marks of annual income. In the notice of Walter Espec prefixed to the Genealogy the terms employed are—

“Monasterio autem de Kirkham dedit jus patronatus septem ecclesiarum per ipsum appropriatarum in proprios usus habendum, et possessiones Mc marcarum in Comitatu Northumbriæ: plus multo Rivalli, ut per illius Monasterii Registrum patet.” The utter extravagance of such statements is exposed by the least consideration or inquiry. The total annual value of the estates belonging to Kirkham, at the valuation made 26 Henry VIII. amounted to £300, 15s. 6d., which of course would include all later donations as well as that of the Founder; and yet we are gravely told that the Founder’s endowment alone produced an annual revenue of £865, 13s. 4d.! And then comes in the still more preposterous allegation as to his giving “multo plus” to Rievaulx. His gift to Rievaulx, so far as “is patent in the register,” was anything but “munificent.” There were nine carucates of the original grant, and a given portion of land, mostly unreclaimed, in Bilsdale, of the secondary grant. And the endowment of Warden was more meagre still. What is specified in King Stephen’s confirmation is not by any means the entire manors of Warden and Sudgiv-ele, but of certain essarts there to be found, and of not altogether insignificant forest rights in each of the said manors. And on the whole there can be but little doubt that, in these records of the Founder’s “munificence,” with which we have to do, there is much more of rhetorical description than of sober history. The compiler of the legend might have perfectly good and sufficient reasons for magnifying the subject of his tale, and such embellishments might not be held as out of place, or in bad taste, by those on whom some reflected credit was thereby bestowed.

But to revert to the subject we had in hand before making this digression. Looking, then, upon the first grant towards the raising and sustentation of the nascent Abbey as made in 1131, and the actual consummation of commenced and direct action as marking the following year, we are—what is not the case with the early stages of foundation-work at Fountains, only a year or two after—left to our own surmises as to the progress of events in the weeks and months that followed. With the fairly substantial initiatory grant of nine carucates of land, and that land in itself of no inferior quality, and with the countenance and, doubtless, active sympathy of their first founder and benefactor, we can hardly think of the monkish colony as experiencing one tithe of the difficulties, and hardly any of the stern hardships, which fell to the lot of their brethren on the banks of the Skell. Not that it would be all plain sailing, beyond all question. They would have their toils, their perplexities, their perils. For we can scarcely set down such descriptions of the place as "locus horroris et vastæ solitudinis,"<sup>1</sup> "a

the brethren who were sent from Citeaux to found the Abbey of Clairvall, 'In loco horroris et vastæ solitudinis consederunt viri illi virtutis facturi de spelunca latronum templum Dei et domum orationis.' It is used also by the chronicler of Kirkstead in describing the foundation of that house, and is similarly applied by other Cistercian writers." But still there must have been a great amount of descriptive force in solitary place in Blakemor, surrounded by steep hills and covered with wood and ling"<sup>1</sup> as due to nothing else than the rhetorical fancy of the limners, and when we call to mind the vivid picture drawn in Bernard de Baliol's yet later charter of grant in Westerdale<sup>2</sup>—a place of no greater "solitudo" or "horror" than Rievaulx must then have been—no other conclusion is possible save that the pioneers of the monastic work and life in the dales of the Rie had a time of rough and not quite dangerless experience to pass through. Rievaulx may now "stand in hallowed beauty"—and would that its beauty were regarded more in the spirit and sense of the epithet<sup>3</sup>—but then the descriptive adjectives must have qualified tracts of an unreclaimed, it as applied to a totally unreclaimed place in the wilds of the vast, trackless, desolate Blackhow Moor. Of a part of the same district, not thirty years ago, a man who had roughed it all over the world nearly, and was then Professor of Physiology in a Queen's College in Ireland, described his ideas of it, after passing over a limited and road-traversed portion of the same, by the application of the terms "a waste howling wilderness."

the ivy which was slowly but surely sapping the stability of the exterior of the south end of the choir had been removed, and that the same precautionary measures were being pursued elsewhere. But at the same time I saw but too many evidences of the slow but sure processes of decay and ruin operating unchecked in other parts of the venerable fabric. In one place there had been a recent fall involving destruction of features of interest, and in another a large mass, the fall of which would carry away many tons of material, and cause the utter destruction of the openings of two windows, was only kept from falling by the application of ligatures and shores, which, at the utmost, could be effectual in averting the threatened ruin and loss but for a few days—it might even be hours: and I could not learn that any orders for the effectual averting of the threatened catastrophe had been or were likely to be issued.

wild, waste, and inhospitable district. And these newcomers, strangers and foreigners—not so much we may, as we must infer—had a great, a toilsome, and a difficult work before them :—how difficult, in one way, few suspect, except they be old enough and with sufficient experience to realise what the clannish feeling of the true old uncultured, uninformed native of the Yorkshire wilds was, even down to the present century.

It is not that the work of constructing a shelter for their heads and a material oratory for their devotions—under the circumstances, that is, which we assume to have been theirs—would be likely to prove very arduous or very intricate. We read, with a sort of uncomprehending, or rather unawakened intelligence that lacks practical application, of those poor famished refugees, starved with cold as well as hunger-pinched, at Fountains, plaiting their mats and wattling their “fleaks,” wherewith their oratory was to be fashioned forth, and we fail to realise that in such days and such undertakings as these of the first third of the twelfth century, hewn stone and squared timbers were scarcely likely to accommodate themselves to the actual working founders’ hands. All that must be the work of other labourers and later days. We noticed a while since, in speaking of the exodus of canons from Kirkham to Thornton, that it was in one year the powerful Earl began to construct, and that in the next the canons just mentioned entered upon that which had been constructed. Put up, made susceptible of occupation, and occupied within the limits of twelve months! But what about the nature, the quality, the proposed durability of such constructions? I can liken them to nothing so suggestingly as to the sheds and cabins "run up" for the workmen's occupation and use in the near vicinity of some great structure or engineering effort, which, it is known, will occupy architect and builder for months, perhaps years, before the last sound of the workman's tool can be heard.

And so it was beyond reasonable doubt with those whose lot it was to initiate the great work at Rievaulx. They must have laboured at first, not so much with the expectation, or the hope even, as the intention that what they were doing should be but for a time, should be swept away to make room for, at least to be superseded by, something better, higher, worthier. And in reality that something nobler and worthier could scarcely have been begun until some sensible space later.<sup>1</sup> At the circumstance is noteworthy, and the question of a temporary or makeshift place in which to worship in the interim, is one which answers itself the moment it is raised. But a further and still more practical illustration of the same matter is found in the notices given in the Chronica de Melsa of the initiatory steps taken in the establishment of that Convent in the selected place. The entries in their unadorned simplicity and directness are as follows. Under date 1150 to 1160, Adam, the first Abbot, "fecit ædificari quandam magnam domum, licet ex vili cenate [?wicker or wattled work] . . . in qua Conventus adventurus, donec providentius ordinaretur, habitaret. Fecit etiam quandam capellam juxta domum prædictam . . . ubi monachi omnes in inferiori solario postea decubabant, et in superiori least, such seems to be the testimony of that which we are still permitted to behold, and to look upon as the earliest part of the work which was intended to endure. Doubtless there was an early choir: a short one, almost certainly, as was the Cistercian use, as well as like so many other early Norman choirs, and perhaps with apsidal termination. Perhaps the transepts were built on to that, and the great Norman nave continued, in its unusual direction, to be raised year after year, section after section, as at Whitby, until at last the great comprehensive plan began to assume a measure of completeness, and fairer visions of a gracefuller style began to dawn on the designers' mental perception.

But we may well pause here for a space. There are divina officia devotius persolvebant." Then, obtaining the gift of certain planks and beams, reserved from the dismantling of de Stuteville's wooden castle of Montferat, "plures monasterii ædificatæ fuerunt officinæ." Next, the record proceeds "Capella, de qua superius fiebat mentio, quæ tunc oratorium et dormitorium monachorum exstiterat, nimis arcta erat, ubi tot monachi et psallerent et pausa- rent. Abbas ipse Adam et monachi ædificaverunt magnam illam domum, ubi nunc brasium nostrum conficitur, de tabulis quæ de ipso castro ligneo exstiterunt, cujus partem superiorem pro oratorio, inferiorem vero pro dormitorio, diutius habuerunt." This is the sum of the building processes during the first ten years. The second Abbot, between 1160 and 1182, "opus lapideum incepit in monasterio, ecclesiam, scilicet, et dormitorium monachorum, et quidem dormitorium et necessaria perfecit:" from which it would appear that, up to 1182, the church itself was only in an incipient state. Between 1182 and 1197 the frater of stone was begun and finished, but by extraneous assistance. The convent occupied themselves with the calefactory, and with repairs and rebuildings of granges and premises, and a new church was begun, the older building being inadequate and unseemly. This commenced church, however, was superseded under the fourth Abbot, or between 1197 and 1210, when the "refectorium conversorum" was completed, their dorter commenced; the cloister in stone also, and many other of the offices. And it was not till Palm Sunday in the year 1207 that the first stone of the church which was destined to stand was actually laid. Commentary upon all this in connection with the slow progress of conventual building assumed in the text is surely needless. I am indebted to Mr. W. H. St. John Hope for bringing this parallel to my notice.

other matters calling for a measure of our attention and thought before we set ourselves to contemplate the means at the command of, and the methods, or some of them, actually adopted by the builders of the Abbey such as we see it in part, and in part strive to reconstruct it in thought, and by deduction from what yet remains to be seen. It was not simply that, as Mr. Walbran writes (Memorials, 4, n. 2), the “house of Rievaulx in the lifetime of its first Abbot, and the celebrated Aelred, sent out colonies of monks who established the Cistercian Abbeys of Melrose in Scotland, and the first of the Order in that kingdom; Revesby in Lincolnshire; and Wardon in Bedfordshire”;<sup>1</sup> but there were other open-

of extracts from ancient records, and the Annals of Norwich, quoted in the Monasticon (vol. i. p. 784), this circumstance took place in the year 1136. This date, however, is erroneous; since the confirmation of the Foundation Charter by King Stephen (Mon. Ang. ut supra) is witnessed by Turstin, Archbishop of York, Alexander, Bishop of Lincoln—who colonised his Abbey of Louth Park from Fountains—and among others, by Walter Espec, and all his nephews and heirs then living, apud Eboracum, ‘anno Incarnationis Dominicæ millesimo centesimo tricesimo quinto, et regni mei primo in Christo perfecto feliciter.’ In this charter the King confirms, ‘Deo et ecclesiæ S. Mariæ de Essartis et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus, qui de Abbatia Rievallis exierunt, ut ibi abbatiam faciant, totum essartum de Wardona et de Sudgivela, et totum illud boscum de illis duabus villis, per illas divisas et metas quas Walterus Espec, qui hæc eis donavit, illis fecit et statuit et sicut carta sua

ings of a similar nature, or it may even have been invitations or requests, backed by the offer or the gift of lands for sites, and the like, which are less well known, and as mentioned at all, mentioned so as to show manifestly they were misunderstood. Such was the gift of land by Olaf, King of Man, and of other land by Walter de Gant, at Stainton, and in either instance with the distinct statement that the donation was made “ad abbatiam constituendam” or “construendam.”

As to the first-named of these two cases, in the Cronicon Manniæ, under the date MCXXXIV., there is the entry, “Olavus Rex dedit Yvoni, Abbati de Furnes, partem terræ suæ in Mannia ad abbatiam constituendam in loco qui vocatur Russin.” There is, besides, among the Duchy Charters at the Public Record Office, one numbered 256 in the Public Records Report of 1875, which is thus described by the editor:—“Letter from King Olaf of Man, wherein he directs that the Bishops of Man and the Isles shall be chosen in the Church of St. Mary of Furness, and he confirms his gift of a piece of land to construct an abbey.” The date of this document is, by the compiler of the Report, made to lie between 1134 and 1139. But, as I have remarked in the Introductory Chapter to the Furness Coucher Book (Chetham Society, p. xxx), “there is another matter, in the same connection, remaining to be noticed, and that is the previous grant by Olaf to Rievaulx of the aforesaid land in or near to Russyn. The state-confirmavit.’ From a confirmatory charter of King Henry II. to the monks of Sibton in Norfolk (Mon.

Ang. vol. i. p. 866), it appears that the Abbey, which was founded in 1150, was a daughter of Warden.”

ment made concerning this previous grant at p. 11, is as follows:—‘Certa terra in Mannia data fuit Abbathia de Rievalle ad construendam abbatiam de Russia. Postea, tamen, data fuit Abbatia de Furnesio, ad constituendam eam de Ordine Cisterciensi, ubi modo situata est, et sic, non de Rievalle sed de Furnesio exivit.’ Beck’s comment upon this is—‘the ground had been previously granted to the Abbey of Rievaulx for the purpose of building a monastery there. But the monks of that House not availing themselves of the donation, it was transferred to Furness.’” Mr. Beck adds, in a note, that “the notices of this occurrence are involved in confusion,” but much of the confusion is of his own creation, and originates partly in the circumstance that he ignores, or else is ignorant of, the fact that Rievaulx was a house of the Cistercian Order from the beginning, as Furness was eventually. For the facts as stated are clear enough. “The grant in question was first made to Rievaulx. That Abbey, however, was not founded till 1131, and possibly not till a year or two later, . . . and one thing is fairly clear, namely, that, taking the later date as the practical one, the only just nascent Abbey was not in a very good position for undertaking, at Olaf’s desire, ‘abbatiam constituere’ in the Isle of Man, or anywhere else; for the monks would have their hands full with their own home building operations.”

Probably the general tenor of these extracts, taken with what has been advanced in some nearly preceding paragraphs, will be regarded as a sufficient notice of the circumstance under consideration. Or, at least, the only other commentary there seems to be any occasion to offer on the matter is, that, however unexpected it may seem, at first sight, that such a donation, accompanied by such a grant, should have been made to Rievaulx at such a very early date in the period of its own existence, still a good deal of the aspect of strangeness will be removed by the recollection that none of these things were done in a corner. The pioneer colony of Cistercian monks, "directed by St. Bernard," had been in the country now for five or six years. The mission would be known, the arrival heard of, wherever there was not merely a zeal for the great and holy work like unto Espec's, but wherever there was a latent desire, a nascent disposition to engage in the same in the hundreds of places calling for an exertion of the like missionary efforts. And then, I think, we may allow a little for the motive involved in the more modern phrase that it was "becoming the fashion" to build monasteries. It seems simply impossible to doubt that King Olaf must have heard of what St. Bernard was doing for North England in general, and at Walter Espec's instance in particular; and then, what more natural than that he should apply for the aid he wanted at what would, to him, of necessity, appear to be the fountain-head?

The other instance of the same kind adverted to a little above, is thus introduced by Mr. Walbran in his paper on Kirkham, already spoken of (and more than once) in the course of the present remarks:—"The motive," he says, "of the meditated surrender of their house and property by the canons of Kirkham to the monks of Rievaulx, is no more apparent to us than that which induced the monks of Rievaulx to meditate a translation of their house in 1158—five years after the death of their founder—to Stainton near the sea, midway between Whitby and Scarborough—a fact not generally known.” In the absence of any notes or memoranda by Mr. Walbran which might serve to throw light upon the matter, it is hard to account for what appears to be a series of gratuitous slips and misapprehensions. In the first place, the Abbey actually parted with the Stainton grant to the King in the year alleged as that of the “meditated translation”: “Anno ab Incarnatione Domini mclviii, dedit nobis Rex Henricus II<sup>us</sup> vastum subtus Piking, in escambio pro Steintona, quam nobis dedit Walterus de Gant ad abbatiam construendam.” (See below, p. 261.) In the second place, the Stainton in question was not the “Stainton by the sea”—in other words Staintondale—“between Whitby and Scarborough.” That Stainton appears to have been a part of the Terra Regis of Domesday, and to have remained attached to the Honour of Pickering Castle as long as it remained in Royal or quasi-Royal tenure, and so could not have been in the hands of the alleged donor of the land which was given “ad construendam abbatiam.” And again, in the third place, as given by Walter de Gant (see No. ccclxviii.), it must be looked for within the limits of the fee of that donor. And, as it appears, he was lord of Folkingham, in Lincolnshire, and, on his marriage with Matilda, daughter of Stephen, Earl of Lincoln, he received as her dowry the whole of Swaledale ; and thus we are led on to the identification of Stainton, a township in Downholme parish, about six miles west of Richmond, and no great way from Ellerton Abbey, as the Stainton which the said Walter de Gant, who died in 1138, gave to Rievaulx "ab abbatiam construendam ibi." And we may further notice that it was this Walter's son, Gilbert, who married Hawyse, daughter of William de Romara (named just above as the founder of Revesby Abbey), whose name is found among those of the early benefactors of Rievaulx Abbey. He died indeed, in 1156.

But quite independently of the mistake as to the site of Stainton, there seems to be absolutely no reason discernible for the representation that the monks of Rievaulx either meditated, or had a motive for meditating, the removal of their house in the year 1158, or indeed in any other year, and either to Stainton or anywhere else. They may have meditated sending a draft of monks thither, as it appears they did to Melrose, to Revesby, to Warden; but we have nothing on which to rest the positive statement that they ever really devised any such plan as that of removal from Rievaulx. Indeed, when we consider the drain upon their resources in men that must have been occasioned by furnishing these daughters of the house with the number of monks required, and the further fact that the grant by the King of Man, probably contemporaneous, or nearly contemporaneous, with their own foundation, was, and no doubt necessarily, suffered to go by default, the presumption that they could not have contemplated any such step as even this modified project involves, at the date of or soon after Walter de Gant's benefaction, is enforced upon us. Only, and perhaps by reason of the donor's death, which must have followed somewhat closely on the donation, the grant was not withdrawn, as, in the case of the King of Man and the Isles, it was. On the whole, while I think that Mr. Walbran read the historical passage on which he must have founded his representation of motive and object as entertained by the Rievaulx monks very hastily, and without giving himself time for consideration, and much more for inquiry, I feel bound, as editing this Chartulary, to state that, having gone through the whole again and again, and having examined all the records to me available, I have never met with a single word or expression that has led me to suspect that such an idea as that of removal from Rievaulx had ever presented itself to the energetic and ably directed monastic community there established. They had their difficulties and their discouragements, and grievous enough some of them were, as will be more fully noticed at a future page. But, so far as is apparent, they did not lose heart in the darkest and most discouraging period, when things seemed to be going most against them, but sought such remedy as was open to them, and proceeded steadfastly on their way while yet the result of their appeal was uncertain.

The interest of the narrative would be absorbing if we were permitted, as in the case of the sister house of Fountains, to read the—so to speak—daily entries in the journal of their early experiences in such uphill labour as no little of theirs must necessarily have been. For it will be observed that, apart from any active sympathy and co-operation they may have met with on the part of the Founder, they seem to have been thrown very much upon their own resources, so far as help or countenance from any other external quarter is involved. There seems to be a sort of unintended pathos in the few words of the record that tell us this. The Founder gives them Grif and Tilston to start them on their laborious course; and then, some years afterwards, no one interfering on their behalf in the slow toilsome interval, a neighbour steps in and bestows upon them a not very important donation at Hesketh, the total value of which, with the additions afterwards made to it, only amounted, at the time of the Dissolution, to £4, 13s. 4d. a year. And then they have to wait until 1145 for Walter Espec's supplementary grant of Bildesdale, which, eventually at least, constituted a valuable addition to their worldly means.

Perhaps it may suggest itself to some among the readers of these lines that, in employing terms and a tone such as those of the preceding paragraph, a false impression may possibly be conveyed; that something like a suppression of facts may be involved. But I hardly think so. There seems to be but little even to suggest the possibility that extraneous assistance to any noticeable extent flowed in upon the monks during the initial years of the existence of their establishment. For, to what sources are we to look upon them as likely to be indebted? There was no wealthy or well-to-do middle class, even if a middle class at all; and the villeins, cottars, grassmen, in a district that, scarcely forty years before, had been mainly returned as "waste," and that still admitted of such description as that noticed a while since in the records left by the Chroniclers of the circumstances of the foundation, could scarcely be looked upon as likely to be efficient helpers where money or money's worth was urgently needed. From the lords of the soil, in their several degrees, and from the lords of the soil only, could the material aid that was needed be expected; and, as we have noticed, their aid came in slowly, and, as it were, reluctantly. If we scrutinise the catalogue of grants tabulated in No. CCCLXIX. (derived from the same source as its predecessor), we find the total amount of gifts, made and accepted within the first fifty years or so of the Convent's being, summed up in the number of fifty carucates.

Moreover, in this same connection, another consideration is that the Foundation grant—nay, that the ultimate whole of Espec's grant—is not of an overwhelming nature. It might be possible, with a certain allowance, to write touching the endowment of Kirkham: "The bounty of the founder was dealt out with no niggard or parsimonious hand. . . . He bestowed upon his Priory those most magnificent gifts," lands and tithes in Northumberland, the advowsons of seven churches, divers considerable vills or manors in Yorkshire, so that it might all be summed up—"He (the founder) devoted to the endowment of Kirkham alone a revenue estimated in the earlier part of the twelfth century at the annual sum of 1300 marks."<sup>1</sup> But it was widely otherwise with Rievaulx. Four carucates at Griff and five at

Tilston—scarcely more, if more, than the equivalent of the Kirkham manor only—without the seven churches, without the lands and manors in Northumberland, without the vills and carucates of Westow, Whitwell, Thixendale, without the fisheries and mills, without the tithes here and there—this was all the endowment with which to aid her efforts Rievaulx had to begin with, and to depend upon for the first few years, or until Odo de Boltby came to the rescue, and then was followed by the Founder with the further, but again not overwhelmingly liberal, grant of Bilsdale. As compared with the “bounty” displayed towards Kirkham, there can be, looking at the transaction as we are looking at it, but small reserve about the application of the antithetical word quoted above to the dimensions of the “foundation” grant to Rievaulx. And yet it was, and no long time first, like to the grain of mustard seed. Take the date of Espec’s Bilsdale grant, or 1145—approximately also the date, as it would seem, of Stephen de Meinil’s grant of the lost vill of Stainton, and of two or three other and earlier benefactions—and pause for a moment to reflect that that is the approximate date also of the earliest portions of the mason-work still standing to greet our eyes and challenge our admiration in the stately ruin of the conventual Church. Who can tell where the means came from, or how it was that such a mighty zeal, as is attested by the great block of work, which we see for ourselves was actually carried out, was inspired? Who were the helpers, and in what form or forms was the help given? Pondering on these questions, it is of course open to us to conclude, and I cannot but feel convinced myself that, by the very contrast drawn just now between the endowments of Kirkham and of Rievaulx, the conclusion is forced upon us, that the "Founder" now became a founder indeed, and in another and fuller sense than any we have yet realised, when once the works that were intended to stand and become "an house exceeding magnifical unto the Lord" were fairly and fully designed and initiated. Why should not he too, like a greater than he in the old, old time, "make preparation for the house that was to be builded," and prepare "abundantly before his death"? For had not he too "set his affection to the house of his God, and given to the house of his God over and above all that he had prepared"?

For my own part, considering the extent of work that was completed at the early period we are contemplating, and the character of the same, it seems utterly impossible, allowing for the slenderness of the as yet existing means of the Convent, to account for the fact that it was effected, on any other ground save some such as that now suggested. The effort, and the results alike, were so obviously beyond the means and the unassisted power of the Convent, and the assistant must have been one alike munificent and abounding in wealth.

But there is yet another matter to which attention must be called, a little consideration of which may possibly serve to set what has now been suggested in even a clearer light. That great architectural knowledge and experience were brought to bear on the rising structure it is simply superfluous to say. And I suppose that in saying as much as that, there is further assumed the presence of engineering ability, and such as to render available all extant resources for facilitating the undertaking in hand. But it would appear probable, or indeed more than probable, that at Rievaulx a more striking, and, I think it may be added, a much more interesting illustration than usual of this position is afforded by the very circumstances of the case as they seem to be presented to us.

We bear in mind that in or about 1145, the Convent has been, speaking roughly, in existence about a dozen years ; that, according to the custom of the Cistercians, the site had been selected in a lonely or remote place ; that, according to the history we have, it was more than merely lonely or remote,—it was desolate, wild, even savage ; that, according to all analogy, the labours and hardships, and even perils, of the first settlers must have been arduous and real ; that until they could succeed in getting their Grif and Tilston land, or part of it, into some sort of regular cultivation—which could not be done off-hand—they would have no regular supplies ; that save wood and water, with stone if they were in a position to use it, there was little else available for employment in their intended or projected works ; that, in short, they had much the same sort of task before them as a colonist party of our own time would have as set down in a rough new country, with scanty stores taken out from home. And they had to provide themselves not only—and, in one sense, hardly as their first object—with shelter for their bodies, mere cabins or huts at first (but to be as soon as possible replaced by dwellings of a more or less conventual form), but above all with a place to worship in, an oratory, however plain, however rough even, from the haste with which it had to be run up. And then we picture to ourselves, perhaps, the nature of the buildings, if "buildings" we can call them, that were run up within the year for the reception of the Prior and his twelve canons from Kirkham at their settlement in Lincolnshire. Or, perhaps, we turn our pondering thought to the cyrograph between Rievaulx and Kirkham, and reflect that if perchance the various buildings specified therein were actually completed within the year from the ratifying of the agreement—a contingency absolutely contemplated in one of the conditions specified toward the end of the document—those several buildings, so precisely catalogued, could by no possibility have been what we understand by the term "substantial," and could never, in any sense or in any part, have been the buildings designed to stand for good, and designed accordingly.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> I am quite aware that in writing thus, I am laying myself open to a charge of inconsistency, for that in the notes to the cyrograph adverted to in the text, the idea that the material to be employed in the construction of the proposed Church, chapter-house, dorter, and frater, was in reality squared stone or ashlar is mentioned and by no means discarded as untenable. But the truth is that since that note not only was written, but printed, further inquiry and consideration have led me to give it up as involving too many difficulties. It will be observed, that the material to be employed in the construction of the aforesaid parts of the conventual whole is termed "spuor." With no dissentient voice spuor is taken by those who have dealt with the deed in question, and by others with whom I have conversed or corresponded on the subject, to mean or designate hewn or squared stone, or ashlar. The difficulties in the way of adopting this conclusion appear to me after maturer thought and consideration to be twofold:—(1.) those arising from philological inquiry and research; (2.) those arising out of the very nature of the conditions and circumstances stated. 1. There seems to be no possible or supposable connection for the word "spuor," taken in the suggested sense. No glossary, ancient or modern, so far as I am aware, gives any word the least like "spuor," either in form or suggestion, taking stone, squared, or in any form, as the signification intended; and it is seldom indeed that a word is met with so utterly isolated as that comes to. But again, 2. Four important parts of the conventual establishment (besides the seven others specified "of some other material") are to be constructed in "spuor," and more than only possibly within the year. To build a church—and allowing only for the choir—for thirteen professed brethren, besides conversi, and allowing for the influx of so many new-comers as are implied in the sending out of so many drafts to furnish new Abbeys elsewhere—and chapter-house, dorter, and frater, on the same scale, in hewn stone, is simply impossible. The construction on that wise of a small parish church, under the existing circumstances of a still only growing community—say, such as is presented to our view and appreciation in the almost contemporary choir at Lastingham—could not have been effectually completed within such limits of time. Taking these difficulties into consideration, I feel myself constrained to differ in view with the authorities mentioned above as to the probable meaning of "spuor," and in preference to adopt the theory that the word in question may be a connection—possibly disguised by scribe or copyist's mistake—of the old word which has come down to us in the form "spar." "Fyr sperris," "sparrys de quercu," "sperris de abiete," are familiar mediæval terms, and it is a matter equally familiar that houses, churches, even castles, were wholly or in part built of timber. "The use of wood for domestic architecture long after this time,"—the eleventh century—says Professor Freeman (Norm. Con. ii. 606), "need not be dwelt upon, and there is abundant evidence of the use of wood in fortification at this time and later. . . . Stone was at this time fast coming into use for domestic, as well as for military and ecclesiastical buildings." Previously then the material in use must have been wood, or modifications depending on the use of wood. As an illustration simply, let me advert to Greensted church, constructed, as there seems no reason to doubt, in or about the year 1013, to receive the body of St. Edmund. The entry in a record preserved in the Monasticon is "Idem apud Aungre (Ongar; Greensted having been formerly parcel of Ongar) hospitabatur, ubi in ejus memoria lignea capella permanet usque hodie." In my Essex boyhood this chapel of wood was still the parish church of Greensted, and this is the description:—"The nave is formed of the half trunks of oaks, about a foot and a half in diameter, split, and roughly hewn at each end, to let them into a sill at the bottom, and into a plank at the top, where they are fastened with wooden pegs. It is 29 feet 9 inches long, 14 feet wide, and 5 feet 6 inches high on the sides which supported the primitive roof. On the south side there are sixteen trunks and two door-posts; on the north twenty-one, and two vacancies filled up with plaster. The west whether apsidal or not, before the early Norman work<sup>1</sup> we see in the lower parts of the transepts could possibly have been put together. And as we raise our eyes from those lower and earlier courses to those which are superincumbent, another thought besides that of the difference of date, betokened by the difference in style, suggests itself to our deliberate consideration: I mean the strikingly evident, rather than simply apparent, difference between the building-stone towards the base and the building-stone in the higher courses. And the next thought naturally is that the several portions of the building-materials thus differenced must of necessity have come from different quarries. And this fact, depending on observation rather than mere inference end is built against by a boarded tower. . . . On the south side there is a wooden porch." Remembering the application of the word, in old days and even yet, to denote beams, squared trees even, long logs, and allowing for the possibility of a clerical error in the form "spuor,"—the forms were divers: sparre, sper, Old E. sperro, O. N. sparri, etc.,—there is at least a connection suggested for the word, and the application proposed accommodates itself to our intelligence as much as the meaning "hewn stone or ashlar" sets us upon doubting and questioning. One other remark, not altogether irrelevant, may be made, and that in the way of drawing attention to an entry—one among others like—in Domesday, in which the existence of a church built of wood in the close vicinity of Rievaulx, is attested as actually standing at the time of the survey: "In Begeland (Byland) habuit Aschil etc. Nunc habet Robertus (Malet) ibi i carucatam, et vii villanos cum ii carucis. Ibi presbiter et ecclesia lignea."

There are charters, or rather a sequence of charters, which, per se, are in many respects almost unintelligible. They speak of a dike (fossatum) or dikes, of apparently small but mysterious grants in connection therewith, of a guteria, of an insula, where no "insula" exists now, and where not one inquiring visitor in a thousand would ever suspect, or, it may be said, has ever suspected, the being of an "insula," or island, in any sense. And yet the fossata, the guteria, and the site of the "insula"—an "insula" no longer—not only exist, but, while explaining these otherwise mysterious documents, hang themselves on to the history of the contrasted kinds of building-stone noticed a few sentences above. One of these charters, from the identity of the grantor no less than from the names of the witnesses, would, under any circumstances, date itself approximately about the middle of the twelfth century. This is No. LXXV. But there is another which is more specific still, as being granted not only in the time of King Stephen, but during the lifetime of William, the first Abbot of Rievaulx, by the Abbot and Convent of Byland, conceding to Rievaulx the privilege of making their fossatum below what was then called Mons Escheberch and now Ashberry Hill, as well as the right of ownership of the slip or slips of land which might be enclosed between the fossatum and the river. The charter in question is printed as No. CCXLIV. This dates the guteria as ante 1145. Other two, Nos. CCC. and CCCIV. are fixed as to date between 1193 and 1203, by the fact that they are both by the same grantor, and one of them is attested by Archbishop Hubert Walter of Canterbury and Abbot Ralph Haget of Fountains. And all three of them speak of an artificial channel as made, or to be made, and made, moreover, at as high a level as can be (“quam propius montem poterint”), and of conducting the water from the river Rye along it, or by means of it. And it is evident that the charters deal with the said guteria, or quasi-aqueduct, as requiring and receiving concessions from the said grantors, Hugh Malbis and his nephew Richard, the owners on the Byland side of the river, in two different localities, the one to the north or north-west of the Abbey, and the other distinctly to the south. The first speaks of the grant of all the land lying between the hill called Brocksholes and the Rye from Oswaldenges as far as the “guteria,” and all the adjacent island within the “guteria” on the Helmsley side, and the others of the entire holm at Hangingbridge (or Hemgerdebridge in one of them) in the Scawton territory, between the Rye and Aldentofts (now Antofts); and in two of them we find the expression “terraque quæ ex parte eorum deinde contigerit illis perpetuo remanebit”—“and the land which shall thus accrue to them shall continue theirs for ever.”

It is worth while to pause over this last clause for a brief space. Any one who has the opportunity, I will not say of looking at a plan of the Helmsley estate, but of consulting the six-inch Ordnance Survey, will observe that in a variety of places the boundary between the township of Rievaulx and the townships on the other side of the Rye is not coincident with the mid-stream line, as is the almost invariable rule in such cases, but deviates therefrom, and, so to say, encroaches on the Byland side. These "encroachments" in reality constitute the land accruing to the Abbey in virtue of the concessions made by the Byland community, confirmed by the Malbis uncle and nephew, in furtherance of the monks' scheme of the "guteria," conduit or canal. And the unmistakable traces of the canal—indeed the very course and bed of the canal itself, as well as these encroachments—remain to explain the charters, as the charters are endowed with a power to explain the deviations and the long deep canal-bed, in a way and with a clearness that could in no a priori way have been foreseen.<sup>1</sup>

the point. But it transpired that Mr. Rye had formed definite views as to the quarries, and their several positions, from which the two kinds of building-stone already noticed were obtained, and, besides that, of the mode by which the said stone, in either case, had been conveyed to the actual site of the abbey. He was convinced that the stone had been conveyed by water, and that the deep wide ditch or dike referred to had been the bed of a canal sufficient for the purpose. On finding myself shortly afterwards enabled to arrange a personal visit to the locality, I traversed the whole length of the inferred canal, and found it carried as close to the foot of the hill as it possibly could be, the requisite water-level having been obtained by the construction of a great weir or dam at a certain point

The grant was not altogether gratuitous on the part of Hugh Malbis, as will be observed on inspection of No. LXXV., the phrase being “ut autem hanc elemosinam libentius facerem dederunt mihi monachi xx s. pro caritate.” It was “elemosina,” but elemosina for which a consideration had to be given.

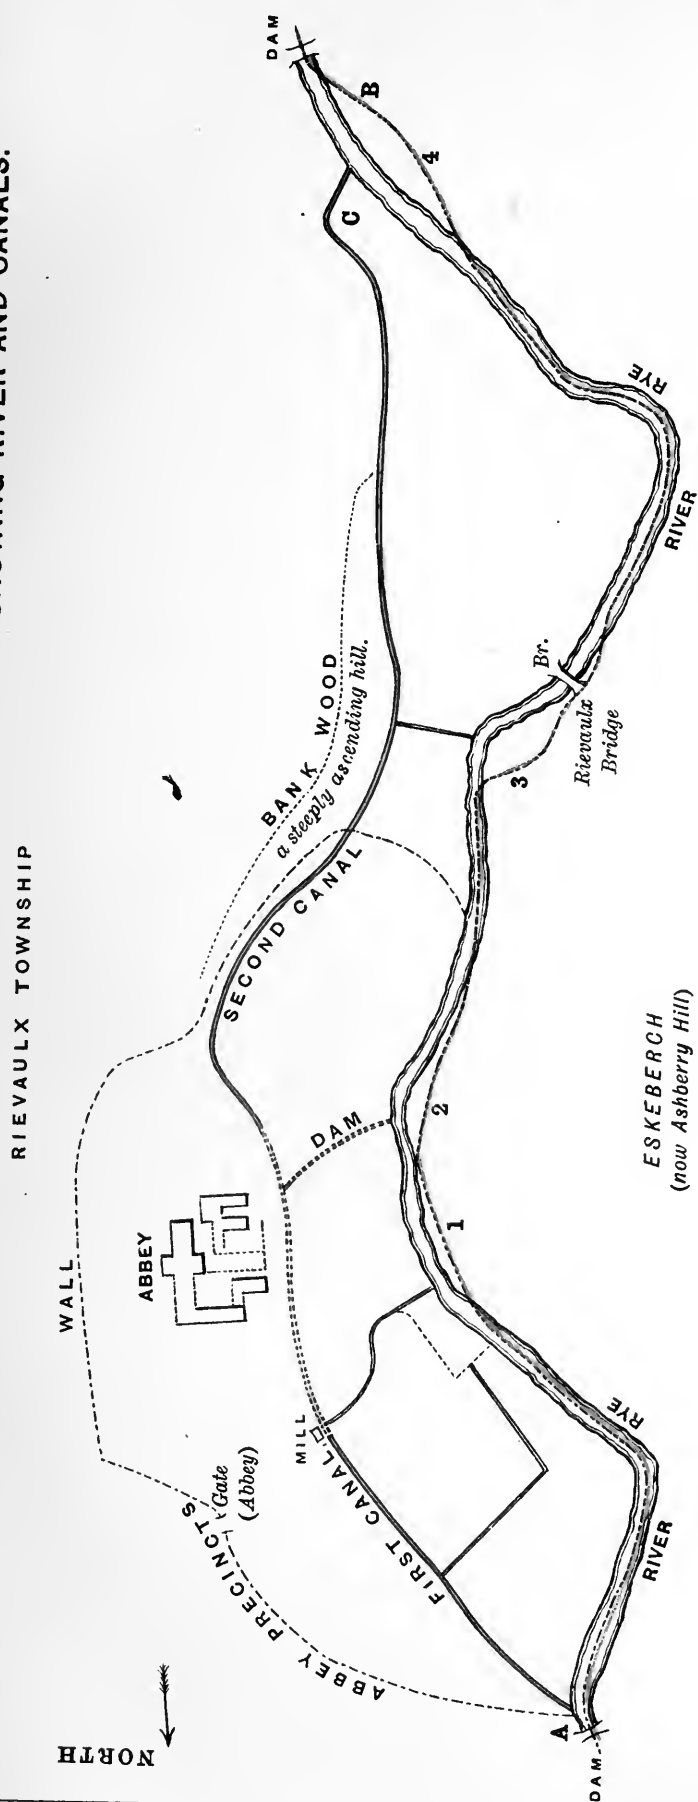

in the direction in which I was quite aware the Hangendebridge must be looked for. But of course a dam of the character in question, sufficiently high and strong to head back the water of Rye, so that it might actually flow back to the foot of Rievaulx site—and hence the necessity for that which was contemplated in the phrase “quam propius montem potuerunt”—could not be made effectual for its intended purpose if any low, weak, or broken places presented themselves in either bank between the dam and the building-site. And it is hardly necessary to observe that, while the monks could do what was necessary in the way of embankment, or what not, on their own side, on the other they were powerless, apart from the special permission of the possessor, and the privilege accorded by him of raising the necessary embankments, wherever needed, on his side also. And hence originated the being as well as the occasion for the aforesaid encroachments, each of which can have been nothing else originally than the site of an embankment designed to keep the water of the river from escaping there, and so defeating the very end and object of the dam, besides overflowing and wasting all the low-lying or holmland adjacent. But even this is not all. In the course of the second day of these investigations Mr. Rye remarked, as the party was passing a given point, and

à propos of a piece of river-side meadow-land—“This field is still named The Island.” The meaning and the application of the name was now a matter of easy deduction. When the canal, wide enough and deep enough to permit the passage of stone-laden lighters or barges, had been in existence, all the low-lying or river-side land between the Rye and the “guteria” had been practically an island; and as I had already seen in the course of the earlier part of the morning, when I had had the opportunity—lasting only about half an hour, unluckily—of looking at some of the earlier entries in an old survey of the Duncombe Park estate, a very considerable number of what were designated “beast-gates” were then—a century and half before, at least,—lotted out in “the Island.” I would only add further here, that this “guteria” or canal was that which was designed and constructed in connection with the transport of the stone which was used in the second or later building epoch of the two under comment. The quarry worked for the stone in question had become available to the monks in virtue of the grant printed as No. LXXIV., and the expansion of that end of the “guteria,” amounting in reality to a kind of basin for the reception of the flats or lighters employed in the transport, is still perfectly and easily traceable.

Still, with all this mutual illustration between ancient document and existing features of the locality, I am unable to consider that all the explanation needed has been supplied. There is a degree of obscurity affecting the earlier charter still remaining. There can be no doubt, I think, that the canal system adopted at Rievaulx was not one and single, or undivided: on the contrary, transient observation seems to be sufficient for creating the conviction that it was made up of two members or divisions; the one member or division, by the aid of a still traceable dam abutting on the south-west angle of the Abbey buildings, complete in itself, and the other beginning at a point about one-third of a mile north-west of the Abbey, just above a small island lying in the bed of the stream, at a place where remains of the stonework of another strong dam may yet be seen, and aiming past the mill almost directly for the north-west angle of the buildings aforesaid. Within stone's-throw of this assumed dam lies the quarry from which the stone used in the existing Norman work of the Abbey Church was obtained. Indeed it is the presence of the lower strata of the said deposit of stone in the river-bed which alike recommended and facilitated the construction of the dam just named exactly there. At first I assumed that the "proxima insula" named in No. LXXV. was the island just now mentioned as lying in the bed of the river just below the site of the dam by the quarry. Nor was I sure for some time that it was not so. But the balance of probability seemed always to incline the other way. And one thing, too, was clear, namely, that very little indeed in the way of concession corresponding to what was imperatively needful in the lower member or section of the canal system would be requisite in this higher or upper section. And it is worth observing that the boundary line, after passing along the middle of the little island specified above, does not begin to deviate from mid-stream, or encroach on the Byland side, until a point in the river-bed nearly due west of the transept of the Abbey Church is reached, after which a narrow slip of some length is included as within the limits of Rievaulx township. It was of course possible that this was what was contemplated in the first charter. But all uncertainty is cleared away by the charter of concession from Byland, to which special attention was called above, and which, as dating before Abbot William's death, so decisively settles the date of the earlier member of the canal system.

Of the progress of the building work after what we may speak of as its resumption, about 1145-50, it would seem that there is no record whatever, any more than there appears to be about the, at least equally great, effort inaugurated when the rebuilding of the Choir on the scale and in the fashion which that which is still left of it sufficiently attests. But that all had not gone smoothly with the Convent in the interval between their patron's death and the completion of the work begun during his lifetime, there is quite sufficient evidence to show. Precisely when the trouble intimated took its rise, there is nothing to indicate, nor yet is there any information as to the motives or the manner in which it originated. All we know is that, however serenely or even prosperously matters may have proceeded with the Convent from the time at which Walter Espec took upon him the character of Founder for the second time, and in such energetic wise, moreover, until some little time (most likely) after his departure from this life (within the retirement of the cloister he had had so much to do with from the first), still, no very long time afterwards, but between 1160 and 1180—and, it is almost certain, nearer the former date than the latter—they were forcibly bereft of no insignificant section of what had been bestowed upon them, and not so very long before. According to the record to which we have been indebted, more than once already, for the date, as well as the specification, of this or that donation, the tide of endowment began to flow steadily in after the time of the Founder's second intervention and its accomplished results. Odo de Ness and Gilbert de Gant and their gifts are named; and then come the grants by the bishops of Durham, William and Hugh, the date of the former being fixed in the year 1152. Then, and specifically in 1154, follows the large and important grant by Roger de Moubray, involving in all no less than eight carucates in Welburn and four in Houeton. After this a succession of gifts, among the donors of which figure men of family, bearing the names Bulmer, Lascells, Engelram, Fitz Ivo, Alverstain, Malbis, Cumin, Tunstal, and others, many of them making great oblations, and none of these seemingly postdating 1160 by very many years. But some of these very men, and notably De Moubray and his eldest son, with others not specified in the above list, and yet well known as early and important benefactors—among them the third Robert de Stuteville and his son William, Everard de Ros, nephew of the founder, Robert Fitz Ernisius (whose name is met with again and again associated with that of the baron last named), the two brothers De Vado, and Alan de Bowforth, are found to be the objects of Papal displeasure, set forth in no measured terms, as plunderers of the Convent in regard of the lands they themselves, or their immediate predecessors in race and ownership, had bestowed. The document referred to is printed as No. cclxiii., and is a rescript from Pope Alexander III., and is addressed to the Bishop of Exeter, the Abbot of St. Mary's at York, and the Dean there. The two Stutevilles are singled out first by name, and charged the acts of plunder complained of by the Rievaulx community, and then issues the mandate that, within thirty days of the receipt of the rescript, they are to be compelled to disgorge, under penalty of excommunication, of having their lands laid under interdict, and of deprivation of Christian burial if they die before the sentence is remitted. And next follow the names of the other offenders in the same way to the number of seven more, with the two Moubrays, father and son, at their head. We have nothing more of a documentary nature to tell us of the result of this sentence : but there can be no doubt otherwise, inasmuch as the lands in question were the property of the Abbey up to the time of the Dissolution.

It is almost impossible to decline some kind or measure of speculation as to the precise circumstances and, at least, approximate date, at and under which the facts just glanced at actually occurred. They seem to be too marked not to have some connection with the circumstances of the times. "Between 1160 and 1180, and nearer the former date than the latter," is the inferential conjecture ventured a little above as to the time, and ventured solely on internal evidence. Between 1160 and 1167 Aelred was Abbot, and next in succession to him comes Sylvanus, of whom we have no distinct mention antedating 1170. Alexander was Pope and Henry II. King. And the period is that embracing the dispute with Becket, and his murder. There can be no doubt as to the fact that much spoliation of Church property, as well as of secular owner-ships, had taken place in the troublous times of Stephen's reign, when might was right in the case of so many barons, over whose actions there was no restraining influence, whether emanating from King or from the exercise of justice ; and such expressions, even in such histories of the time as can hardly be styled "popular" merely, as that "Archbishop Thomas alienated the whole party of the barons by pressing his demands for the recovery of lands belonging to his see," are not only not uncommon, but are indices besides to the multitudinous plunderings of many another ecclesiastical holder besides the See of Canterbury. But, at the period when these plunderings were rife, Rievaulx could not have been affected save in a negative kind of way. It is indeed possible that the lawlessness of the times induced Espec to hold his hand, in the way of further endowment, from 1131 to 1145 ; but that is the utmost extent to which that lawlessness could have affected the nascent Abbey. And, as subsequent to Stephen's reign, or during the strong reign of Henry, it is more than merely difficult to think of such spoliation as Rievaulx unquestionably was exposed to as taking place in entire disregard, or even defiance, of the will and power of the King. And this consideration is entirely unsuggested by, and independent of, the further consideration that, in the case under notice, the appeal for justice is made to the Pope and not to the King. The fact is certainly significant, and it may possibly be looked upon as a suggestion towards an attempt to read between the lines, and thereby decipher an appeal to the Apostolical See, as to a court of last resort, against the King, as well as against the injurious barons and other donors, or their representatives. And this recalls to our recollection that there was a time in Henry's history when precisely such an appeal, and an appeal, moreover, in which the interests of Rievaulx Abbey might be vitally affected, might very well have been made. Thus, at the Council of Northampton, many charges were brought against the Archbishop (Becket); his life was even said to be in danger; he was condemned in a large sum for alleged mismanagement of the King's treasure while yet Chancellor: he not only announced his intention of appealing to the Pope, but left Northampton by night (October 13, 1164), and left in disguise. After a brief stay in Kent, he proceeded, by way of Gravelines, to Pontigny, a Cistercian House in France, where he found an asylum, and from whence he conducted the earlier part of the struggle with the King, of which the Chronicles are so full for the next half dozen years.

Henry not only drove the Archbishop's friends from England, but "but confiscated the lands of the Cistercian Order until the monks of Pontigny should refuse Thomas a home" (Green, p. 104). And this "persecution of the Cistercians is continued until he quits Pontigny" in November 1166. Now, it may not admit of actual demonstration that the "confiscation" of the estates (or some of them) of the Cistercian House of Rievaulx, which is now under our notice, is a part of the measures notoriously taken by Henry against Becket, or even that it is connected with them. But certainly the coincidence of probable date, the fact of the spoliation, the appeal to the Pope, to the pointed exclusion of the King, as the source of justice, seem to do more than merely indicate a possible explanation of the circumstance that the Stutevilles, Mowbrays, and other important members of the northern aristocracy did act in the way this Papal rescript discloses them to us as having acted. The Primate had, in Mrs. Green's words, already quoted, "alienated the whole party of the barons," and there is no great difficulty in the assumption that they would have no great reluctance, especially such of them as wished to stand well with the King, about playing into the said King's hand in such a matter as the withdrawal of their (or their forefathers') previous gifts to the monastery. It is true that only a few years later the baronage was opposed to the King, and that one of the very nobles who are thus supposed to have acted in furtherance of the King's proceedings against Becket and his supporters put himself at the head of a very formidable revolt against

Henry's authority in the north of England. But it hardly seems that this fact militates in any sensible way against the theory suggested; while again, as regards the appeal to the Pope, its probable date, and the success with which it was attended, it may not be amiss to remind ourselves that, as occurring during the lifetime of Abbot Aelred, and backed, as of course it would be, with all the commanding influence he is known to have wielded, there is but little occasion for surprise, either at the ready issuing of the rescript itself, or at the peremptory tone of the mandate it conveys.<sup>1</sup>

I have now touched upon nearly every matter originally intended to be dealt with in these introductory pages. It is not that there are not many more topics inviting, almost calling for, notice: for there are multitudes. But, even were space less scanty than it is, the difference between a mere introductory sketch and a detailed history is too great to be lost sight of. It is true that the history of Rievaulx Abbey craves to be written, and the materials exist; and that, so far, it has never even been attempted. But it were a worthy thing either for private patron or competent and enterprising author to take in hand. In this place I must content myself with a very brief and unsufficing notice of one or two topics suggested by one or more of the cxcvii., cxcviii., cc., ccii. probably, cciii., ccv., ccvi., possibly ccvii., ccviii. and ccxii., all date before the Chancellor was created Archbishop. And cxcix., cci., cciv. and ccx. are all four later than 1170. The two or three not included among these are quite uncommunicative.

documents contained in the pages which follow this Introduction, and with a somewhat detailed attempt to show the grounds on which the list of Abbots given below depends for its support.

One matter, space for dealing adequately with which I could have wished to find in this place, I have spoken about as follows, in my Handbook to Whitby Abbey :—
“ Another case of deliberate villainy is brought home to him ”—Nicholas de Meinill, Baron of Whorlton, who during William le Latimer’s absence in the Scottish wars, abducted his wife from Danby Castle—“ in an assize trial, the records of which still exist. The house of a John de Mowbray of Tampton is beset by night ; he himself is slain, his wife is slain, his brother and daughter are slain, and others of the household, and then the house itself is set on fire, and the bodies of the victims are consumed in the flames. This ferocious crime—in the execution of which there were some dozen or so of persons concerned, several of whom were hanged, and others fled the country, and found refuge in hostile Scotland—was clearly brought home to de Meinill as having been not only instigated and promoted by him, but actually planned in several of its details. . . . And what has to be noted, as directly connected with our subject, is that it appears, in the course of the proceedings, that one or more of the monks of Rievaulx were accessories to the fact, both before and after the murder and the incendiary sequel to it, one of them being among the refugees in Scotland, and the Abbot himself underlying grave suspicion of not being altogether clean-handed in the matter.” I have most unfortunately mislaid my copy of the proceedings in the case ; but as a truce for two years was made with the Scots at the end of 1319, and de Meinill died in 1322, it would seem that the transaction we are noticing must have antedated the first-named year. Thomas II. was Abbot in 1315 ; William V. in 1318.

As touching what is sometimes spoken of as the battle of Byland, and what is alleged or supposed to have occurred as a sequel thereto, a few words only can be written. The document which is printed in the Appendix, the last but one in the series, will be seen at once to be absolutely unconnected with the incident in question. That document is dated in 1318: the battle of Byland happened, I believe, in 1322. Already at the former date, the ravages committed by the Scots, almost throughout the North of England, had been repeated as well as pitiless ; but in the year last named, after the defeat and execution of Lancaster, the King invades Scotland, is baffled in his attempts, his army reduced in strength by famine, and retreat is forced upon him. He is greatly harassed in his retreat, and the Scots make further and fearful raids into Northumberland and Yorkshire, advancing as far as Northallerton, which town is burnt by them. So far all is clear. But authorities, or rather, accounts, differ as to the place at which the King was surprised by the sudden advance of the foe, while at his dinner. Thus, Gill (p. 221) says that Edward “came to Byland Abbey, and encamped there ; that he was surprised while at dinner ; made his escape from the Abbey with great haste, crossing the country by way of Bridlington (!) to York, and his safety is attributed to the swiftness of his horse." The compiler named had previously given extracts from Leland and Hollingshead, in which Byland Abbey is mentioned certainly, but simply in the connection of being in the vicinity of the field of battle; while more than one of the Chronicles, on the other side, expressly mention Rievaulx as the scene of the surprise. But to notice first Lambarde's account: he says "King Edward II. gathered together a great armye, and passed a little way into Scotlande; but for want of good foresight he was constrained by famine to retyre, before he had done any notable exploicte. Now while he and his nobilitie in their retorne refreshed themselves at this Abbay (Rievaulx or Ryvers) newes was brought that the Scottes came after in great power, and no less hast. The Kynge and his nobles, myndinge more their meate then eyther the savetye of their subjectes or their owne honour, neglected the message; but the Scottes pursuinge egerly their attempte, came sodaynly in sighte, and compelled to shamefull flight the Kynge and his men, which never ceased till they had recovered Yorke for their succour. Some ascribe the hole fault to Sir Andrew Barkley [Harela or Harelay], then Earle of Carliel, which, having charge of 20,000 men for the Kynge's defence, converted their forces to pillage and robberie." Now this is entirely consistent with the record of the Chronicler of Lanercost, wherein, after mention made of the entry of the King of Scotland into England at Solewath on Sept. 30, the narrative continues: "Et per v dies jacuit ibi ad tria miliaria juxta

Karleolum, apud Beaumound ; et interim misit majorem partem exercitus sui ad destruendam patriam circumquaque, et postea processit in Angliam versus Blakehoumor ; quia propter difficultatem accessus, nunquam ibi prius venerat, nec partes illas destruxerat : tum quia certitudinaliter didicerat Regem Angliæ ibi esse. . . .

Andreaæ, autem, Rex adventum ejus scripsit, novo Comiti Karleoli, ut omnes boriales de Comitatu suo et Loncastriæ, equites et pedites, qui possent ad bellum procedere, congregaret, et veniret sibi in auxilium contra Scotos : quod et fecit, juncto sibi Comitatu Loncastriæ, ita quod habuit xxx millia hominum paratorum ad prælium. Et quia Scoti erant in parte orientali, duxit suos per partes occidentales, ut veniret ad Regem. Scoti vero villas et maneria in Blakehoumor incenderunt, et quantum poterant omnia vastaverunt, et homines captivos et spolia et prædas animalium abduxerunt. Comes autem Richmundiæ, Dominus Johannes de Britannia, missus cum suis ex parte Regis Angliæ ad explorandum Scottorum exercitum, de quodam monte inter Abbatiam de Rievalli[bu]s, ipsis subito occurrentibus et ex insperato supervenientibus, nitebatur cum suis, per lapides projectos, impedire ascensum eorum per quandam viam arctam et strictam in monte. Sed Scottis ferociter et intrepide ascendentibus super eos, multi Anglici per fugam evaserunt, et multi capti sunt, cum Comite supradicto. . . . Quod cum Regi Angliæ, qui tunc erat in Abbatia de Rivallis, innotuit, ipse, qui semper fuerat cordis pavidi et infortunatus in bellis, et qui fugerat ab eis præ timore in Scotia, jam fugam iniit in Anglia, vasa sua argentea et magnum thesaurum, præ festinatione, in Monasterio derelinquens, et cum suis usque Eboracum successit. Scotti autem cito postea supervenientes, illa omnia abstulerunt, et Monasterium spoliaverunt: et postea usque le Wald, ducentes secum Comitem, sunt profecti, et illam patriam destruxerunt fere usque villam Beverlaci; quæ redempta fuit, ne ab eis incenderetur, sicut villæ aliæ vastarentur.” It was at Rievaulx Abbey,<sup>1</sup> then, that the King was surprised, and once again the wastings and plunderings of such a war, so carried on, befell the hapless district, the monastery, its buildings and belongings.

It is impossible to pause over even a part of what is suggested by the series of extracts from the Public Records, printed mainly in the Appendix, or the various and most interesting, as well as detailed, Royal confirmations given in a later as well as in the earlier part of the volume, and of which it is little enough to say that they are not paralleled in the existing known records of any other abbey of the same grade, with scarcely any notable exception. But a very small amount only of examination and comparison is found to be sufficient to show, rather than merely to indicate, that there was a period—and probably under an energetic, the balance of evidence seems decidedly in favour of Rievaulx. Mr. Walbran fixes the date as on or about the 14th of October; having ascertained from the Close Rolls of 16 Edward II., that the king was at Forcet three days after leaving Barnard Castle, and that on the 8th and 11th of October he was at Yarm. Knighton's date is “circa festum S. Lucae,” and that is October 18th.

popular, and business-like abbot, as was notoriously the case at Whitby—of acquisition, closely followed, if not almost accompanied by, a period of consolidation, during which the temporal means of the Abbey were added to, enlarged, improved, and secured. That there were epochs of dispute and litigation in which the right was, and obviously, by no means always on the Monastery's side, of course is to be assumed. But, unquestionably, in the majority of the cases of appeal to the law, in whatever Court, of which we have memoranda in the following pages, the suits recorded were rather of what may be described in the more modern phrase of "friendly suits," than instances of the working of a simply litigious spirit. Again, when cases of dispute had arisen, once and again we find them referred to arbitration; and more than one of the cases of this kind afford reports which involve matters of a singularly interesting nature, and such as to excite a distinct desire to bestow critical investigation upon most or all the subjects contained in the case reported, together with all the side-issues or topics of discussion found to be directly or collaterally suggested. Of this nature, for instance, is the arrangement between the two houses of Byland and Rievaulx which is detailed in No. CCXLIII.

It remains now but to deal with the list of Abbots who are ascertained to have presided over the affairs of the Convent from its inception in 1132 to its dissolution in 1538. The subjoined catalogue will be found to vary very greatly from what may be termed the commonly accepted or accredited list. The latter, as given in

Dugdale and Burton, comprises thirty-one Abbots, who are indicated in the subjoined list by the Roman numerals in the second column. The numerals (Arabic) in the first column indicate the number of the Abbots who may be regarded as having actually presided over the affairs of the Convent, and the succession in which they came. Three names in the list, it will be observed, are printed in italics. The first of these, Waltheof, has no number of either kind prefixed to the name; for he does not appear in any of the accredited lists, and I am unable myself to see any reason whatever, even the slightest, for admitting Mr. Walbran's supposition that he was successively Abbot of Rievaulx and Melrose. The other two, Roger and Bernard, have the numerals iv. and v. prefixed to their names, because they find corresponding places in all the existing catalogues of the Abbots of Rievaulx. But they have no numbers prefixed in the first column, because I am not only unable to satisfy myself that they ever actually reigned, but I have (as I think) satisfied myself that no such Abbots could have possibly existed at the time alleged. It may further be remarked that Gill (Vallis Ebor.) gives a list of thirty-two Abbots, the explanation being that after No. XXI. in the accepted list (William v. in our list) he inserts the name of William de Langton, No. 23 in our list, but (equally with his predecessor, John i.) omitted by Dugdale and Burton. Thus it will be seen that, even allowing for the exclusion of Walbran's Abbot Waltheof, and the two who stand fourth and fifth in the accepted catalogues, the total number of thirty-six authenticated Abbots still remains. At least, if there may be assumed to be any doubt about either of them, it can only be in connection with Abbot Henry II., and probably it will be considered that the evidence in his case is scarcely such as to be passed over as utterly unsubstantial.

FIVE OFFICIAL SEALS USED BY ABBOTS OF RIEVAULX.

No. 1. Seal of Abbot William, died 1223.

No. 2. Seal used by Abbot Silvanus, appended to a Deed in connection with Coldingham.

NOTES TO LIST OF ABBOTS.

1. WILLIAM I.—Abbot at the date of the Foundation; he is named in No. CCXXXIV., which is addressed to Henry I., and therefore antedates 1135. He is also named in No. XLII., which we have seen reason for thinking (see above, p. xxxvii.) must be dated in 1145. William died 2d August 1145 (Chron. Mailros, p. 72), as quoted by Burton. The entry stands “A° MCXLV. obiit Willelmus, Abbas Rievallis, cui successit Mauricius,” on p. 166 of the copy I have collated.

2. MAURICE.—See the extract at the close of the last entry and add:—“Præfuit pro eo (Willelmo) Mauritius, a puero educatus in claustro Dunelmensi monachus, et ad disciplinam rigoris Cisterciensis, voto perfectionis, se transferens. Quo, post modicum, officio abbatis eodem fervore perfectionis renuntiante, substitutus est pro eo Ethelredus Abbas, præ(e)minentem gratiam in sermone sapientiæ adeptus a Domino” (Hexham Book, p. 149: sub anno Mcxlv.). There is a matter which presents itself for notice here, and calls for a measure of attention. In Memorials of Fountains Abbey, p. 4 n., Mr. Walbran writes: “The house (Rievaulx Abbey) occupied a dignified position until the period of its dissolution; and in the lifetime of its first Abbot, William, the friend of St. Bernard, who was succeeded by Waltheof, another friend of that illustrious man (Henriquez Fascic. S. Ordinis Cist., Lib. ii. p. 298), and the celebrated Aelred, sent out the colonies of monks etc.” And again, at p. 94 n., speaking of William, Earl of Albemarle, he says: “His kinsman, Waltheof, Prior of Kirkham, who had advised him to found the Abbey of Thornton, became indeed so much imbued with the Bernardine spirit as ultimately to join that body, and was successively Abbot of Rivaux and Melrose; but five years before Vaudey was founded, when the Earl entered the Chapter-House at York, as bearer of King Stephen’s command that Fitz-Herbert should be elected Archbishop of that See, he found Prior Waltheof and the assembled Cistercians among the opponents, for whom he had so little respect as to capture and confine certain of them shortly after, in his castle of Bitham.” As on the preceding page it is stated that Vaudey was founded in 1147, the date of the transaction thus recorded is 1142, at which time Waltheof was still Prior of Kirkham. There can also be little doubt that in 1145, and for some little time after—though for how long there is nothing to show—he continued to be Prior there. But inasmuch as Abbot William did not die until August 1145, and Ailred or Etheldred was Abbot before December 1147, it is obvious that Waltheof's occupancy of the abbatial chair, if he ever did occupy it, must have been of the briefest character. For it seems hardly possible to throw over entirely the statement of the Melrose Chronicler given above as to the fact that Maurice was Abbot for at least some short time, in succession to William. And, even so, we would have to ignore the equally precise statement of the same authority as to the immediate succession of Aelred to Maurice. But whether we admit or reject the allegation that Waltheof, late Prior of Kirkham, was for a time, however short, Abbot of Rievaulx, it is hardly possible to be blind to the possible illustration herein found, of that remarkable phrase in the cyrograph between Kirkham and Rievaulx, on which comment has been made at a previous page (pp. xxvi, xxvii): “Hoc quoque sciendum est quod nec a loco nostro volumus discedere, nec Priorem nostrum amittere, donec ea quæ inter nos constituta sunt ad debitum finem producta fuerint,” to say nothing of the final clause of the same document, which stipulates that the seceding Kirkham canons and brethren should have the same standing in the Chapter and Order of Cisteaux as any monk of the said Order. If the approximate date assigned to this cyrograph be correct (see above, pp. xxiv, xxv), it was too early by four or five years at least to think of losing their Prior in consequence of his “secession” to become Abbot of Rievaulx.

WALTHEOF.—See preceding note.

3. AELRED, AILRED, ETHELRED.—In Feodarium Prior. Dunelm., Preface, p. lx, he is specially named in a deed dated 1 Kal. December, 1147, as, together with Robert, Abbot of Newminster, acting as assessor to Bishop William de St. Barbara; and again, in another document, assigned to about the same date by the Editor, he is again expressly named in association with Abbot Robert of Newminster, and Priors Cuthbert of Gisburne, Richard of Hexham, and Germanus of Tynmouth. He is mentioned by name in the Privilegium Alexandri Papæ III. de Rievallæ (see p. 185), which is dated in 1160; he is also a co-signatory to No. CCXLVI., dated in 1164. “Aelred died in 1167 (Chron. de Mailros, p. 81), his obit being observed in the church of Durham on January 8th (Liber Vitæ, p. 141). We learn from Reginald that Aelred was at Kirkcudbright in 1164 (p. 178), and there seems to be no reason to question the date assigned for his death by the Melrose Chronicler" (Hexham Book, i. p. 193 n.). The entry in the Chronica stands: "A° Mclxvii., obiit piæ memoriæ Aldredus, III. Abbas Rievallis, cui successit Silvanus, Abbas de Dundraynan." It is impossible to overlook the distinctly precise statement that Aelred was the third Abbot of Rievaulx, which admitted, Waltheof's claim to be reckoned among the Abbots quite disappears. But over and above this, there are other considerations which I do not think ought to be ignored, as bearing upon Mr. Walbran's notion that Prior Waltheof of Kirkham became successively Abbot of Rievaulx and of Melrose. Mr. Walbran, as already noted (p. xxviii n.), states that Prior Waltheof was a kinsman of the Earl of Albemarle, and that it was through his (Waltheof's) influence that the latter founded the Religious House at Thornton. Assuming that identification to be ascertained, the Mailros Chronicler affords us abundant means of identifying the Abbot of Melrose who was distinguished by the same name. At p. 167 is the following entry:—"Anno Mclxvi., Walthevus, frater Henrici, Comitis Northimbrorum, et Simonis, Comitis Northamptonæ, factus est Abbas de Mailros," and on the following page "A° Mclix. obiit piæ memoriæ Waldevus, Abbas secundus de Mailros, iii non. Augusti, qui fuit avunculus Regis M[alcolmi], et Willelmus, ejusdem ecclesiæ monachus, ei successit." Dugdale, it is true, does not mention Henry, here described as "Comes Northimbrorum," but he names Simon, Earl of Northampton, and Waltheof, Abbot of Melrose, and names them as sons of Earl Simon St. Liz by Maud, daughter of Waltheof, late Earl of Northumbria, who, for her second husband, had King David of Scotland. He was succeeded on the throne of Scotland by his grandson, Malcolm IV., son of Henry of Huntingdon, who was thus half-brother of Abbot Waltheof. Hence the descriptive "avunculus Regis M." There can therefore be no reasonable doubt who Abbot Waltheof of Melrose really was, and that he was an utterly different person from Prior Waltheof of Kirkham.

4. SYLVANUS.—After Aelred in Burton's "Catalogue of the Abbots of Rieval," as fourth Abbot is named Roger, with the date 1175 prefixed to his name; and as fifth, Bernard, with the date 1180 affixed; and, as authority, is quoted "Willis's Hist. of Abbies, v. 2, p. 282; Lib. Rieval. p. 83; Johnston's MSS. v. K. i. p. 83." I have been so far unable to consult either of the authorities cited, but there would seem to be considerable difficulties in the way of accepting either the Abbots themselves, or the dates alleged as the dates at which they presided over the Abbey. For the document which is printed as No. CCXLIII. contains passages and dates such that the only reasonable construction which can be put upon them, so far as I am able to see, warrants the conclusion that Sylvanus was Abbot as early as 1170; and if that is so, it is unnecessary to dwell upon the certainty that the two Abbots inserted in the list here could have had no existence at the dates alleged. The document in question is headed, "Cyrographum pacis inter nos et Bellandenses," and in the preamble speaks of an arrangement made between the two convents through the provident caution of the Abbots Aelred of Rievaulx and Roger of Byland. It then proceeds to notice in detail divers matters which had been subjects of controversy between the two houses, but were amicably settled by the Abbots named, with a variety of conditions of a prospective nature, and connecting themselves with different and widely separated portions of the possessions belonging to the several communities in places where they chanced to have a common interest, many of which are alike interesting and instructive when the subject for consideration is the history of either of the two establishments named. After this the document proceeds thus:—"Cum autem hæc conventio pluribus annis ab utroque in multis conservata fuisset, A<sup>o</sup> ab Incarnatione Domini Mclxx, ne tepesceret caritas mutua, iterato replicata et arctius est roborata, additis quibusdam quæ in priore conventionem non continebantur, et hoc præcipue etc.," going on to specify certain claims by either party (which were to be finally dropped from that day forward), and to provide a mode of mutual arbitration for any occasions of dispute which might arise in the future. This done, and the penalties for infraction of the rules laid down provided, the document concludes thus:—"Hæc carta lecta est in utroque Capitulo, præsentibus Abbatibus, Domino Silvano Rievallense et Rogero Bellandensi, et tam ab ipsis quam utroque Capitulo in perpetuum confirmata." After long and patient consideration I find myself unable to dis sever between the date thus given and this public reading over and common ratification by the two Chapters of the Conventio or agreement. And if so, our conclusion is that Sylvanus was Abbot as early as 1170. And admitting this, while on the one hand the two dates quoted by Burton in connection with the alleged Abbots, Roger and Bernard, are effectually set aside, the interval during which either of them, or both, could have presided, is narrowed to the period occurring between Aelred's death in 1167, and the accession of Sylvanus, certainly before 1170. Burton gives 1189 as the year of his death, and as his authority cites "Chron. de Mailros, p. 178," adding that "he was buried at Byland." There are two entries relevant to him in the authority quoted, which are as follows:— "Anno Mclxxxviii: Silvanus, Abbas quartus Rievallis, villicationem suam Deo humiliter ac simpliciter resignavit, apud Dundrennan." Immediately in succession to this comes the entry:— "Anno Mclxxxix, Ernaldus, Abbas de Melros, electus est ad curam animarum de Rievalle, vi non. Martii, feria quinta." And then a third entry follows, touching the death of Silvanus— "Anno Mclxxxxi obiit piæ memoriæ Silvanus, quondam Abbas Rievallis, vii idus Octobris, apud Bellelande, ibique honorifice sepultus est." And there are three points to be noted here: first that Silvanus is specifically mentioned as the fourth in the succession of Abbots; second, that he resigned his overseership to God in the year preceding that of his death; third, that on his resignation he appears to have retired to Byland, where he died, and was honourably buried. His enumeration as fourth Abbot formally excludes Waltheof, Roger, and Bernard from the corrected list. Of the Abbot who succeeded Silvanus nothing seems to be known but his name, and for that Burton quotes Willis, as before in the case of Roger and Bernard.

5. ERNALD.— At this point I find myself compelled to deviate from the succession of Abbots as given in both Dugdale and Burton, not to mention other and less authoritative compilers. Thus Burton's list runs:—1. William; 2. Maurice; 3. Aelredus; 4. Roger; 5. Bernard; 6. Sylvan; 7. Godfrey; 8. Ernaldus; 9. William Punchard. On first dealing with this succession, I had written touching Godfrey: "Of the Abbot who succeeded Sylvanus nothing seems to be known but his name; and for that Burton quotes Willis, as before, in the case of Roger and Bernard." But it becomes necessary to modify this statement, inasmuch as at p. 181 of the Chronica de Mailros the following precise statement is found:— "Anno Mcciv, Dominus Gaufridus administrationem Rievallis suscepit." If this stood by itself its significance might not be so great. But it does not so stand. On the contrary, on the same authority, at p. 181, occurs the following entry:— "Anno Mexcix, Dominus Ernaldus cessit curæ pastorali, cui successit Dominus Willelmus de Punchard," the next entry after which is, "Anno Mcciii, obiit Willelmus, Abbas Rievallis." It is clear, then, that Ernald, having been elected Abbot in 1189, and very shortly after the resignation of his predecessor, Sylvanus, continued Abbot up to 1199, when he resigned, and was succeeded by William de Punchard, who dies from three to four years later. There is no room, therefore, for Abbot Godfrey, if there were an Abbot so named, until some time in 1203; and in 1204, according to the extract from the Melrose "Chronica" given a little above, it is stated that an Abbot named Gaufridus (or Geoffrey) became the ecclesiastical head of the House. Clearly then it must be assumed, not only that it is out of the question to insert an Abbot Godfrey between Sylvanus and Ernald, or between Ernald and William de Punchard, but that the only possible supposition is that the Abbot called Godfrey in the accredited lists of Abbots of Rievaulx must be identical with the Abbot called Gaufridus by the Melrose Chronicler, and that his proper place in the catalogue is immediately in succession to William Punchard. But to return to Abbot Ernald. He begins his rule as Abbot 2d March 1189; and in the next place, in his catalogue of the Priors of Wartre, Burton mentions Yvo as the fourth (with the date 1132 printed by mistake for 1192), and in his note thereto adds,—“Ivo de Wartre occurs Prior in A.D. 1192, being cotemporary with Ernald, Abbot of Rieval, and William, Prior of Kirkham, in the first year of the pontificate of Pope Celestine the Third.” Abbot Ernald's name occurs also among those of the witnesses to a charter by Bishop Pudsey, together with that of Abbot William of Newminster (Archbishop Gray's Register, S.S. p. 39 n.). For 1199 as the date of his resignation of the office of Abbot, and for the fact of the resignation itself, Burton quotes Chron. de Mailros, p. 181. But there is in the same record another entry which contains what is unquestionably a reference to Abbot Ernald, which is not altogether free from obscurity. It is on p. 180, and runs thus:—“Anno Mxciv, Dominus R[einerius], vii. Abbas de Melros, curam pastorem sigillo suo Abbati E[rnaldo] de Rievalle humiliter assignavit, scil., xv Kal. Octobris, i.e. Sabbato; cui successit Radulphus, Abbas de Kinlos.” From the date, there can be no hesitation about completing the name, the initial of which only is given; and the inference appears to be that the Abbot of Rievaulx was the person specially deputed to receive the formal resignation of the retiring prelate.

6. WILLIAM II. (Punchard).—For his accession, or, rather, the date of it, see last note. “Hæc est finalis concordia etc., coram Simone de Pateshulle, Eustachio de Faukenberg, Radulfo de Stokes', Justiciariis etc., inter Ricardum Malebyse, petentem, et Willelmum, Abbatem Rievallis, etc., de divisio inter Halmby et Laeschales, etc.” (Feet of Fines, 120 $\frac{0}{1}$ ). For the statement that he died in 1203 Burton cites Chron. de Mailros, ut supra.

7. GODFREY (more than possibly GEOFFREY).—See last notice but one.

8. GUARINUS.—“Hæc est finalis concordia etc., coram Ada de Port., Simone de Pateshulle, Godefrido de Insula, Henrico de Nor[hamton], Henrico Filio Herveii, Radulfo Hareng, Roberto de Perci, Alexandro de Point, Justiciariis etc., inter Emmam, quondam uxorem Gilberti de Sauteby, etc., et Guarinum, Abbatem Rievallis, etc., de tertia parte duarum bovatarum, etc., in Stitlum, etc. (Feet of Fines, 1208). “Obiit circiter 1211” (Burton, who refers to Mon. Ang., vol. ii. p. 19). But the Melrose Chronicler is more precise, the entry at p. 184 being “Anno Mccxi, obiit Dominus Warinus, Abbas Rievallis. Cui successit Dominus Helias, Celerarius ejusdem Domus.”

9. HELYAS.—Of this prelate, whom he gives as the eleventh Abbot, Burton says simply nothing, save that he resigned the Abbacy, for which statement he cites Chron. de Mailros, pp. 188, 194. The two entries thus referred to are these:—“Anno Mccxv, Dominus Helyas, Abbas Rievallis, suo cessit officio: cui successit Dominus Henricus, Abbas de Wardonia, vi idus Aprilis” (p. 188); and “electus est Dominus Helyas, quondam Abbas Rievallis, in Abbatem de Revesby, mense Decembris” (p. 194). There is no note as to the date of his election to Rievaulx.

10. HENRY I.—Of Abbot Henry, who is described as having been previously Abbot of Wardon, Burton says besides, in a note, that he died in 1216 at Ruchford, and was there buried, citing the Chronicle just named, p. 191; the entry quoted, under date 1216, being as follows:—“Obiit Dominus Henricus, Abbas Rievallis, apud Ruhford, ibidemque sepultus est: cui successit in regimine Dominus Willelmus, Abbas de Melros, ii kal. Septembris.”

11. WILLIAM III.—Burton describes him as previously Abbot of Melrose, and adds that he died in 1223; resting the statement again on the Melrose Chronicle as previously cited. The extract in the preceding notice makes it evident that he became Abbot in 1216.

12. ROGER.—Previously Abbot of Wardon. In Burton's

catalogue the date 1224 is prefixed to his number and name, his predecessor having died in 1223. "Hæc est finalis concordia etc., inter Rogerum, Abbatem Rievallis, querentem, et Ricardum de Sproxtona, deforciantem, etc." (Feet of Fines, 1226). No. CCXVII. is a similar document, dated January 1232, between Abbot Roger and William de Ros; No. CCCXII., dated Pentecost 1233, is a lease of the Poketo Mill to Newborough, bearing this Abbot's name; in 1234 there is a Finalis concordia between Abbot Roger and Robert le Bulur, with Amabel his wife; and yet again, there is another arrangement of the same kind, dated in 1235, between the same Abbot and Robert de Everingham and Isabella his wife, with interesting details as to the property involved in the case, the document being printed in the Appendix; and lastly, in the Coram Rege Pleas, Easter, 23 Henr. III. (123 $\frac{8}{9}$ ), Abbot Roger sues William de Ros for warranty of the Grif and Tilston lands, and other particulars of Espec's original grant. He resigned in 1239 (Chr. de Mailros).

13. LEONIAS (LEONIUS).—"Leonias de Dundraynon, a monk of Melros" is the entry in the Monasticon, with the date 1238 prefixed to the name, but without the usual citation of authority. The last note will suffice to show that the statement is one made, partly at least, in error. The Chronica entry touching his accession to the Abbacy is "Anno Mccxxxix, Dominus Rogerus, Abbas Rievallis, suo cessit officio, et Dominus Leonius de Dundraynan, et monachus de Melros, successit." According to the same authority (p. 203), he had been appointed Abbot of Dundrennan in 1236, the day before the feast of the Ascension; and, on the same page as stands the notice of his succession to the Abbot's stall at Rievaulx, is also the notice of his death: "Anno Mccxli, obiit venerabilis Leonius, Abbas Rievallis, vi idus Januarii; cui successit, post Pascha, Dominus Adam de Tilletai, Abbas."

14. ADAM DE TILLETAL.—Burton correctly (see last note) prefixes the date 1240 to his mention of this Abbot. The same date stands in No. CCLXXVII.; while in Fines dated in that year, and the following years, noted in the list, his name appears ten times at the least. No. CCCXXIII. is a fine dating in 1257, wherein Abbot Adam is the plaintiff, and William de Moubray the defendant; and finally, No. CCCXIV., dated in 1260, gives up his name as entering into a composition with the personage—Simon de Vere—who was in reality one of the principals mentioned in the last reference. In his case, again, Burton makes reference to the Chronicle of Melrose.

15. WILLIAM IV.—In a Fine levied in 1268, before Peter de Brus, and the other Justices then itinerant, William, Abbot of Rievaulx, was one of the parties, and Robert de Teesdale, with his wife Gundreda, the other. For his date, 2 Kal. Aug. 1275, Burton quotes Torr's MSS.; according to Placita Ebor., 1279-1281, he was summoned by William, Prior of Kirkham, to show cause why he should not permit the latter to have the pasturage in Bilsdale of which he had been dispossessed by Abbot Adam; and No. CCXLIX. is a Fine, dated in 1281, in which he is one of the principals, and John de Staingrave the other. But there is yet one matter which, in connection with this Abbot, remains to be glanced at. Burton's date and reference have already been quoted, and the question arises whether the 2 Kal. Aug., as alleged on the authority of Torr's MSS., may not be a mistake for 12 Kal. Aug. in the same year, when, from the following minute in Archbishop Gifford's Register, it is apparent he made his profession of obedience:—"Obedientia fratris Willelmi, Abbatis Ryevallis, facta apud Cawod sub datum xii Kal. Augusti, A.D. Mccclxx quinto, sub hiis verbis: Ego frater Willelmus, Abbas Ryevallis, subjectionem, reverentiam et obedientiam a sanctis patribus constitutam, secundum regulam S. Benedicti, tibi, Pater Archiepiscopo, tuisque successoribus canonice substituendis, et Sanctæ Sedi Ebor., salvo Ordine nostro, perpetuo me exhibiturum promitto." Such an entry admits of no doubt as to the fact and date stated. But on this admission depends the consequence that having been Abbot since 1268—and how much before that we do not know—he had allowed so many years to elapse previously to laying this obligation upon himself. Of course there is the hypothetical alternative that another Abbot of the same name had been interposed between him and Abbot Adam. A like postponement of profession occurs in the case of one or more of the Abbots of Furness, and the present, it may be, is not the only case of the kind among the Abbots of Rievaulx.

16. THOMAS I.—This Abbot stands 18th in the Monasticon Catalogue, and set before his name is the date Non. Dec. 1286, while the note of reference below is "Reg. William Grenefeld, archiep. Ebor., pt. 1st, p. 31." As Grenefeld was not Archbishop until 1306, there is obviously some confusion or mistake involved. Abbot Thomas made his profession at Wilton, iv Non. Februarii, in the first year of the Pontificate of Archbishop Romanus (Reg. fo. xxx<sup>b</sup>). This date must of necessity be Feb. 2d in 1287; for the Archbishop was consecrated at Rome on the 10th of February in 1286, and thus he could scarcely have been at Wilton on the 2d, and at Rome on the 10th, allowing for all the difficulties of so long a journey. But there is no doubt that Thomas had become Abbot in, or probably before, 1286; for, among the "Pedes finium. Ebor., 13-26 Edw. I." is one dated "in crastino Ascensionis Domini 14 Edw. I." between Abbot Thomas of Rievaulx and William de la Hay, acting on behalf of his wife, in re certain lands in Little Busby, etc.; and, inasmuch as this Fine has been accidentally omitted in the Appendix, I subjoin the following very brief abstract:—"Hæc est finalis etc. coram Thoma de Weylaund, Joh. de Luvetot, Will. de Brunton, Rog. de Leycestre, et Elia de Belingham, Justiciariis, etc., Inter Fratrem Thomam, Abbatem Rivallis, per Ric. de Perk, etc., et Will. de la Hay et Elenam uxorem ejus, etc., de uno mesuagio, etc., in Parva Buskeby," and other tenements in Staynburghe, Pyllaye, and Cuthworthe. In No. CLXXVIII. (printed in the Appendix) his name is found mentioned as Abbot in September 1291.

17. HENRY II.—This Abbot's name does not appear in Burton's list, or in any other with which I am acquainted. Still, there seems to be sufficient reason for inserting it in the present list. The authority depended on is an extract from the Clairvaux Chartulary given by Longstaffe in the Appendix to his "Darlington," pp. lxi, lxii, which runs as follows:—"6 Kal. Apr. 1301. Henry, Abbot, and the Convent of Ryevall, in public Chapter, . . . established three monks of their House to celebrate three masses for ever for the health and prosperity of life of their beloved in Christ, Master Simon de Clervaux, Rector of Lith, from that date, at three altars in their church, viz., at the altar of S. Matthew, where a mass of the Blessed Virgin is celebrated; at the altar of S. Martin the Bishop, where one for all the faithful departed is celebrated daily; and at the altar of the Blessed Thomas the Martyr, a mass; so that the three monks at the three altars, while Master Simon lived, should say a collect for his special health, viz., Deus, qui caritatis dona, etc., in a convenient place; and at a mass at S. Martin's altar aforesaid, to be daily celebrated for the soul of Sir Thomas de Clervaux, his brother, a special collect in like manner daily should be said, viz., Deus, cui proprium est, etc., in the same place, or other convenient place: but when Master Simon, whose prosperous life might the Highest prolong, should die, at the three masses celebrated at the three altars, a collect etc., Deus, cui proprium est, for the health of both the souls aforesaid."

18. ROBERT.—"In 1301 Robert occurs," is the Monasticon notice of this Abbot, and the reference is to "Addenda to Tanner's notitia, by Willis." This doubtless depends on an entry in Archbishop Corbridge's Register, fo. xxvi.; but the entry is made on a loose, or rather on an inserted, slip, and it finds its place on the fo. dealing with the acts of the third year of the Pontificate. This brings the profession of Abbot Robert into the year 1303 instead of 1301. The profession is made in the usual form.

19. PETER.—Prefixed to this Abbot's name in the Monasticon is "February 1307," with a reference to Archbishop Grenfield's Register, p. 86. I have met with no other mention of Abbot Peter.

20. THOMAS II.—The name of this Abbot has not been met with in any of the lists of Abbots of Rievaulx hitherto compiled. But there is no room for doubt as to the fact that he was Abbot "le utisme jour Daverille, lan du regne le Roy Edward fiths le Roy Edward utisme." (See No. cxlv.) This is one of the charters in Lord Bolton's most interesting collection, and, by its own date, it dates also the next in the series as printed, or No. cxlv<sup>w</sup>, in which the name of the same Abbot occurs again. On March 26, 1315, the transaction referred to in both these deeds was ratified by the other party to it, or Sir Henry le Scrope, and confirmed by the then Bishop of Durham. Five days later the Prior and Convent of Durham add their confirmation to the exchange specified; and there is also a confirmation by the King, dated March 10, 1315 (Pat. Rolls, Edw. II., pt. 2, m. 27). See No. 103 in the Appendix.

21. WILLIAM V.—Twenty-first in Burton's list stands Abbot William, and before his name is the date "June 1318." As authority for this an entry in Archbishop Melton's Register is cited, p. 228. My own reference is to fo. ccxxvii<sup>b</sup>. The entry is in the usual form, but subjoined is the following memorandum:—"Factæ fuerunt istæ professiones et benedictiones in Capella de Burtona prope Beverlacum, die Dominica proximo post festum S. Johannis Baptistæ, A. Gr. Mecc decimo octavo, et Pontificatus Domini Willelmi de Melton primo." This same Abbot William is a party to the Conventio with William de la Broc and his wife, Elena, which is the subject of the original deed belonging to the Rev. H. C. Holmes, of Birkby, and by him allowed to be printed in the present volume, No. CCCLVIII. There is also an entry in Dodsworth, lxiii., fo. 68, to the effect that Abbots Alred of Rievaulx and Roger of Byland were contemporaries, as also Abbot Silvanus of the former with the same Abbot of the latter. The entry then proceeds: "Willelmus Ellerbec, Abbas Rievallis, et Adam de Hustwait, Abbas Bellandensis, eodem tempore." Now the only Abbot of Byland named Adam appears to have been the Abbot who, according to the list given in Gill's Vallis Eboracensis, "had the King's letters of protection, Sept. 21, 1315." This entry then is of interest as giving the personal name of the present Abbot.

22. JOHN I.—In Patent Rolls, 4 Rich. II., pt. 2, m. 20, is an Inspeximus of a Confirmation by Edw. III., dated "vicesimo octavo die Junii, anno regni nostri primo" (1327), in which "Johannes nunc Abbas" is named. And on this authority the name of Abbot John is added to the previously existing list. The document cited is printed below. (See No. 99.)

23. WILLIAM VI.—In the list of Abbots of Rievaux given in Gill's Vallis Eboracensis, William de Langton stands as the twenty-second, and with the date 1334 prefixed to his name. No other information, however, is given. The voluminous and very interesting confirmation printed below as No. CCCLXXII., and which is derived from the Patent Rolls, 6 Edw. III., pt. 2, m. 23, was granted to "Willelmus nunc Abbas" on the 28th June in that year (1332). This was during Archbishop Melton's time, and his profession is found in that prelate's Register at fo. 260, where a note to the following effect occurs:—At Cawod, nones of Jan<sup>ry</sup>, 1334-5, the Archbishop issued a commission to Henry, Bishop of Lincoln, to give the "munus benedictionis" to William de Langton, Abbot elect of Rievaulx. William de Langton's name is not found in Burton's Catalogue.

24. RICHARD.—The profession of "Ricardus electus Abbas Monasterii Ryevallensis" is seen in Archbishop Zouch's Register, fo. clxii<sup>b</sup>, in the usual form, with the following Mem. appended:—"Et memor. quod primo die mensis Novembris, A.D. Mcccxlx., in Capella manerii sui de Cawode, Venerabilis pater, Willelmus la Zouche, Ebor. Archiepiscopus, etc., dictum Abbatem benedixit, qui quidem Abbas juravit obedientiam in forma suprascripta." I have met with no other instance in which Abbot Richard is mentioned.

25. WILLIAM VII.—1369. Patent Rolls, 43 Edw. III., pt. 1, m. 33. Exemplification touching the Pickering Manors. See App. No. 98. "1372. Add. MSS. 4937, fo. 52. Sigillum Willelmi et Conventus Ryevallensis cuidam scripto appensum dato apud Hamelak, die Veneris in crastino Nativitatis B. Johannis Baptistæ. Apud Belveir 19 August, 1732." His name is also met with in Patent Rolls, 3 Rich. II., pt. 2, m. 20, as Willelmus nunc Abbas, xx die Februarii (1380). See No. CCCLXXIII., p. 310.

26. WILLIAM VIII.—The date 1409 is inserted in the Monasticon before the name of the twenty-third Abbot, William, and the authority quoted is "Addenda to Tanner's Notitia, by Willis."

27. WILLIAM IX.—Archbishop Bowet's Register, pt. 2, p. 138, quoted by Burton; the date given being 18th Oct. 1419. Bromley is given as this Abbot's personal name.

28. JOHN II.—Willis' History of Abbeys, vol. ii. p. 28, is the authority cited for this Abbot, whose name is found, as well as that of his predecessor, in all the accredited lists.

29. HENRY III.—"Henry Burton, a monk of Sallay," is the accustomed way of noticing this Abbot, and the date, 10th Nov. 1423, is the date assigned, which depends upon an entry in the Register at York, "Sede vacante," p. 321. Also see No. CCCVIII., a document dated the Feast of All Saints, 1429, in which Henry is named as the then Abbot.

30. WILLIAM X.—Among the Conventual Leases, No. 876 is an agreement between William, Abbot of Rivaulx, and Thomas, Prior of Mount Grace, touching Morton Grange in East Harlsey. The date is Michaelmas 1436. "Occurs in 1443" is Burton's note touching this Abbot, and he gives a reference to Archbishop Kemp's Register, p. 421. The entry there (my note is p. 420<sup>b</sup>) is to the effect that John Inghelay was elected Abbot of Rievaulx, on the resignation of William Spenser, in 1449. This, while on the one hand it verifies the precise date at which Abbot William ceased (by resignation) to be Abbot, verifies also the fact that his personal name was Spenser. This is a circumstance calling for specific remark, for, as will be noticed more fully presently, the name of the Abbot who succeeded John Inkeley or Inghelay was likewise William Spenser.

31. JOHN III.—“5 April, 1449,” stands prefixed to this Abbot's name in Mon. Ebor., and with the same reference to Kemp's Register as in the case of his predecessor, which we have just noticed. His personal name was Inkeley, Ingelay (in Gill's Vallis Eborac.), or Inghelay.

32. WILLIAM XI.—In No. 101, which is an extract from the Close Rolls, temp. Edward IV., and which bears date July 31, 1471, William Spenser is distinctly named as the then Abbot of Rievaulx, and as assigning to John, Lord Scrope of Bolton, William, Lord Hastynges, and others, West Newton Grange, etc. The Abbot's name is mentioned in full in two places, and the document is precisely dated, as already named, so that there can be no doubt as to the fact, either as to name or time. And as Archbishop Kemp's Register is equally precise, it is abundantly clear that Abbot John Inghelay intervened between two Abbots, each of whom bore the same name. Of course, as the first of these vacated the Abbot's chair by resignation, the suggestion that the two Abbots Spenser were in reality one and the same person—the former Abbot having been re-elected on Inghelay's removal—may be made. But the supposition involves the improbability, as it will appear to many, that the man who had become Abbot by or before the year 1436 should have been so tenacious of life and vigour as to be able to endure the toils and anxieties of the abbatial position down to the year 1489 (or, from first to last, upwards of fifty-three years), when Abbot Burton assumed the government of the Convent. The last absolute mention of this Abbot occurs in 1487, on the 7th November, in which year he granted the lease numbered 880, involving the Conventual property in Teesdale.

33. JOHN IV.—Burton assigns the date 29th January, 1489, to this Abbot, naming him John Burton, and quoting Archbishop Rotherham's Register, p. 63, as authority. In Conventual Leases, No. 897, he is mentioned as granting a lease of lands in Harlsey to Prior Henry Eggluston (or Eccleston) of Mount Grace, and in No. 898 the date named is 1509.

34. WILLIAM XII.—In the Monasticon William Helmesley is given as the thirtieth Abbot, with the date 16th November, 1513, and a reference to the Register of Archbishop Bainbridge. In Conventual Leases, No. 895, dated 26th March 1526, he grants a certain corrody, the particulars of which are of some interest, having previously in 1524, according to No. 892, granted a lease of lands in Pickering Marrishes to Robert Hunter. In No. 873, much of which is illegible, he is recorded as having leased to William, Prior of Bridlington, certain lands called Campe and Twillynge, otherwise Twyndill.

35. EDWARD.—This Abbot's name is not mentioned by Burton, and therefore by none of his copyists. His name is found, together with that of Brian Higdon, appended to the Status Monasterii de Fontibus, printed in Memorials of Fountains, at p. 288 et seq.; and in the note on p. 296, Mr. Walbran states that he had not been able to ascertain how long or when the Abbot Edward presided." He is, however, repeatedly named in the Conventual Leases, beginning with No. 872<sup>a</sup>, which is dated 20th January, 1530. No. 889 is another lease by the same Abbot, granted in 1531. No. 896 is a grant by him to one George Coottes of the office of Conventual swineherd, dated in 1532; and No. 883, dated May 24, 1503, is a lease granted by him of land in the Marrishes. But there is much more than this to be said touching this Abbot, this being, perhaps, the most appropriate place for taking up a subject which, as I think it will be seen, connects itself most closely with him, standing, as he does, the thirty-fifth in our list. I hardly need advert to the current tradition—for at present, in some of its aspects, it is little more—that an Abbot of Rievaulx, no name being specified, was concerned in the Pilgrimage of Grace, and was in consequence executed for high treason. As an instance of the way in which this matter is dealt with by those who compile what they call "history" of what is styled the "local" sort, without taking the slightest trouble about authenticating the statements they make or repeat, I quote the following from Gill's Vallis Eboracensis, p. 312: "In 1536 an insurrection broke out in the northern counties, which was headed by the Archbishop of York and several of the nobles. This movement was called the 'Pilgrimage of Grace,' the banners of the insurgents being painted with the image of Christ crucified, and the chalice and host, the emblems of their faith. The rebellion, though somewhat formidable, was soon put down; and the leaders of the insurgents, among whom was the Abbot of Rievaulx, were apprehended and executed for high treason." The insurrection in question took place early in 1537, when Rowland Blyton, who lived to surrender the Abbey in the following year, was Abbot. Gill's statement is therefore a manifest misstatement. I think also that the same may be said about the alleged leadership of the alleged Abbot of Rievaulx. But let that pass. That there was an Abbot of Rievaulx condemned and executed for complicity in the Pilgrimage of Grace is probably certain; but that it was not the Abbot regnant at the time is more than equally certain. As to the former of these two allegations, Mr. Walbran (Memorials of Fountains, p. 273) writes: "Henriquez, in his Menologium Cisterciense, p. 185, says 'Nonis Junii, Londini in Anglia, passio beatorum Gulielmi Trust' [for Thirsk] 'Abbatis Fontanensis, et Abbatis Riveriensis, Ordinis Cistere., qui propter fidem etc.'" And in the following paragraph is added, "Gulielmus Trust, Abbas Monast. Fontanensis [et] Abbas Riveriensis ambo suspensi et in quatuor divisi partes." There seems to be no real doubt that this is the record of an actual fact. And I think that the reasons are quite equally valid for assuming that the Abbas Riveriensis thus spoken of was ex-Abbot Edward, or Blyton's predecessor, or (as he is described in writings of the time), quondam Abbas. There is, I think, no difficulty in the way of establishing the fact that there was such a person—that Blyton's predecessor vacated the office of Abbot by cession, and not by death. Mr. Walbran (Memorials, p. 260) publishes "A letter from Thomas Legh to Cromwell, respecting the conduct of William Thirsk, Abbot of Fountains, and the Abbot of Rievaulx," obtained from the Cott. mss. Cleop. E. iv. I have copy of the same from Dodsworth, xxvi. 10, headed:—"A breefe from Dalton [sic] Lee to Cromwell, 1 Sept." Mr. Walbran's note upon this letter—the bearing of which on the question now before us will be dealt with presently—is: "It appears from this letter, which was probably written in the autumn of the year 1535"—a date which I am inclined to think is fully two years too late—"when the first general visitation of the monasteries commenced, that the visitors had found occasion to depose the Abbot of Rievaulx, and that the king had commanded the Abbot of Fountains, who was then the Visitor-General of the Cistercian Order, to confirm or consummate their act. [This is misstated. The said Abbot was really, as will be seen below, one of the commissioners originally and specially employed.] His reluctance to undertake this and contingent duties mentioned in the two succeeding letters in the text was, no doubt, dictated by a strong sympathetic feeling with the offender, exemplified not only in the reports of their characters generally, but by the fact that they soon after joined the Pilgrimage of Grace, and died for that cause on the scaffold." Much of the pertinency of no inconsiderable part of this depends upon the date, which, as noted above, may be demurred to. For, in the first place, in 1535 Rowland Blyton was Abbot (see Conventual Leases, passim), and had been so from at least the very beginning of the previous year, and there was no question touching his deposition; and in the second place there is an abstract of the first of "the two succeeding letters" referred to by Walbran, in the "Calendar of State Papers," Henry VIII., vol. vi., and numbered 1408, with the date 1533 appended. At the end appears the further note as to date, "London, 8th November"; and it will be seen, on comparison of the contents of these two letters, one written in September, and the other in November, that they are entirely consistent with one another, and with the other facts of the case, one, and the most important of which, as to our inquiry, is that Abbot Edward was still Abbot up to the middle of 1533 (see Conventual Leases, p. 352, No. 883). With these preliminary remarks we may proceed to a more special notice of the letters given in the Memorials of Fountains, the first of which opens as follows:—"Pleasithe it your mastershypp to be advartesyed that, according unto your commandement, with most diligence I have deliverd your letter, also at tymes most convenient referryd unto the kyng's commysionars at Riwas sicke credance as yowr pleisar and equite wolde, whyche uppon the abbott of Funtans partt was butt lyghtly regardyd, and playnly expressyd of the same, that suche letter as I deliveryd and credance relatyd was from Mr. Crumwell onley, and nott from the Kinges hyghnesse, wherupon, . . . after evidence prove by wyttnessys, and the abbott of Rywas confession publishyde, the said abbot" (of Fountains, namely) "amonge other exceptions did laye this excepcion, Quod vigore literarum nulla commissionariis nec illorum alicui competit aut competere potest jurisdictio contra præfatum abbatem de Riwall, pro eo, videlicet, et ex eo quod dictæ litteræ regiæ fuerunt et sunt dolose, surreptitiæque, tacita veritate et expressa falsitate, per dolum et fraudem, ac hujusmodi serenissimi principis nostri circumventionem, impetratæ; who in hys obstinacie and parwarse mynde adhering to the rulles of hys religion, as he said, departyd from Riwas, and wolde nott, accordingly unto your letters, thare remayne for the accumplyshment of the kinges commandement . . . whyche rebellious mynde at this tyme is soe radicate, not only in hym, butt also in money of that religion, as in the abbott of Rywas wryting this letter here inclosyde to the slaundare of the kinges heygnes, and after the kinges lettars receivyd, dyd imprison and otharways punyche divers of hys brethern whyche ware ayenst him and hys dissolute liwing; also dyd take from one of the same, being a very agyd man all hys money . . . that as persons almost nothing regarding God and veri lityll owr grett maister the

Therefore, the kinges magiste consideryd . . . they wolde ether quykli be lokyd opou and shortly, or elles ther dessolute lywing with rebelliose demeanor shall every day increase more and more, to the dysplesor of God, &c. Thes premysses consideryd, I trust ye will thinke hym not worthe to be visitour of hys religion ony longer by the kinges auctorite. And in this cause of the abbot of Riwxax, the other commysionars hathe procedide according to the lawe, and yowr credence by me to theyme relatyde, and condignlie hathe remowynd hym from the rewllle of hys abbaie and admynistration of the same. . . . Wrytten in hast, the fyrst day off Septembar, from Belver." Without pausing to dwell upon the uncertainty as to what is to be understood by the "confession" of the accused Abbot of Rievaulx, we note here not only that divers loud and specific charges were brought against him, but that a formal inquiry, upon the oath of sixteen witnesses, had been made, and that the issue thereof had been the formal removal of him from the Abbot's chair by the other Commissioners, who, after the contumacious withdrawal of himself by the Abbot of Fountains from the Commission, remained to discharge the functions of his office. And now we pass on to the second letter, dated "London, the viiith daye of Novembre," and printed in the Memorials, p. 263, with the heading "A letter to the Abbots of Fountains and Byland concerning the election of an Abbot of Rivaux," and taken from a MS. in the Public Record Office, entituled "Paper Writings concerning Abbeyes." After the address, the letter proceeds: "And whereas it hathe pleased the King's highnes to directe his moste gracious letters unto you, nowe at this presente tyme, for the elecction of a newe Abbote of Ryvaulx, wherin his grace hathe bene advertised ye have not heretofore indevored youreselves in th' accomplishement of the same according to his said lettres and commaundement, wherof I marvaile not a little that ye wold incurre his high displeasure for the none executing of the same; therefore I hertely requyre yo, and nevertheless doe advise you, in exchewing of further inconvenyences and dis-pleasures that may thereby ensue, all affections sette aparte, ye doo accomlishe the said eleccion according to the tenour and purporte of his most gracious letters directyd unto you and to the convente of the same monastery in that behalf." In this letter we note the direct charge of delay in the execution of the mandate addressed to the Abbots named for the election of a successor to the Abbot spoken of in the last letter as removed from his office, the imputation of personal motives—interest or affection—as having led to such delay, and a peremptory order to interpose no further delay, but to proceed at once in conjunction with the Convent to the election of a new Abbot. The third letter it may be better to preface by the insertion of the following letter from the Cromwell Correspondence (Second Series), xxii. fo. 467 :—"In my humlest maner, according to my dute, I commend me to your mastershipp, intimating thys same that, on Sanct Nicolesse day, the Abbott quondam of Ruffurth was installeyt at Ryvax, qwaras the late Abbott of Ryvax song Te Deum att hys installation. Hys resignation was exhebeytt by him the same day to . . . . bbottes, but hys assignation off a pencion hys put to my Lord off Rutteland, in the weche, as in all other heretofor, I haue moneyt hym to folow your advyse and determination, and althoff pete at all tymys ys good to be shuytt, zett ytt hys most necessare yn extremyte or nede; tharefore I wold he had a honeste leyffing, nottwithstanding he hays evyll deserveyt ytt, other to my sayd Lord or me. Thus, Jhu send you longe lyeff with good felicite. The x day off thys month att York. In hast.

By yours in body and mynde
Thomas Ley. D.

I instantly (as a evyll soliciter) desyre your mastershypp to remember yonge Mr. Wyllam Parre byll; and all the contre hys glad off the nue Abbott, and prays for thame that helpeyt therto.

"Endorsed To hys most assureyt good Mr. Master Crumwell, one of the Kynges honorabyll concelle."

Here then we have the practical reply to the peremptory mandate conveyed in the last letter noticed. On St. Nicholas' Day (December 6th) a new Abbot was installed at Rievaulx, who had previously been the Abbot at Rufforth, and the ex-Abbot had sung the Te Deum at the installation, having previously exhibited his own resignation to certain Abbots present—we may surely presume the Abbots before named in this matter—the assignation of a pension for his sustenance being a matter

yet to be arranged. And it is in the third letter above referred to that the arrangement in question is dealt with. It is given by Walbran on the same page as the second in the series, and is headed "A letter of the Abbots of Fountains and Byland to Thomas Cromwell. From the original in the Public Record Office ; Chapter-house papers, vol. C., 2. 4. p. 34." It begins : "Right Worshipfull, in our most humble wyse accordynge to our bownden dewtye, we recomende us vnto your goode maistership, certifyinge the same, that we have receyved your lettres by the hands of the late father Abbott of Rievaulx, berer hereof, the contentts whereoff perceyvinge and your mynde with all in it behalf, accordynge to our dewtye and fourme (sic) our Religion, dide call before us at Ripon, the sevent day of May, the now incumbent abbott of Rievaulx, and also the late abbott of the same beyng present ; also, at that same tyme, as coassisting with us, the Abbott of Kirstall. Ande, after diverse comunicacions hadde, fynally we dyde conclude in this maner : That is to say, that the late fadre Abbott shulde have yerelye xliiii li. sterlynge of the sayde Monastery of Rievaulx under the Convent seille, duryng his naturall lyff, als well as cowth be dyvysed by his lerned cowncell after the forme of lawe, at the festes &c. . . . by evyn porcions, and this to be sealed &c. And thoughe of veray trewth there was more large somme of money offerde to the said laite fadre yerely heretofore, gitt that notwythstandinge, he was and is contented to accept that somme, at ower requests ande desyres. Then after, when hys wrytyngs was maide up accordyngelye and browght for to be sealed, the said Abbott of Rievaulx, nowe incumbent, mayd therein delay, and so doith as gitt, the cause thereof to hus is uncertayne, and not a lytyll we marvell that he kepith not his sayde promisse. Wherfor we thought best to certifie your gudnes &c. . . . At our monasterys of Fountaunce ande Bylande, xxviiiith day of May,

Wylliam th' abbot off Fontanys
John th' abbot of Byland."

Upon moderately attentive review of all this, laying due weight on the authenticated facts that Abbot Edward was still Abbot up to May 24th, 1533, and that Rowland Blyton was Abbot before February 26th, 1534 (he granted two leases on that day), we see that there is no difficulty in assigning the year 1533 as the year in which, on September 1st, Legh's report to Cromwell touching the deposition of the Abbot of Rievaulx was made ; in which also, on November 8th, the sharp reprimand (from "Cromwell or one of his agents," as Walbran suggests) to the Abbots of Byland and Fountains on account of their delay in proceeding to fill the vacancy occasioned by the said deposition, was despatched; and in which further, on December 6th, the newly-elected Abbot was formally installed at the Convent Church of Rievaulx; the assignation of the pension to the late Abbot dating—or rather being reported as arranged—on May 7th in the following year.

36. ROWLAND.—Burton calls the last Abbot Richard Blyton, and Gill inserts the name as "Richard (or Rowland de) Blyton." However, there is no real uncertainty as to what his name was. It occurs almost twenty times in Conventual Leases, and always under one or other of the forms Roland or Rowland. The earliest mention of him I meet with there is in No. 894, dated February 26, 1534, and the latest in No. 885, dated July 14, 1538. Nos. 893 and 871 are both dated in the same month, and Nos. 881 and 890 both in the preceding June. But from what is said in the preceding note, it is clear that he had been previously Abbot of Rufforth, and that his election took place between the middle of November and the 6th December in 1533.

I have now but to express my sense of obligation to all who have kindly assisted me in the compilation of the present volume. To Lord Bolton especially am I indebted for his great courtesy and kindness in giving me access to the very interesting series of deeds connected with the grants made to the Abbey in Wensleydale, the existence of which was not previously known; to Canon Raine for the loan of the instructive document connected with the fabric of the Abbey at, or closely after, the period of the Dissolution; to Mr. W. H. St. John Hope for his most helpful annotations on the same; and above all, to Mr. William Brown of Arncliffe Hall, for almost invaluable help in not only in revising the proof-sheets, but copying out for me not a few of the most interesting, and at the same time the longest, of the documents published in the entire volume. To him I owe the long Inspeximus of Edward III., the copy from Ministers' Accounts, and not a few of the extracts from the Public Records quoted, and notably the Conventual Leases. Nor must I omit to acknowledge my indebtedness to Mr. Henry Rye, without the aid of whose practical knowledge and observation I should have been ill able to unravel the mystery attending the repeated mention made in the Cartularium of the "fossata," "guteria," and "insula" at Rievaulx, and the practical meaning and application of the same.

DANBY, November 9th, 1888.

ADDITIONAL NOTES ON THE FABRIC INVENTORY.

By the kindness of Mr. W. H. St. John Hope, of the Society of Antiquaries, I am permitted to avail myself of certain notes touching divers entries in the Fabric Inventory printed at p. 334 et seq.

On page 334, touching the entry "The rode loft," he writes: "A great loft stood under the eastern arch of the tower, and high up above it are the holes for a rood—or candle—beam."

"The Stallys. The stalls occupied the two western bays of the eastern arm, and terminated at the fifth pier. Between the fourth and fifth piers is the gradus chori, and immediately to the west the 'upper entrance' into the choir from the aisles. Behind the stalls, and extending for five bays from the tower, are clear traces of the Cistercian longitudinal stone wall, with north and south choir doors. It probably returned behind the High Altar (which stood in the third bay), and was, clear of the stalls, arcaded along its front. In illustration of this, note the bases."

On pp. 335, 336, are notices of five altars situate at the east end of the choir, or rather of what would be the east end if the church had had the usual orientation; and with respect to these Mr. St. John Hope says: "The pinholes for the reredoses of the five eastern altars are very plainly seen. The five altars were divided from each other by perpent walls of stone, nine feet long and one foot thick, which were continued westwards with timber to meet a great cross screen or parclose. Each altar stood on a platform one step high, below which was a small floor drain. A little to the west are two steps running right across the Church, but clear of the eastern face of the first pair of piers, and on the top step was the parclose that extended from one side of the church to the other, and partitioned off the five altars. The parclose was thus also clear of the piers which have no cuts or marks on them."

The pinholes for the "loft of tymber on the baksyde of the high altar with a sele under it of wood" still remain in the piers.

Mr. Hope's note pertinent to the "Image of St. Cristofer in a tabernacle sett between these two chapels" (p. 336) is, "It is not clear whether this was in the transept or in the aisle ; but I think in the transept in front of the pier, which is somewhat cut about."

"The western arch of the south aisle of the choir was screened ; all three of the arches on the east side of the north transept were partitioned off by screens as high as the capitals, as is attested by the cuts which have been made there ; and the arch from the south aisle of the nave into the transept was filled with a wooden screen."

Mr. Hope's comment on the uncertain word in the sentence—"A place of three hows of tymber" (p. 338)—is, "was not this a place of 'three howse high,' that is, three storeys divided into compartments for books ? Perhaps they had a portable ladder instead of a vice."

"The 'dorter' (p. 339) of course extended southwards from the transept over the Chapter-House, etc. As to the 'second dorter,' the site is not quite certain. Probably over the buildings forming the north side of the farmery cloister. Or it may have been the domus necessaria or rere-dorter. Cf. the 'third dorter' at Canterbury."

Touching the Frater and its windows the remark is, "The number of these windows does not agree with what there was, and actually still is ; and nothing is said about the great undercroft below the Frater."

The Convent kitchen was on the west of the Frater, as at Fountains, Tintern, etc., and had a hatch to pass food through.

As to the "Garnare on the west of the Cloyster" (p. 340) : "The building usually met with in this position is the great range found at Fountains, Beaulieu, Byland, Kirkstall, etc., assigned to the conversi. . . . Here they probably used as their dining-hall the undercroft of the Frater. But where did they lodge ? The 'garnare' at Rievaulx is so narrow—less than twenty feet—I thought it might really be the 'lane' found at Citeaux, Clairvaux, and Pontigny ; and, in England, at Beaulieu, Byland, and Kirkstall ; and originally, as I have discovered, at Fountains also ; but the windows and doors in the west wall seem to negative the existence of a 'cellarium' on the west of it."

Mr. Hope thinks that the "house for evidence" was somewhere near the chapter-house ; and as to "the long house between the hall and the dorter," he inquires : "Was this the great rere-dorter, or the room over the north side of the farmery cloister ?"

"The chambers at the south end of the hall" (p. 341) may have been the rooms in the east end of the rere-dorter. They communicated with the farmery hall, and form three floors, one over the other."

It does not appear to be certain where the "great chamber," the "three romys north thereof," the "parlour," the "entry to the church chamber," and the "church chamber" itself, were situate; but Mr. Hope seems to think that these five entries all refer to the rooms between the great hall and the church. The next entry, however, touching the "abbottes dyning chamber," is characterised "as of great interest, as showing that, at the last, the Abbot lived in the farmery. That cottage to the east may be the 'abbottes chappell,' although originally the farmery chapel. The 'chapell without the gate' still stands. There is also one at Croxden, and one has also been found at Fountains."

CORRECTION OF A MISTAKE AS TO DATE.

MR. HENRY ORDE-POWLETT has very kindly pointed out to me that I have been misled, not in seeking to identify William le Skrop, the grantor of the charter numbered CXLV<sup>J</sup>. with the William le Scrope mentioned in the note, p. 97, but in my inferential dating of the deed itself. He writes: "I find Hugo, Rector of Brancepeth, granted lands to Henry Scrope, son of William Scrope, in 1308, and mentioned in that connection in four different deeds among the Bolton collection. Hugo de Ask, another of the witnesses (to No. CXLV<sup>J</sup>.), as I know from another Bolton deed, was alive in 1293, as also Hasculphus de Cleseby, then Receiver of Richmond. Robert de Tyndale, also, and William Ruddekyn were both living at the end of the thirteenth and beginning of the fourteenth centuries." There would therefore be no question as to the impossibility of identifying Reginald Chubbe (see note <sup>3</sup>, p. 95) with Reginald de Bolton, otherwise Reginald FitzWalter, who must have belonged to an earlier generation.

<sup>6</sup> This is almost certainly the Placitum indicated in what is contained under No. VIII., the date of which is 1251-2. For, in the first place, "Rogerus quondam Abbas" had been Abbot down to 1235 certainly; and possibly from two to three years longer: while, in the second place, factum in curia Domini Regis apud Westm., inter Rogerum, quondam Abbatem Ryevallensem, prædecessorem prædicti Abbatis, conquerentem, et prædictum Willelmum, deforciantem, de quatuor carucatis terræ, cum pertinenciis in Griff, et v carucatis terræ in Tillestona, et de communa pasturæ et bosci in Halmelac et Pokeleia, unde cyrograffatum etc. Unde idem Willelmus queritur quod cum prædictus abbas debeat habere, per prædictum finem, in boscis et tenuris de Halmelac et Pokeleia, exceptis veteri parco ad orientem de Halmelac et alio parco ad occidentem de Halmelac (qui vocatur La Hay), et bosco de Plocwode, communam herbagii et pessonæ,<sup>1</sup> et communam bosci et maremii tantummodo, prædictus Abbas contra prædictum finem scindere facit husagium<sup>2</sup> ad boves et vaccas suas, aliquando circiter xxx caretatas, aliquando circiter xl caretatas, et illas asportare facit, et etiam colligere facit de glanis<sup>3</sup> et nucibus in prædictis boscis circiter xii quarteria, et aliquando circiter x quarteria, et asportare facit; et similiter prosternere facit arbores in prædictis boscis, et facit carbones

William de Ros, the first of the name, son of Robert Fursan, had succeeded his father in the barony in 1226-57, and was still living in 1257. He is therefore identifiable by the circumstance that he is mentioned below as "idem Willelmus" and concerned in a plea with a successor of Abbot Roger's, touching a fine to which the said Abbot Roger and himself had been parties.

In charta anni 1287, ex Chartulario Archiepiscopi Bitur., fo. 104, v<sup>to</sup>—'Dicta armenta nostra ducemus semper eundo et transeundo sine aliqua mora, donec sint extra glandes seu pesson: et si aliqua armenta nostra evaserint, vel casu remanserint intra la pesson, durante mense, etc.' PAISSO. PESSONA. Charta Guillelmi Catalaunensis Episcopi, anno 1225: 'Ita quod illi qui excolunt illas terras in nostris nemoribus de Marchesvilla usuarium suum habebunt libere et quiete: viz. nemus vivum ad herbagium, et nemus mortuum ad calefaciendum, et pessonam porcorum suorum, et pasturam aliorum animalium suorum ibidem in domibus suis nutritorum . . .' Charta Rotroci, Comitis Perticensis, anno 1136: 'Pasturam glandium et pessonam ac pasnagium pro suis porcis ac animalibus quibuscunque, etc. . . ." Mon. Angl. vol. ii. p. 231: "Quod . . . homines sui in bosco de Dersley apud Cruche, pessonam—scil. glandes et nuces virgis et cortis excusserint." Ib. p. 113: "Quod habeat decem porcos in tempore de pesson in bosco meo."

de prædictis arboribus in diversis locis; et similiter prosternere facit circiter xxx quercus vel amplius tempore seve,<sup>1</sup> et eas excoriat, et vendere<sup>2</sup> corticem, et dimittit illas quercus jacere in prædictis boscis quousque fuerint desiccatae. Dicit ergo quod contra eundem finem comburi facit brueriam in pastura infra prædictos boscos ad magnum detrimentum prædictæ pasturæ: Unde dicit quod per hoc quod non tenuit prædictum finem deterioratus est et habet dampnum ad valorem c librarum, et inde producit sectam, et profert cyrographum inter eos confectum in hæc verba, etc. Et Abbas, per attornatum suum, venit et defendit vim et injuriam, quando etc.: et bene cognovit prædictum finem, et quicquid in eo continetur, et bene defendit quod nunquam excoriavit vel excoriarum fecit aliquas quercus in prædictis boscis plus quam necesse habuit ad usus suos proprios, tam de mairemis quam de bosco ad ardendum. Et similiter bene defendit quod nunquam aliquam glanam collegit vel asportari fecit sicut ei imponit: et hoc paratus est defendere contra ipsum et sectam suam sicut Curia considerat. Et ideo consideratum est quod vadiat ei legem xii<sup>ma</sup> manu. Et venit cum lege, die Jovis proximo post Octabas S. Martini, pleg. de lege Ricardo le Chauncell[or], Herberto de Haukeston. Et dictum est attornato prædicti Abbatis quod venire faciat prædictum Abbatem in propria persona sua ad dictum terminum ad faciendum prædictam legem. Post venit prædictus Abbas et facit legem suam, et ideo consideratum est quod prædictus Abbas inde vadat sine die. Et Willelmus in misericordia. Et de scissione husagii, collectione nucium, et de carbonibus faciendis, et de combustionem bruerii in pastura in prædictis boscis, dicit prædictus Abbas quod ipse et omnes prædecessores sui, a fundatione Domus suæ, extiterunt in seisinâ semper scindendi husagium in hyeme ad boves et vaccas suas, et colligendi nuces, et faciendi carbones ad usus [2<sup>b</sup>] suos proprios, et comburendi bruerium in pastura infra prædictos boscos, et ante confectionem prædicti finis et semper postea: et petiit iudicium desicut ipse et prædecessores sui ante confectionem prædicti finis, et semper postea, extiterunt in seisinâ scindendi husagium, colligendi nuces, carbones faciendi, et bruerium comburendi in pastura infra prædictos boscos, nisi in præ-

<sup>1</sup> This is so clearly written that there can be no doubt it stands either for sene or for seve. I conjecture that the latter is the word intended, and that it is a Low Latin presentment of the ordinary English sap. Compare O.H.G. saf,

G. saf. It hardly needs be remarked that it is usual to fell oaks in the time of sap.

<sup>2</sup> This is so written, and as it is possible to make it depend on facit, as sternere does, I leave it so.

dicto fine aliqua fit mentio per quam excludatur quominus ea in prædictis boscis habere debeat, si per prædictum finem eidem Willelmo debeat respondere, et profert quandam cartam sub nomine Roberti filii Everardi de Ros in qua continetur quod [idem] Robertus dedit et carta sua confirmavit Deo et Ecclesiæ Beatæ Mariæ de Ryevall et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus, . . . locum illum in Rycalvegray[ne]<sup>1</sup> ad carbones et carbonarios suos, quem tenuerunt tempore Everardi patris sui, Tenendum et claudendum et utendum sicut voluerint in perpetuum, liberum et quietum ab omni exactione et servitio—qui locus habet viii perticatas in longitudine et iiii pert. in latitudine. Hunc autem locum dedit eis pro escambia<sup>2</sup> totius communæ quam sibi quietam clamaverunt in bosco et in terra juxta villam de Halmelak, ad australem partem viæ qua itur ad Halmelak et ad Ryevallem extra fossatum et murum eorum extra fossatum sarti eorum sicut nemus tendit a barra<sup>3</sup> de Halmelak usque ad Ryam. Concessit etiam illis claudere muro vel fossato locum illum divisæ suæ

<sup>1</sup> This is written 'Rycaluegy,' y being the final letter, and the mark of contraction over the two last letters. The name is met with again in a Confirmation by Edward III., obtained from the Patent Rolls, an abstract of which will be given in the sequel, and there the reading is 'Ricolvegraines' beyond doubt. Touching the locality itself, the editor of Kirkby's Inquest, at p. 117 n., writes—"Ricolf, the Ricalf of Domesday-Book, a lost vill, which may have stood on Riccal Moor, near the spot where the road to Nunnington crosses the river Riccal, and about half-way between Muscoates and Harome." Perhaps the termination "grains" is one which may be held to justify something in the way of comment or notice. It is not a word unknown in the way of helping to form a local designation. Thus, in the parish of Egton there is a certain area, or subdivision of the collective whole of the township, called Egton Grange. But, as the editor has observed in a note to p. 153 of vol. iv. of the North Riding Records, there neither was nor could be any "grange" (that is, a farming establishment, whether monastic or other) at the place so called. An Indenture of Conveyance, however, dated in 1620, discloses the fact that in the name which is now written and called Egton Grange, the latter or terminal part was then written Grain, as also that there were several "grains" in the locality indicated, and that the total area involved was of considerable extent. And "when one remembers what the north-country word 'grain' implies, as in the grains of a fork, the grains of a tree, or the O.N. haf's grein, an arm of the sea, there is no difficulty in conceiving its application to the branchings of a stream, or of the valley which supplies its bed." No doubt Ricolvegraines was a locality embracing a spot involving the—so to say—confluence of two or more sub-valleys, or grains.

<sup>3</sup> What the Barra de Hamelak may have been must perhaps remain uncertain. Bearing in mind what the Bars at York, Scarborough, Boston, etc., were, but more particularly at such towns as those last named, which were not "fortified" in the proper sense of the word, we have to assume that there was a gateway of the same character at Helmsley, at the place indicated. I do not think it can be identified with the gate of the castle.

ubi aqua de Depedale et Litelbee simul veniunt de qua conventio fuerat inter eos, etc. Postea, coram Domino Rege etc. ut in fine libri.

XLII. [24] I. CARTA WALTERI ESPEC DE RIEVALLE.<sup>1</sup>

Espec's charter of foundation, granting land in Helmsley and Bilsdale to the Abbey

In nomine S. et Individuæ Trinitatis, Walterus Espec<sup>2</sup> universis S. Catholicæ Matris Ecclesiæ filiis, salutem. Notum sit omnibus vobis me dedisse et concessisse, concessu Henrici, Regis Anglorum, et consilio Aalinæ uxoris meæ, Deo et Ecclesiæ S. Mariæ de Rievalle, in manu Willelmi Abbatis, et fratribus ibidem Deo servientibus, pro Dei amore et salute animæ Regis Willelmi Anglorum, et pro salute Henrici, Regis Anglorum, et omnium parentum suorum, et pro salute animæ patris mei et matris meæ, et pro anima Hugonis de Wildecher, et pro animabus patris et matris uxoris meæ, et omnium parentum et antecessorum nostrorum, novem carrucatas terræ—scil. terram de Grif, ubi sunt quatuor carrucatæ, et terram de Thillestona, ubi sunt quinque carrucatæ, cum omnibus appendiciis et rebus eisdem terris pertinentibus, in boscho et plano et pastura, et pratis et aquis, et omnibus aliis locis, bene et in pace, et honorifice et libere et quiete de omnibus consuetudinibus et auxiliis et assisis et occasionibus et placitis et querelis, et omni terreno servitio, in perpetuum tenere—his divisus, scil.:—Ab eo loco ubi Sperragata<sup>3</sup> venit ad Riam, omnem aquam usque ad Fanga-

<sup>3</sup> Owing to the impossibility of precise identification of any but a limited portion of the places named in the verbal delineation of the boundaries—for there are two, the eastern and the western—of this the original or foundation grant to the nascent abbey, it is not practicable to obtain more than a general idea of the absolute outline of the area of lands granted: and all that will be attempted in the present series of notes will be to indicate what may be looked upon as the probable identification of some of the places named, or to point out the vicinity in which, as it would seem, others have to be looked for, or, as is the case with only too many of them, simply to say that, so far, there is no clue to their identity. As regards the name to which this note is appended, while it must be admitted that no certain identification can be assumed, still it is hardly one of those of which it can be said that there is “no clue to their identity”; for it must be observed, first, that both the eastern and western boundaries are made to take their commencement therefrom; and, second, that it is obviously, not to say necessarily, the name of a road—I think indeed, of an established or recognised road, a via regia or King's highway. The confusion between the ideas conveyed by the old word gate, meaning the ‘way gone,’ and the newer application of it to that which crosses, stops, or bars the ‘way gone,’ is so generally prevalent in our minds, in these modern days, and leads on to such uncertainty, that it is by no means easy to the general reader to lay hold on this elementary statement. But so it is. However, here it must suffice to remark that the distinction is very clearly implied in a very large number of names of which Micklegate Bar, Walmgate Bar, and others, in York, Bargate in Boston, Barstreet in Scarborough,

may be taken as examples. In all these there is the element "gate" (or street, the via strata) to convey the idea of the 'way gone,' and "bar" (the modern gate), that of the obstructing, stopping, barring the 'way gone.' Taking Sperragata, Sperrgate, then, as implying the fact that it was a recognised road or highway, and connecting it with what follows, we are thrown upon the conclusion that, as crossing the Rye under the given conditions, it must have crossed it, practically, at or near the spot now occupied by Rievaulx Bridge. The boundary line, starting from this point, and running so as to include, of course, Griff, with its four carucates, and Thilleston—which I identify with the present Stiltons—with its five, would run along the wood at the foot of the hill surmounted by the farm now called Abbot's Hagg (and called so because of this very wood) through Quarry Bank Wood, to where the—as it may be called—accommodation road from the farm called Griff falls into the road leading thence to Sproxton Mill; from which line, at some point undefined, and now undefinable, it would take its course, in a more or less northerly direction, to the confluence of two streams, one running through Deepdale, and the other called Littlebec, but now, as it would seem, differently named. But we must leave this part of the "divisæ" for the present.

and that almost certainly designates what is now called Bilsdale Beck, and is, one may say, the most important tributary to the Sefh. Following the track thus indicated, we find a modern Fangdale Beck a very little more than a mile south of the junction of the Ledge Beck with Bilsdale Beck. When Fangdale is reached, it will be observed that the boundary line deviates from that of the water-courses it has hitherto followed. In other words, it turns to the west along, or through, Fangdale, but still along a perfectly definite line—"sicut divisæ sunt inter me et Steinton." This will be better dealt with in the note next in order.

inde supra clivum montis quantum meae divisae tenduntur versus Clivelandam, et subtus clivum montis a monte qui vocatur Traneshof<sup>1</sup> per vallem quae dicitur Landesmere<sup>2</sup> usque ad aquam quae currit per Bildsdala: hæ sunt divisae a parte occidentis. Ex parte vero orientis, a supradicta Sparragata per eam usque ad illam viam qua itur de Grif ad molendinum de Sproxton, et inde per viam qua itur inter duas Haias—scil. illam de Grif et mediam Haiam, usque ad sartum, et inde totam vallem usque ad parvam Haiam de Thilleston, et inde inter planum de Thilleston et oram nemoris usque ad quandam fossam e contra ubi Depedala<sup>3</sup> et Lithlebec<sup>4</sup> conveniunt, et inde totam vallem Lithlebec usque ad Raudepade,<sup>5</sup> et inde per viam met with in the precise vicinity where it is wanted to suggest such identification, inasmuch as it lies about a mile slightly to the south of west of Fangdale. Hence, as is evident on comparing the description given in the document before us with the map, the boundary line would strike across to what is now the march between Bildsdale and Sniles-worth Moor in the parish of Arden, following it, it is likely, to the angle at which it diverges rather more to the westward of north, at which point the very considerable elevation of 1326 feet is obtained, with a conspicuous tumulus on its summit.

<sup>1</sup> Whether or no the summit just named may be the “mons qui vocatur Traneshof” there is no possibility of deciding. All that can possibly be said is that the conditions imposed by the description given require its presence somewhere in that vicinity.

<sup>2</sup> Again there is an utter absence of any verbal clue or means of identifying the locality designated by this name. The one suggestion as to the place in which it is to be looked for lies in the circumstance that the valley or dale intended runs towards the water which flows through Bildsdale, that is, as I take it, in distinction from the stream called Raysdale Beck; and if this surmise is correct, the “vallis” meant is the bed of the small stream which runs into the Bildsdale water just below the junction of the Raysdale Beck with Bildsdale Beck. And it may be added that this view obtains strong confirmation from the fact that it accommodates itself entirely to the termination of the boundary on the eastern side as given just below. A little stream or beck called Willelmesbec forms the said termination, and the now-a-days Williamsbeck runs into the Bildsdale water within a few score yards of what is thus supposed to be Landesmere valley or dale.

<sup>3</sup> We have previously followed the course of the eastern boundary line to the confluence of two streams, the one running through Deepdale and the other called Littlebeck. Both these names appear to have passed into obscurity; but if we may take guidance partly from the particulars named and partly from the existing boundary line between the townships of Rievaulx and Helmsley, we shall probably not be mistaken in assuming that the water-course running through the valley with the eastern division of Ouldray wood on one side of it will be Littlebeck; and if so, then that the valley with the other part of the wood just named clothing its western bank will be the ancient Depedale.

<sup>4</sup> Following the sike from the head of what we have taken to be Littlebeck, along which the Rievaulx boundary runs, and almost due north, we come to a point in the boundary which seems to afford something approaching to certainty in our endeavours after identification, namely Raudpade, for which see next note.

vation, is almost certainly a phonetic corruption of this old name. The transition, and especially in the mouth of a Dales Yorkshireman, is so easy and self-suggesting from Raudpath, pronounced quickly, to Roōpa, that I think it may be safely assumed; and assuming it, we have to follow a "gate," "street" or road, leading northwards from Roppa up to a certain bifurcation, where a deviation to the right occurs, both the bifurcation and the deviating road or track being entirely uncertain and indefinite, until we turn to the map and notice the sudden deviation, to the right, of the existing boundary-line, both from the vicinity of an unquestionably old track (for it is marked as a "bridle road," and is traceable as such for miles), and along the general line of another moor-road or track-way; after which, from the total loss or disuse of any name at all resembling Smithsdale, the run of the divisa is indefinite, except in so far as the modern boundary, which may be easily followed in the six-inch maps, is our guide.

<sup>2</sup> Much the same might be said about this name as has been already said as to its predecessor. The temptation, of course, is to turn one's eyes and thoughts in the direction of the remarkable collection of stones called the Bridestones. But independently of the fact that this is not really a pile or heap (acervus) of stones, it would seem to be considerably too much to the left or west, and its position inconsistent, moreover, with the terms of the latter part of the description of the line taken by the divisa. For the statement is that it turns back from Bacheler (retroductu), coming down above Tripsdale until it reaches a "magna via" or established road-way coming from Turchilesti—evidently, by its name, another "way" or track—the said road-way, being such in locality and direction that it connects with the line of Williamsbeck. Under these circumstances a much more than admissible hypothesis is, that what is marked with the word "Badger Stone" on the six-inch survey, and from which point the boundary between Bilsdale Kirkham and Bilsdale Midcable runs to Tripsdale Head, and thence along Tripsdale Beck to where the stream begins to be called Bilsdale Beck, thence striking off to the west again with a direct lead for Williamsbeck, is the existing representative of Bacheler.

quantum meæ divisæ tenduntur versus Cliveland supra clivum montis, et subtus clivum per rivulum qui vocatur Willelmesbec<sup>1</sup> et est divisæ inter me et Johannem Engelram,<sup>2</sup> usque ad supra-dictam aquam quæ currit per Bildesdala. Et præter hæc concedo eis omnia aisiamenta sua in maneria [sic] et in foresta mea de Helmeslac—scil. materiem et ligna ad suos [25] proprios usus, in itself for the purpose of an at least approximate identification of the track, path, or roadway intended. For there is a roadway leading over Skiplam Moor in a north-westerly direction, passing close by Wither Cote, which, for a mile and a half to two miles from that point, is called Aldergate, and then onwards Roll-gate. This roadway, old enough to have the old North-English term "gate" applied to it, is continuous with the probable "via de Turchilesti," from which comes the "magna via" crossing Tripsdale, as noted above. From the Tripsdale vicinity this road passes on to the foot of Hasty Bank, where it is joined by the direct road past Chop Yat through Bildsdales to Helmsley, both being merged in the high-road through Broughton to Stokesley. From Skiplam Moor, in the other direction, this old road proceeds past Skiplam into the high road leading to Kirkby Moorside, and there can hardly be any doubt that the Turchilesti of this document is simply the name of the ancient tracked route from Kirkby Moorside into Cleveland; a conclusion which derives no little force from the fact that in No. LV. the vicinity of a part of the divisa of Welburn to Turchilsti is distinctly adverted to.

duntur versus Cliveland supra clivum montis" is to be understood is not too abundantly clear. The expression in No. V., wherein Nicholas de Traili delivers what he had heard Walter Espec himself say, namely, "quod super clivum montis versus Cliveland totum planum suum erat, quod postmodum dedit Rievalli, et opertum bosco subterius totum erat Johannis Engleram usque in Willelmesbec," seems more intelligible, if it does not imply too much. Casting one's eye over the map, one sees the Cleveland Hills are closely concerned with the boundary of Bildsdales from the point at which the said boundary leaves the division between Hawnby parish and proceeds between Bildsdales and Whorlton first, and after that between it and Carlton, Kirkby, and Ingleby Greenhow. According to the apparent sense of the sentences under notice, all the high moorland area comprised under the names of Bildsdales West Moor, Cringley Moor, and Urra Moor (inclusive of the Hasty Bank section) is not only in Walter Espec's hands to give to Rievaulx, but is actually so given: John Engleram's sub-fee being limited to the inland portion north of Williamsbeck and within the line of the steep moor-banks—banks not susceptible of cultivation, either now or then, by reason of their steepness, rockiness, or, at least, general ruggedness. This may be so, and that it was so eventually there can be but little doubt. The Charter by which Robert de Ros conveyed Raisdale to the Abbey does not appear to be extant, or some explanation much to the point might be obtained. But it is to be observed that Raisdale is one of the places mentioned above (No. IV.) in which the Abbot had right of warren and chase. More light may perhaps be thrown upon the subject in the sequel.

<sup>1</sup> The circumstance that this nephew of the Founder's is not mentioned by Dugdale will be referred to below. He is the grantor of the Charter numbered CCLVIII. in the Whitby Chartulary, in my notes to which I ventured to write:—"The most probable assumption is that, besides Robert, Peter had another son, Everard, and that the Everard and Robert of the present deed are the said two sons." The precise statement here made abundantly confirms the assumption noticed.

from the formation of the letters composing it, altogether uncertain. It might be Chevine, or Chemue. The present reading is adopted because the name Cheniveton occurs in Domesday in two other counties besides Yorkshire—in which county the name has now become Knayton—which assures us that such a name existed.

XLIV. III. CARTA EVERARDI DE ROS DE SARTo.

<sup>2</sup> On reference to the terms of Walter Espec's original grant, and the endeavour made in the notes to trace, however roughly, what eventually becomes the Eastern "divisa," it will be observed that, practically, the present grant is, to a very considerable extent, supplementary to it, so far as the portions of land to the south of the commencement of the said "divisa," and between it and the river, are concerned. In virtue of this grant the abbey becomes possessed of nearly if not quite the whole of the southernmost part of what is now the Township of Rievaulx. In fact, the line of boundary named here as proceeding from the ford at Sproxton Mill must have passed very near if not actually over the site of Duncombe Park.

donationem eis confirmavimus. Ego autem et hæredes mei nunquam recolligemus alicujus Religionis homines in prædictam pasturam de Pokeleia præter eosdem monachos. Et si aliquando voluero aliquid amplius alicui dimittere de prædicta villa, illis libentius et citius dimittam quam alii cuiquam hominum, et pro [28] minore pretio. Hæc omnia dedi prædictis monachis Tenenda in perpetuum, libera et quieta ab omni terreno servitio, ab omnibus auxiliis et assisis et geldis, et ab omni exactione sæculari. Et ego et hæredes mei manutenebimus et warantizabimus illis hæc omnia . . . in perpetuum. His T. Rogero,<sup>1</sup> Ebor. Archiepiscopo; Hugone,<sup>2</sup> Dunelm. ## LV. CARTA GUNDREDÆ DE SKIPENUM.

XII.<sup>1</sup> Gundreda, uxor Nigelli de Albaneio, universis filiis S. Ecclesiæ, salutem. Sciatis me dedisse et . . . confirmasse, concessu filii mei, Rogeri de Moubrai, Deo et S. Mariæ Rievallis et fratribus ibidem . . . pro anima viri mei Nigelli de Albaneio, et pro salute animæ meæ et filii mei, Rogeri de Molbrai, et uxoris suæ, et filiorum suorum, et pro anima patris et matris meæ, et omnium antecessorum meorum, quicquid in dominio meo habui de culta terra in Skipenum,<sup>2</sup> et, ubi culta terra deficit versus aquilonem, quicquid est in feudo meo et filii mei, Rogeri de Moubrai, in bosco et plano, et pasturis et wastinis, secundum divisas inter Wellebruna et Wimbeltun, et sicut divisæ de Wellebruna tendunt ad Thurkilesti,<sup>3</sup> et ita versus Clivelandam, nominatim Locum et Locumeslehit,<sup>4</sup> et Wibbehahge,<sup>5</sup> et Langeran,<sup>5</sup> et Brannesdala, et Middelhoved,<sup>6</sup> sicut divisæ sunt inter Wellebruna et Faddemor, et ita versus Clivelandam. Hæc omnia concessi et dedi eis libere et quiete ab omni terreno

<sup>3</sup> See note on p. 19. The occurrence of this name in a new locality, and, it is to be assumed, still nearer to Kirkby Moorside, is by no means without its special interest, as confirming the view taken as to its meaning and application.

<sup>4</sup> The former element in this name appears to have been entirely lost; but the terminal -lehit, which in other documents, yet to be noticed, takes the form -slectes or -slettes, almost certainly, taken in conjunction with its evident vicinity, identifies the place intended. Sleights House, about two miles north-west from Gillamoor, no doubt perpetuates the old Locumslehit or Locumslectes. This word sleights, or, in its older form, slectes, is one of frequent occurrence in place-names, and usually seems to imply a fairly smooth—as opposed to overgrown with brushwood or bushes—place or plain.

servitio et consuetudine, et auxiliis et assisis, in perpetuam elemosinam, ad colendum et sartandum et utendum in omnibus sicut suis propriis: excepto quod ego et homines mei de Wellebruna habebimus communam pasturæ, et ligna ad ignem, et materiem ad ædificia. Præterea in eadem libertate concedo eis et confirmo quicquid homines mei de Wellebruna eis dare voluerint, vel vendere, vel escambire de terris suis quas [34<sup>b</sup>] habent in Skipenum. His T. Nicholao Capellano; Waltero Presbitero; Engelram, Presbitero ejusdem villæ; Gerardo de Limesia; Henrico Rumelli; Arnaldo de Vilers; Samson[e] Cornuwala; Radulfo et Waltero, fratribus Engelrami Presbiteri; Willelmo Camerario, filio Alvredi; Ricardo filio Suani; Jacobo Clerico; Ricardo Pistore; Robba; Stir [or Scir].

LVI. XIII. Notum sit omnibus filiis S. Ecclesiæ quod ego, Gundreda, do et concedo Deo et S. Mariæ Rievallis . . . . pro anima domini mei, Nigelli de Albaneia, pro salute animæ meæ et Rogeri, filii mei, . . . dominiam<sup>1</sup> meam:—scil. a ductu de Colemere usque ad ductum de Gildehusedale, liberam et quietam ab omni terreno servitio; pratum etiam de Gildehusedale, et communem pasturam de Wellebrun in bosco et plano. His T. Nicholao Capellano; Johanne, Clerico de Hovincham; Waltero de la Rivere; Rogero de Flammeville; Benedicto de Wimbeltun; Henrico de Maltun; Unspac de Hovincham; Gaufrido de Insula; Willelmo de Witvile.

LVII. CARTA ROGERI DE MOLBRAI DE WELLEBRUNA ET EJUS DIVISIS.

XIV. Omnibus . . . Rogerus de Molbrai, salutem. Sciatis me dedisse Ecclesiæ [35] S. Mariæ Rievallis, pro anima patris mei, Nigelli, et matris meæ, Gundredæ, concessu hæredum meorum, Nigelli et Roberti, in perpetuam elemosinam, Wellebrunam, cum omnibus pertinenciis suis . . . et divisis quæ subtus nominantur:—ab occidente, scil., de Wellebruna sicut Fragate<sup>2</sup> vadit subtus Lund<sup>3</sup> usque in viam de Wimbeltun, et inde sicut ipsa via vadit inter boscum de Wimbeltun et Lunde usque ad Tunge,<sup>4</sup> et inde sicut divisæ inter Wimbeltun et Wellebrunam tendunt usque ad Mapelbusch et Locum et

<sup>4</sup> Muscotes or Muscoates now. Muscotes Grange remains to attest the fact that the Abbey used to hold and to work the land there. The site is not far from the confluence of the Riccal with the Rye.

into oblivion as the thing it designated fell into disuse. The "Stud-farm" of modern days affords but little to remind one of the days when the mares and their offspring roamed practically wild, and had to be driven into the falda or fold year by year, in order that the animals old enough for work might be captured and withdrawn.

<sup>10</sup> This is, in all particulars, a noteworthy name. According to reason and analogy, the meaning ought to be "the gate or roadway of the Welsh (or foreign) carls or men;" and it would be easy to indulge in divers speculations as to how it came to be so designated. It may be more to the point to collate with it the name Waincarlegate from the Guisborough Chartulary (which probably means the road taken by the carls in charge of wains) and to avoid all further guesses.

LVIII. xv. Omnibus . . . Rogerus de Molbrai. Sciatis me . . . confirmasse donationem Petri de Tresc,<sup>8</sup> quam ipse in præsentia mea fecit Deo et Ecclesiæ S. Mariæ Rievallis . . . scil., communem pasturam moræ suæ et bosci sui quam ipse Petrus habet inter villam suam Hardeniæ<sup>9</sup> et grangiam monachorum

<sup>3</sup> "John succeeded to this dignity in 1154," and became Bishop of Poitiers nine years afterwards. This limits the date of the deed in such wise as to confirm the idea touching the time at which the grantor was likely to execute it.

<sup>4</sup> R. de Alneto is, by Le Neve, stated to have been Archdeacon of York between 1154 and 1184, but, it will subsequently be seen, incorrectly. No other Archdeacon, with the same initial, is named by Le Neve at, or about, the date made requisite by the limit of time already ascertained for the execution of the deed.

LIX. CARTA WALTERI FILII ASKETILLI DE GRIMESTONA DE CALUMPANIA IN WELLEBURN.

Walter Fitz Asketil de Grimstone quitclaims to Rievaulx any possible right he had in the Welleburne lands granted to the monks by Roger de Moubray.

XVI. Omnibus . . . Walterus filius Asketilli de Grimestona, salutem. Notum sit vobis me dedisse et quietum clamasse Deo et monachis Rievallis de me et hæredibus meis, sine omni reclamacione in posterum, fide interposita, quicquid juris habui vel calumpniabar infra metas quæ continentur in cartis eorundem monachorum quas habent de Wellebrunna de donacione Rogeri de Molbrai et Nigelli filii ejus, pro Dei amore et pro caritate quam ipsi monachi dederunt michi. #### LX. CARTA ROGERI DE MOLBRAI DE WELLEBURN ET EJUS DIVISIS A IV PARTIBUS.

XVII. Omnibus . . . Rogerus de Molbrai salutem. Sciatis me dedisse Ecclesiæ S. Mariæ Rievallis pro anima patris mei,

<sup>1</sup> In all, this name presents itself in no less than fourteen or fifteen different forms, which are all inserted in the Index. The modern form is Hesketh, and Hesketh Grange will be found on the one-inch Survey about a mile rather north of east of Boltby. Arden and Arden Moor both lie to the north of Hesketh Grange.

<sup>3</sup> A mark indicative of abbreviation passes through the stem of the b, and ought properly to represent the omission of er or re. Probably, however, the reading adopted is correct.

LXI. XVIII. Rogerus de Molbrai . . . salutem. Grant to the Convent by Roger de Moubray, after perambulation of boundaries, of common of pasture on the moor lying in front of Bowforth.

<sup>1</sup> All trace of this name appears to have been lost. The divisæ of the place so named will be found given in No. LXVI. with great exactitude; but they will be found also to give only a general idea of the portion of country so designated, inasmuch as many of the 'meres' named are, to us, without a definite local habitation.

<sup>1</sup> The difficulties in the way of identifying the place meant by this name seem almost insuperable, and are certainly disheartening. Hutton, with the distinctive name "le Hole" attached to it, might seem to suggest itself; but on investigation the idea appears to be quite inadmissible. Hoveton is mentioned, as was to have been expected, in Burton; but the entries found there are not helpful. They are—"Hoveton, or Hotavin Ridale. Ralph Beler gave this place A.D. 1151.—Roger de Mowbray gave this town. Robert de Stuteville, for the good of the souls of Robert, his father, and Erneburgh, his mother, and Helewise, his own wife, gave this place between Redfram and Kirkeby." Here Hotavin is evidently misprinted or miscopied, and, probably, for Hovaton. There is a charter touching grants in Houeton made by Radulfus Beler, which will be found below, numbered CCXXIX., but no date is attached to it. It is really an attestation by Robert, Dean of York, and the Chapter, that Rad. Beler had made the grant aforesaid in their presence. Roger de Mowbray's Charter of Confirmation is before us now; and Robert de Stuteville's confirmation will be found in No. CXXX. In the latter a little is added to the local details of the present deed; but nothing tending to throw much light on the local identity of Houeton. The only points that can be fixed on as available for this purpose are that it was adjoining on some part of the boundaries of Kirkby Moorside—being itself, it is to be presumed, within the parish of Kirkdale; in another direction on some part of the boundaries of Fadmoor; and elsewhere on the course of the stream called Redofra or Redover, which it has been proposed to identify with the Hodge Beck from the point whereat the said stream ceases to be called Blawath Beck. Indefinite as this is, all beyond seems to be totally uncertain. On the whole, it will be better to abandon the attempt to localise Houeton precisely—at all events for the present.

<sup>2</sup> The only name on the map anywhere near the vicinity indicated that at all assimilates itself to this name is Wattelmoor. But it is of no avail for our purpose.

<sup>3</sup> There seems to be no clue whatever of any tangible description, such as to lead on to even any hypothetical identification of either this place, Balbusch, or Aicwath. Robert de Stuteville's charter adds another unidentifiable name, and apparently in the close vicinity to these three, namely, Jukeleholm. In close sequence it mentions also a place just across the Redofra, connecting with it a local reference to the north side of Kirkdale Church. This adds a little, and but a little, to the assumed approximate locality of Houeton.

singulis annis dabit Roberto Beler et hæredibus ejus, pro omnibus consuetudinibus, duas marcas argenti tantum, ad festum S. Michaelis, et nichil amplius. # LXVII. CARTA ROGERI DE MOLBRAI DE HOUETUN ET DE SAMSONE CORNUWALLE.

XXIII. Omnibus . . . Rogerus de Molbrai, salutem. Sciatis me dedisse . . . Ecclesiæ S. Mariæ Rievallis totam Houetun, etc. [as in No. LXVI., to usque ad Hallewath, when it proceeds] Ex parte meridiana sicut rectæ divisæ vadunt per Houelund usque ad Balbusch, et inde usque ad Hauwath,<sup>1</sup> et ita usque in Redover. Quatuor autem bovatas terræ, cum pertinenciis suis, quas Samson de Cornuwala ex dono matris meæ tenuit in prædicta Houetun, propria pecunia mea—id est xx marcis argenti—ab ipso Samson et uxore ejus emi, et ipsi in Curia mea michi eas quietas clamaverunt pro summa pecuniæ prædictæ, sine reclamatione et calumpnia in posterum de se et hæredibus suis, et hoc propria manu sua affidaverunt in manu Radulfi de Belveer, Dapiferi mei, coram tota curia mea, sine malo ingenio se servaturos in perpetuum; ac postea eandem affidavitonem fecerunt in manu Rannulfi Vicecomitis coram multis [42] testibus. Postea vero prædictam affidavitonem in capitulo S. Petri Ebor. recognoverunt, et conventionaverunt quod nunquam de terra prædicta reclamationem vel calumpniam, nec per se nec per alium quemlibet, facient. Cartam vero meam quam de hac terra habebant michi reddiderunt. Hanc terram cum emissem, et in manu mea quietam et sine alicujus calumpnia tenuissem, Monachis prædictis, cum tota reliqua terra de Houetun, in perpetuam elemosinam dedi, et hac carta mea confirmavi. Hæc omnia dedi eis libera et quietas ab omnibus consuetudinibus, etc.

Renewal by Roger de Moubray of preceding charter, and further grant of four bovates, formerly held by Samson de Cornuwale.

Confirmation by Roger de Moubray of Stephen de Meinill's charter conveying Steinton to the Convent.

<sup>1</sup> Written perticatas, and then the ti dotted under as in error. Spelcros may possibly have stood where Stony Cross now stands.

<sup>2</sup> Of this place nothing seems to be known. From No. cii. we know that Edston and Rochesberg were conterminous, but on which side of Edston Rochesberg lay, we have nothing to tell us. Nor do we get any information from the name, the only hill in the vicinity of Edston being that on which the village of that name stands. [See below, where the name appears to be fairly identifiable as the elder form of the modern Rookbarugh or Rookbargh.]

right and to the Convent by Roger

XXXI. Omnibus . . . Hugo Malabissa, salutem. Sciatis me concessisse Deo et Ecclesiæ S. Dei Genitricis Mariæ de Rievallē . . . pro salute animæ meæ, et uxoris meæ, et patris et matris [44<sup>b</sup>] meæ . . . in perpetuam elemosinam, donationem Domini mei, Rogeri de Molbrai:—scil., totam Steintunam, cum omnibus pertinentiis suis in bosco etc. sicut rivus de Wid'eris<sup>3</sup> descendit per vallem de Laddedale et cadit in Riam, et sicut Ria vadit deorsum et cadit in Sef, et sicut Sef vadit usque

<sup>2</sup> Dodsworth, vol. vii., fo. 107, has a copy of a charter headed "Carta Hugonis Malebys de Steintona," which is almost verbatim the same as this, except that it inserts "Genetricis" after "Dei" and before "Mariæ de Rievallē," and instead of "donationem Domini mei Rogeri de Molbrai, totam Steintunam" it has "cum concessu et bona voluntate Hugonis et Willelmi, filiorum meorum, totam Steintunam." There is also a variation after "sursum ad Wideris"—where it proceeds—"Hæc omnia dedi eis tenenda . . . libera et quieta . . . excepto quod dabunt annuatim michi, etc.," as in the text. The witnesses are mainly the same, except that Rufo is written for Ruffo, Beauver for Belveir, Ferlingtona for Ferlinct', Hameldona for Hamelduna, Herum for Harum, nepote meo for nepote Hugonis Malebissa, and that after Willelmo filio Briani there are added the following names:—Radulfo de Thurp, Willelmo filio meo, Roberto de Auner, Willelmo Britone, Willelmo Blundo, Radulfo filio Radulfi de Thurpe.

<sup>3</sup> Should any reader have noted that the name Welburn is, in the series of documents occupying a somewhat earlier place in the present collection, almost invariably written Welbrun, the suggestion will be that, in all probability, Brunesdaele here is simply Burnsdaele. Unquestionably, beck is the universal word in all this part of Yorkshire for a running stream; but it is as little open to question that burn, with the same sense, has been at some time current in the same district; that, in fact, it has been superseded by beck. Why burn should have survived in more northerly parts of the kingdom, and beck be practically unknown, is a question which need not be debated here. Nor, perhaps, is the solution far to seek. But the fact remains that burn was once in use, and that it has been supplanted by beck. Another thing to be noted is that dale, in local names, is by consent looked upon as, in the district in question, of cognate origin with beck—in other words, equally Scandinavian. Certainly it may not be possible to prove that the name Burndale or Burnsdaele is not of Anglian origin; but it is greatly more probable that it is of Danish origin; and if so, then the burn that survived in the name Burndale was the designation of a stream sufficiently marked to be called—had it been in our own days—"the burn." Then comes the identification in terms of the spring which gives rise to the stream which runs through the said dale—that is to say, the application of the term keld. Assuming Brunesdaele to be a name of the suggested character, it is to be supposed that the name would not easily be lost or forgotten. Now, there is a Bungdale in close proximity to the required locality, and it is by no means impossible that it may represent Brundale. For the sound is the alternative of Brun, and that et cadit in rivum quæ dividit<sup>1</sup> inter Scaltunam et Beilande, et per ipsum rivum qui<sup>2</sup> easdem terras dividit usque ad fluvium Riam; et ex alia parte, a prædicto fonte—id est, Brunesdaechelde, in transversum sub monte in ora silvæ, recta linea, usque ad vallem quæ dicitur Brochesdale,<sup>3</sup> sicut torrens in ipsa valle fluit et cadit in Riam; et ita sicut fluit Ria usque ad divisam prædictam inter Scaltun et Beilandam. Præterea concessi eis communem pasturam animalibus suis quibus colunt terram suam in Grif in silva de Scaltuna a Brochesheved usque ad divisas inter Scaltunam et Sproxtunam. ## LXXV. CARTA HUGONIS MALABESTIA DE BROCHESHOLES.

Further grant of land in Scawton, adjacent to that named in the last charter, by the same donor to the same recipients.

XXXIII. . . . Hugo de Malabestia, salutem. Sciatis me dedisse . . . concessu uxoris meæ et hæredum meorum, Ecclesiæ S. Mariæ . . . Rievallis in . . . elemosinam, totam terram [45<sup>b</sup>] quæ jacet inter montem qui vocatur Brochesholes<sup>5</sup> et aquam Riæ of burn, in the mouth of a true dalesman, is not far removed from the way in which he sounds 'bun'; and as for Bungdale, and especially the g in it, it is, on the face of it, about as authentic, from the "scientific" point of view, as Weather House for Widheris, Ladhill for Lad-dale, and so forth. Adopting this hypothesis, we have a tangible "divisa" from the source of the stream running down what is now called Seemer Howl, to join the stream dividing Scawton and Byland at or near the place marked Cross Green; and then from the same source to the small valley called Little Bet's slack, which runs below what is now still called Brockhill, and was then no doubt Brochesholes, we have another, the only one wanted.

and that of its feeder running south of Byland, which angle faces Rievaulx Bridge; and that the name was understood to imply all the ground in the interior, or rear, within the bounds described.

<sup>4</sup> No Radulfus, Dean of York, is recorded by Le Neve; and it has been already noted that but two dates for the two Deans named Robert are given—the one 1148, and the other 1186. Further, it is definitely stated that John became treasurer in 1154, and was consecrated Bishop of Poitiers in 1163. It is, therefore, safer to let Radulfus stand than to "correct" it by substituting Robert. The implication may be verified some day.

<sup>5</sup> There can be no doubt that this name is correctly written, inasmuch as it appears in the same form in the heading as it does in the deed itself. Still, it is the name of a hill, and necessarily, from the particulars mentioned, identical with what is now called Brockhill. (See note <sup>3</sup> to LXXIV.)

ab Oswaldeshenges usque ad guteriam<sup>1</sup> et totam proximam insulam subtus guteriam versus Helmesleiam, ut monachi prædicti fossatum faciant per terram illam quam propius montem poterint et flumen Riam per illud ducant; terraque quæ ex parte eorum deinde contigerit illis perpetuo remanebit. Concession by Odo de Boltby, with the assent of his feudal lord, Robert de Stuteville, of a part of the waste adjoining Boltby, and lying below Hesketh, with delimitation of boundary

<sup>1</sup> The note originally appended here was:—"It is not possible to identify this locality, whatever it may have been; and the same, it would seem, must be said of the 'insula' mentioned just below." But, since that was written, having had the advantage of personal inspection and inquiry-making on the spot, I am in a position to qualify all that, if not, indeed, to withdraw the statement altogether. I have now no doubt whatever as to what, and where, this "guteria" was, nor as to what the word "insula" in question really denoted, or to where its precise position was to be found. I have tried to deal with the subject more fully and exactly in the Introduction than it would have been possible to do in a mere footnote, and it must suffice here to say that the "guteria" was, in point of fact, a private canal, engineered and constructed by the monks themselves, and that its effectual existence depended, in no slight measure or degree, on the privileges conceded in the present deed. The simple fact that the existing boundaries of the township of Rievaulx in the parts referred to in the document before us are not, in more places than one, decided by the course of the river Rye, but deviate from it, and, so to speak, encroach upon the lands on the opposite side of the stream, is in itself amply sufficient to stamp this deed as one of extraordinary interest, as supplying an intelligible explanation of the very abnormal circumstance just referred to. In the fewest words possible, the effectual existence of the "guteria" itself actually created the effectual existence of the "insula"; for from the moment the water filled the channel prepared for it, the tract of level land between it and the river became de facto an island—the name it still, in one part, retains.

Grant by Adam de Boltby of land in the vicinity of that conveyed by the last deed to the Convent.

LXXVII. xxxv. Omnibus . . . Adam de Boltebi, salutem. Sciatis me dedisse . . . Ecclesiæ de Rievalle . . . in elemosinam, illam terram quæ est inter terram eorum et Guthalgillesiche.<sup>7</sup> Hoc feci concessu Dominæ et matris meæ, that at which the first-named rivulet runs into it. The first of these may be the Rutandsyke, and the second the Oakheadsyeke.

<sup>5</sup> See note <sup>2</sup>. But it should not be overlooked that there is a deviation from the course of the stream named at one place, and that that deviation involves contact with an enclosure belonging (as is to be presumed) to the monks.

<sup>1</sup> Le Neve says John de Grey was Archdeacon of Cleveland in 1199, and in the next entry that Ralph de Kyme laid claim to it in 1196. All the entries as to the early Archdeacons are singularly indefinite, and it is quite possible that Archdeacon John de Grey held the office before the date assigned by Le Neve.

<sup>2</sup> This might be Elveve, as far as the letters go. In No. cxli., a charter by the same grantor, and wherein the first list of Testes is exactly coincident with the list given here, the name is written with an i instead of the penultimate e. It is, therefore, probably Elvine.

<sup>3</sup> This, though written as a capital, can scarcely be the initial letter of a name. It would seem to be that of a noun in the neuter gender, serving as antecedent to the "quod" which follows. Otherwise, it might be the first letter of Hundemanebi.

Ipse autem Torphinus, et Alanus, filius ejus, adquietabunt totam terram hanc de omnibus servitiis quæ ad eam pertinent, et hæc omnia

<sup>1</sup> At the close of a paper by the Editor, published in the April number of the Antiquary for 1886, he writes:—"One matter remains to be noted in connection with the ofnam or ofnams concerned in the charters we have adverted to, and that is the date. From documentary evidence, notably in the Whitby Chartulary, and also, though less precisely, in the Rievaulx Chartulary, Torphin de Alverstein was dead by or before 1170, and his son Alan reigned in his stead as lord of divers manors, which were part of the fee of his father at the time the two charters we have cited were drawn and ratified. The enclosures named, then, were of a date scarcely a century later than the Conquest itself, or sufficiently early to explain the application to them of a descriptive term older by far than the Conquest itself, but which had not yet had time to become obsolete. And that, I conceive, is the category under which the word or name ofnam, ovenam, hovenam, hovenham will have, of necessity, to be placed. In the Minutes and Orders of Quarter Sessions, held at Richmond in October 1624, a 'warrant de withernam' is mentioned, where the -nam is simply equivalent to taking, taking possession of, from A.S. nima, to take, seize. It is the same word as in our name ofnam or ovenam, and Bosworth gives us the verb 'ofniman, to take, seize.' But the full force of the A.S. preposition of is 'from, out of; de, e, ex.'" And thus the clearly defined meaning of ofnam, as applied to an enclosure, is seen to be land taken up from, or out of, a larger tract hitherto unappropriated and unenclosed; in other words, a purpresture, encroachment, or intak'; which latter word is the word used in Cleveland to this day, involving the idea of "taking in" from the common, as ofnam does that of "taking out of" the same.

Torphinus et Alanus fideliter servanda et tenenda, fide interposita, firmaverunt. Quum autem omnia quæ Deo et Ecclesiæ conferuntur illibata et intemerata servari oportet, ea omnia, quæ præscripta sunt, nostra auctoritate roboramus, et præsentis scripti attestazione communimus. Hi sunt testes: Robertus Decanus; Willelmus Capellanus; et Canonici Jeroldus, Serlo, Symon, Mainardus, Stephanus, Willelmus filius Holdeberti, Willelmus de Baiocis; Ricardus, Presbiter S. Wilfridi; Magister Paulinus; Walterus de Templo; Willelmus Tilemir<sup>1</sup>; Gaufridus de Alvestain.

LXXXVII. CARTA ROBERTI DE LACELES<sup>2</sup> DE UNA CARRUCATA TERRÆ IN MORTUN.

XLV. . . . Omnibus . . . Robertus de Laceles . . . Notum sit, me dedisse . . . Deo et [51<sup>b</sup>] Ecclesiæ S. M. Rievallis . . . concessu uxoris meæ Matildis, et hæredis mei Gerardi, et aliorum hæredum meorum, in . . . elemosinam, unam carrucatam terræ in Mortun<sup>3</sup>—dimidium, scil., ejusdem villæ, cum toftis et croftis, et pratis et pascuis, et cæteris rebus ad eandem carrucatam terræ pertinentibus, cum tota pastura ejusdem Mortun, et cum communi pastura cæterarum terrarum mearum: Præterea do eis unam culturam terræ quindecim acrarum ab australi parte de Mortun, cum prato, per rectas divisas. Hæc omnia do eis libera et quieta ab omni terreno servitio . . . excepto quod monachi singulis annis inde michi solvent, vel hæredibus meis, unam marcam argenti pro omni servitio, dimidium ad Pentecostem et dimidium ad festum S. Martini. Hanc donationem ego, Robertus . . . adquietabimus de omni servitio, et erga Regem

<sup>3</sup> Care must be taken to discriminate between this Morton and the other Morton, or Murton, in the vicinity of Bolthby (see supra, No. LXXVI.). The present Morton is in reality a small sub-section of the parish of East Harlsey; and the site of the present grant is almost certainly indicated by the name Morton Grange, applied to the farm lying a little south of the church, and within a few minutes' walk of the same. Burton confuses the two places: but the fact that a Lascells was the donor is sufficient to indicate the connection of Morton with Harlsey. In the sequel several charters, by different members of the family just named, chiefly derived from the Dodsworth collections, and dealing with grants of land in Harlsey, will be met with. It may also be remarked that among the Testes are found several persons with names due to places in the close vicinity:—e.g. Arncliffe, Bordelby (the site of Mount Grace), Levington, Northalberton, Thirsk. See also next charter.

Charter of confirmation by Geoffrey de Lascells of his father's grant to the Convent, in Harlsey, as in last deed.

LXXXVIII. XLVI. . . . Omnibus . . . Gaufridus de Laceles . . . Notum sit universitati vestræ me . . . confirmasse Deo et Ecclesiæ S. Mariæ Rievallis . . . cum concessu et bona voluntate Roberti et Willelmi fratrum meorum, in elemosinam, totam donationem patris mei, Roberti de Laceles:—scil. unam carrucatam terræ in Mortona, hoc est dimidium ejusdem villæ . . . et communem pasturam reliquæ terræ de Mortuna, et de tota Herleseia, et de Borderebia, ad oves quadringentas, et x vaccas, cum tauro uno, et ad boves sufficienter ad terram suam colendam, intus et extra, ubicunque pecora mea et hominum earundem villarum [52<sup>b</sup>] pascuntur, ita tamen quod agni eorum non pascentur in bladis prædictarum villarum, nec agni mei nec hominum earundem villarum pascentur in bladis illorum. Sciendum est autem quod eandem carrucatam terræ ita tenebunt quod semper viii perticatas simul habeant ex parte solis, et toftas similiter et croftas. Præterea concessi eis unam culturam terræ xv acrarum ab australi parte de Mortuna, cum prato et agro, sicut in tempore patris mei illud tenuerant—quas scil. acras terræ, cum prato, pater meus dedit illis pro habenda fraternitate Domus Rievallensis. Ego etiam dedi eisdem monachis pro salute animæ meæ et pro fraternitate illorum, dimidiam acram terræ in curte grangiæ suæ quam Robertus de Hernievila<sup>1</sup> tenuerat, pro qua pater meus dedit illi escambium cum concessu et bona voluntate mea. Concessi etiam illis habere totam curtem grangiæ suæ libere et integre et quiete, cum gardino suo quod Robertus de Hernievila quietum clamavit eis in præsentia mea et aliorum, pro se et hæredibus suis in perpetuum. Hæc omnia concessi eisdem monachis, pro me et pro hæredibus meis, libera et quieta . . . de omni terreno servitio, excepto quod monachi singulis annis inde michi vel hæredibus meis persolvent unam marcham argenti pro omnibus servitiis—dimidiam, scil., ad Pentecosten, et dimidiam ad festum S. Martini. Et ego et hæredes mei warantizabimus . . . et quietabimus de omnibus servitiis, et erga Regem et erga cæteros

XC. [54] CARTA WALTERI ENGELRAM ET HOLDEARD DE WELLEBERIE.

XLVIII. Omnibus . . . Walterus Engelram . . . Notum sit me dedisse . . . Ecclesiæ S. Mariæ Rievallis . . . quinque bovatas terræ in Welleberie quas Johannes Tort tenuit de me, cum omnibus rebus ad eas pertinentibus, et nominatim pratum in Ernesclive quod pertinet ad dimidiam carrucatam terræ quam Hugo filius Acce tenuit, cum omnibus aliis rebus quas ipse Johannes tenuit cum eisdem quinque bovatis. Et, cum ipsa terra, do eis et concedo pasturam ad sexcentas oves, et ad decem vaccas et ad unum taurum. Ego autem, Holdeard, uxor ejus, hæc superscripta, quæ sunt de duario<sup>3</sup> meo, do eis et con-

cord between the Convent and Adam de Boltby, settling certain matters connected with his father's grant in Boltby and Thirlby.

<sup>4</sup> We have here specific mention that the full team or "draught" of oxen numbered eight animals. That is a fact which has been dwelt upon of late by more than one of the writers on such topics. But precise statements like the present, or statements less precise, but from which the like fact follows as a necessary conclusion, will be met with once and again in the pages of the present Chartulary. Also it may be remarked that we have the word carrucata applied expressly to the team or draught itself. Still this is but the occasional meaning of that word in such documents as those before us.

sicut ipse Adam ad opus suum proprium, et sicut continetur in carta patris sui cui dependet sigillum Roberti de Stutevilla, Domini ipsius Adæ.

Further charter by the same, touching the same grant, with additions.

CXIII. LXX. Omnibus . . . Francis et Anglis, Adam de Bolthebi, salutem. Noverit me dedisse S. Mariæ de Rievallē totam terram quam Odo de Bolthebi, pater meus, eis dedit in territorio de Bolthebeia, et per easdem divisas quæ continentur in carta patris mei, cui sigillum Roberti de Stutevilla, Domini mei, dependet, et pasturam sufficientem cccc ovibus, in pastura de Boltebi et de Ravenestorp et de Trillebia ubique pascendis ubi dominica averia mea [66] et hominum meorum pascuntur; et concedo eisdem monachis ad pasturam illam adeundam liberum introitum et exitum habendum, ita quod ipsi monachi non ponent in prædicta pastura plures quam cccc oves. Item concedo eisdem monachis habendum in prænominata pastura iiii carrucatas boum, unamquamque de viii<sup>to</sup> bobus, et xxxii vaccas, etc. [as in last charter to bosco, cum mensura, then] sicut ego ipse ad opus meum proprium, et sicut continetur in carta patris mei quam ipsi monachi ex patre meo habent, cui sigillum Roberti de Stutevilla, Domini mei, dependet. Extensive grant by the same donor to Rievaulx of pasturage for mares and other stock in Teesdale, with like privilege in Westerdale, and two bovates of land in either vill.

great to warrant the printing of the greater part of it here. Such notes, whether of a local nature or more general, as are needed, will be found appended to the charter just mentioned, at a subsequent page.

part of the name is Saltcote, and is due to the ancient manufacture of salt, which, as early as the eleventh century, prevailed in the neighbourhood in question; and indeed, as there is reason to believe, on all the flat low parts of the eastern sea-coast of England. What forty years ago

Dedi etiam eis et confirmavi totam aquam de Theise, quantum terra feudi mei de Normanebi durat, ad faciendas pischarias,<sup>3</sup> et ad pischandum et utendum sicut voluerint, ita quod nullus alius ibi firmabit nec habebit pischarias præter illos; et liberum ingressum et regressum sibi et sumariis et caretis suis per totam terram meam ab aqua et [71] ad aquam de Theise—scil. per viam illam quæ jacet a Normanebi usque ad pratum ejusdem villæ, et inde inter terras cultas et fletum usque ad Theisam. Sumarii vero illorum, quibus opus habuerint ad pischarias prædictas, libere pascentur in communi pastura de Normanebi, ubicunque equi mei et hominum ejusdem villæ pascuntur. Hæc omnia concessi prædictis monachis et dedi, Tenenda in perpetuum, libera et quieta ab omni terreno servilio et exactione sæculari. Ego autem et hæredes mei [warranty]. Et habebunt monachi vias et semitas per totum territorium de Normanebi sicut ego vel hæredes mei unquam liberius habuimus. His T. was known as Cargo Fleet, and is now Cleveland Port close to Middlesbrough, used to be known as Caldecothes or Caldcotes, and the Salcote now under notice was in its near vicinity.

Tees at the period of this grant must have been of considerable value; and many indications of the fact are met with in both the Whitby and Guisborough Chartularies, not to notice other ancient means of information.

<sup>4</sup> This is written mart'i. It is probably miswritten for Mart', and should admit of the expansion Marton, the name of a parish close by.

<sup>5</sup> This name is of frequent occurrence in the Guisborough Chartulary, and is not unknown in that of Whitby. In No. cxviii. reference is made to a donation by the father of the present witness granted to the Canons of Giseburn.

LXXIII. . . . Robertus<sup>1</sup> filius Ricardi de Normanebi . . . Robert Fitz-Richard de Normanby, son of the last donor, confirms the last deed, with additional concessions.
 Sciatis me . . . confirmasse . . . Ecclesiæ S. Mariæ Rievallis . . .

<sup>2</sup> As the general level of the neighbourhood scarcely rises 25 feet above the sea-level, this name might seem to be a misnomer. A different explanation, however, suggests itself as to the application of such a term in such a place, and that is, that, almost without question, the hills thus localised were artificial, and depended on the manufacture of salt. Montes salis, salte-hilles, salinae, are words interchangeable, and the mere fact that the name of the immediate vicinity is Saltcote makes the further vicinity of salt-hills a foregone conclusion.

<sup>4</sup> This name also seems to imply the neighbourhood of a hill, and, of course, again an artificial one. Only the date of its making would be strangely older than that of the "salt-hills" just noticed. The prefix hoga is almost invariably the Latinised form of our modern houe, a grave-hill or barrow.

<sup>5</sup> This is a name of frequent occurrence, and of great and expressive significance. Wherever it exists—and it exists still in a very large number of places in this section of the North Riding—it carries the mind back, not only to the times of the Common Field system, but to the time at which that system, in the form it eventually held, was first introduced. For detailed notice of the word, see The Antiquary for March 1886.

<sup>6</sup> What the element that forms the first part of this name may be I am unable to suggest, except in the way of mere guess, which I avoid. It is, however, one of by no means infrequent occurrence; as, for instance, in a curious old local name in Fryup, crystallised for us in the name Bainly. The original form, due to an early thirteenth-century document, connected with Gysburne Priory, of the name in question, is found under the spelling of Bani-withlith, and that is Baniwood slope, side, or bank. We shall meet with this element again in the present collection of charters.

<sup>3</sup> A name such as to occasion some perplexity. The prefix is, if not a common one, yet certainly not one unknown. Thus, there is Duncildehale in Liverton (Whitby Chart., CLXXXVII., CLXXXIX.), not to mention other and better known instances. And the terminating syllable is of doubtful meaning. As there are long brots, and a small

brot besides, it is evident that a definite meaning is connected with the word. It is quite possible that a word given by Halliwell, as current in Westmoreland, may give the idea for the meaning that is wanted. The word in question is brotground, defined as "ground newly broken up." The same authority also gives brotts, with the meaning "fragments."

<sup>4</sup> There is a township in the parish of Lofthouse (formerly the site of a small Nunnery) called Handale. So that the name probably has some specific meaning.

by Adam de Brus), as well as a contemporary of Ranulf de Glanvill, who, as will be seen from No. CXII., was a Justice Itinerant in 1178. Stephen, his father, is said to have died in 1191, or before.

CXXVII. [80] CARTA ROBERTI DE SPROXTONA.

LXXXIII. . . . Robertus de Sproxtona . . . Sciatis me dedisse . . . Ecclesiæ S. Mariæ Rievallis . . . concessu et bona voluntate Albreæ, uxoris meæ, et Symonis, filii mei, et aliorum hæredum meorum, et Ricardi et Walteri, fratrum meorum, in perpetuam elemosinam, pasturam in territorio de Sproxton, per totum boscum et moram, ad xxx vaccas, cum vitulis suis unius anni, et uno tauro, et pasturam ad ducentas oves, intus et extra, per omnia ubicunque pecora mea et hominum meorum pascuntur—scil., in mora et in bosco et in campo, in perpetuum. Et ego et hæredes mei habebimus faldiciam prædictarum ovium et finum berchariæ, et de monachis recipiemus [82] singulis annis tres solidos. Bercharia vero monachorum stabit semper ubi primitus ædificata erat—scil., inter moram et terram cultam. Et ego et hæredes mei inveniemus stramenta prædictis ovibus. Monachi autem capient in bosco meo, ad considerationem forestarii mei, quicquid opus fuerit ad berchariam suam, et claudent eam fossato et sepi, sicut voluerint. Prædictos vero tres solidos annuatim persolvent michi vel hæredibus meis ad Pentecosten. Hanc donationem nostram ego et hæredes mei warrantizabimus . . . Sciendum est autem quod ego et hæredes mei non recolligemus alicujus Religionis homines super eandem pasturam præter eosdem monachos. His T. ### CXXXI. CONFIRMATIO ROBERTI DE STUTEVILLA DE WELLEBURN.

Grant by Robert de Stuteville III. to Rievaulx of the entire vill of Houeton, with delineation of the boundaries of the same.

Præterea concessi eisdem monachis et . . . confirmavi, similiter concessu Willelmi, filii mei, et aliorum filiorum meorum, in . . . perpetuam elemosinam, totam terram de Welleburna quæ fuit de jure meo et antecessorum meorum, cum omnibus . . . scil., per aquam de Redofra versus occidentem a sursa sua sicut vadit per Bercugerestan, et sicut descendit usque versus Bulefordam, quantum terra de Welleburna durat, et inde quantum terra de Welleburna durat; et ab occidentali parte de Welleburna sicut Fragate vadit subtus Lund usque in viam de Wimbelt[ona], et inde sicut ipsa via vadit inter boscum de Wimbeldon et Lund usque ad Tungam, et inde sicut divisæ inter Wimbeltun et Welleburnam tendunt usque ad Mapelbusc et Loccum et Slectes, et inde sicut divisæ tendunt usque ad Langeran, et inde usque ad Apelgarth usque ad divisas de Clifland: ex parte meridiana sicut via vadit inter Wimbeldon et Welleburnam usque Midelhirst, et ab australi parte de Midelhirst sicut vallis dividit inter certam terram et mareschum usque Stodfald, et inde recta linea versus Holm usque

wisa was the grantor's first wife, and the mother of the William mentioned in the deed. But no details are given as to the other sons also mentioned; nor, out of the four other Stutevilles who are signatories to the grant, is any one recognisable as mentioned in the said pedigree, except it be Roger, who may possibly be the son of Robert de Stuteville's brother Osmund.

<sup>3</sup> The difficulty there often is in distinguishing between t and c in the handwriting of the date of this deed leaves it uncertain whether this is Westwith or Westwich. But other considerations lessen, if they do not remove, the uncertainty. The termination -wich is hardly to be looked for in the place in question, and -with might be expected anywhere in the woodland parts.

CXXXII. CONFIRMATIO ALANI DE RIDALE.

Alan de Ryedale quitclaims to the Convent and Roger de Moubray, for a consideration, all his rights, supposed or real, in sundry lands granted to the former by the latter.

LXXXIX. . . . Alanus de Ridale . . . Sciatis quod ego, Alanus de Ridale, et Matilda, uxor mea, fide interposita, quietum clamavimus de nobis et hæredibus nostris Domino nostro, Rogero de Molbrai, et monachis Rievallis quicquid juris habuimus, vel unde calumpniam movimus prædictis monachis de terris et aliis rebus quæ continentur infra metas quæ in cartis eorundem monachorum de donatione prædicti Domini nostri, Rogeri, nominatim. Dominus autem meus, Rogerus, pro hac causa concessit michi et hæredibus meis quietantiam de x solidis quos ei de Bulefordia annuatim solvere consueveram, et ipsam Bulefordiam tenendam de illo et hæredibus ejus in feudum et hæreditatem—Reddendo ei et hæredibus suis singulis annis unam libram piperis pro omnibus servitiis. His T. Hæc omnia gesta sunt coram Gregorio,<sup>5</sup> Priore de Bredlinton, apud Notingham.

CXXXIII. xc. Gregorius, Prior Brellintoniæ . . . Causa quæ inter Monachos Rievallis et Alanum de Ridale vertebatur, cum michi et Magistro Vacario Delegata fuisset cognoscenda et terminanda, committente prædicto cojudice michi vices suas, in præsentia mea, coram viris probabilibus, amicabili compositione sic finita est apud Nottingham, ix Kal. Aprilis, quod, videl., idem Alanus, et uxor ejus, Matildis, in manu mea, fide interposita, renuntiaverunt omnibus querelis quas erga eosdem monachos [86] usque ad illam diem moverant, et se in posterum ratas habituros asseruerunt omnes donationes quas vir illustris, Rogerus de Molbrai, contulerat memoratis monachis juxta formam in cartis ipsius Rogeri comprehensam, super quibus inter Alanum et monachos controversia diu fuerat agitata, tali mediante conditione, quod idem Rogerus concessit Alano terram de Buleford, de qua x solidos annuatim reddere consueverat, pro una libra piperis annuatim persolvenda, hæreditario jure tenendam, ab omnibus servitiis aliis et consuetudinibus immunem. Monachi quoque, vel Alanus, in mora quæ jacet ante Buleford, si modum legitimum et rationabilem in oneranda pastura excesserint, juxta quod se habet quantitas tenuræ, ex utraque parte ad arbitrium meum et viciniæ excessum suum emendabit. Turbas nichilominus prædictus Alanus et homines ejus de Buleford capient in eadem mora inter Coldic et metas apparentes, quæ factæ sunt ii Nonas Novembris, coram me et vicinia, ad considerationem et arbitrium meum et ejusdem viciniæ, quas metas non transgredientur. Monachi vero ad arbitrium meum et viciniæ [86<sup>b</sup>] emendaverunt canalem de Redofra, unde prædictus Alanus conquestus est, tam dilatando quam profundius fodiendo quantum terra eorum durat; et sic prædicta causa terminata est. Hæc autem facta sunt A.D. M<sup>o</sup> c<sup>o</sup> lxx<sup>o</sup> v<sup>o</sup>, coram Rogero, Priore, et monachis Rievallis, et ipso Alano et filiis ejus et hominibus suis. His T. XCII. . . . Johannes filius Johannis Vinitoris de Beverlaco. Sciatis me dedisse . . . Ecclesiæ S. Mariæ Rievallis . . . concessu et bona voluntate Emmæ, matris meæ, et Roberti et Engelram, fratrum meorum, in perpetuam elemosinam, totam domum meam lapideam de Beverlaco in Flammengaria, quæ sita est juxta viam in feudo Benedicti de Sculecotes, quam ipsi sump-tibus suis construxerunt tempore Johannis patris mei, et terram in qua sita est, et in curte ejusdem domus locum ad cameram et stabulum sibi sufficientem, ubi voluerint, et cætera aisia-menta de eadem curte sicut [87<sup>b</sup>] eis placuerit. Ego autem et hæredes mei nunquam alienabimus reliquam partem ipsius fundi de nobis, nec aliquam conventionem de illa faciemus cum aliquo, sine concessu Conventus Rievallis, nec in ea turaliam aliquam faciemus. Hanc vero elemosinam ideo specialiter et proprie dedi Domui Rievallensi quia, cum post obitum patris mei exhæredatus et ejectus essem de prædicta terra et domo, prædicti monachi Rievallenses dederunt Benedicto de Sculcotes xv<sup>cim</sup> marcas argenti, ut michi prædictam terram et domum redderet, et ipse Benedictus eas michi red-didit et cartam suam inde michi fecit, et monachi præfati domum reædificaverunt. Hæc omnia dedi prædictis monachis, Tenenda . . . libera et quieta [warranty]. Quia vero proprium sigillum non habui quando hanc donationem eis feci, Dominus Petrus de Karkassun cartam hanc, parte mea et fratrum meorum, sigillo suo munivit. His T. cultæ et nemorosæ, quas sartabunt monachi cum voluerint; et totam terram istam—scil., xxv acras et dimidiam, fossato vel sepi claudent, et utentur sicut eis placuerit, quæ in una cultura continentur. Præter hæc dedi eis tres acras terræ ad Wantegilebach, et pasturam per totum territorium ejusdem villæ, intus et extra, ubicunque pecora mea et hominum ejusdem villæ pascuntur, ad x boves et unum taurum et xxiiii vaccas, cum vitulis suis, qui morabuntur cum matribus suis semper per annum integrum in eadem pastura; et ad xii porcos, habentes unius anni ætatem. Et præter hæc dedi eis octo perticatas terræ in latum a fonte qui vocatur Birkelde usque ad viam [89<sup>b</sup>] quæ vadit de Bodeltun ad Richemund, ad egressum et regressum suum, itemque viii perticatas in latum ex alia parte ab eadem via usque ad berchariam suam. Hæc omnia dedi eis in liberam

Further grant by the same donor of a house, with toft and croft, in Bolton, and also of land in the Common Field of the same vill, and large pasturage rights, with other matters.

<sup>1</sup> There is no doubt that this is the Bolton which lies some nine miles south-west of Richmond. Under the Domesday names Bodelton and Alia Bodelton, in the Index Locorum to the Kirkby's Inquest volume, are given Castle Bolton, Low Bolton, and West Bolton, with the four mediæval forms, Parva Bolton, East Bolton, West Bolton, and Boulton in Wendesdale, all bracketed together, as in close connection with each other. Moreover, in Kelly's Directory of the North and East Ridings, East Bolton is given as an alias of Castle Bolton, West Bolton and Low Bolton not being named, as being only hamlets, and not townships. It may be assumed with safety that the Bodelton of the present deed is the principal place in the district. It must be observed that the editor of the Inquest places West Bolton in the parish of Aysgarth, Castle Bolton, as well as East or Low Bolton (for he identifies the prefixes), in Wensley parish. Kelly does not bear out the former statement.

CXLI. ITEM CARTA ACHARII DE TUNSTAL.

xcviii. . . Acharius de Tunstal . . . Sciatis me dedisse . . . Ecclesiæ S. Mariæ Rievallis . . . et pro salute animæ meæ, et Sibillæ, uxoris meæ, concessu et bona voluntate Rogeri, filii mei, . . . in elemosinam, illam culturam duodecim acrarum terræ quam primo tenuerunt de me ad terminum—scil., illam quæ incipit a Birkelde, ex parte orientali de Bodeltona, ad australem partem viæ qua itur de Bodeltona ad Richemunde, et durat usque in rivulum de Depedala, et inde per descensum aquæ usque ad Rogum calcis,<sup>1</sup> tenendam in perpetuum, liberam et quietam . . . Reddendo singulis annis michi et hæredibus meis duos solidos argenti et vi d., ad festum S. Martini, pro omnibus servitiis, et nichil amplius. Et, præterea, dedi eis in elemosinam illud parvum pratum quod Henricus de Bodeltona tenuit de me, juxta prædictam culturam. Hæc omnia [warranty]. Hæc autem fideliter, et sine malo ingenio tenenda in perpetuum manu mea affidavi, primo in manu Rogeri, de Katerich Decani, et postea in manu Radulfi de Valaines, in Curia Comitum de Richemund. His T. Thoma, Priore de S. Martino; Rogero, de Katerich Decano; Radulfo de Valaines; Alano, filio Briani; Rogero de Coiners; Alano Pincerna; [93] Conano de Hornebi; Thoma de Hakeford; Conano de Esch; Willelmo filio Gamelli; Thoma de Rungetona; Achario de Alnadebi; Alexandro, Clerico de Castello Bernardi; Rogero filio meo; Radulfo Bodan.

CXLII. xcix. . . Radulfus filius Rogeri . . . Sciatis me . . . confirmasse Deo et Ecclesiæ S. Mariæ Rievallis . . . in elemosinam, quicquid pertinet ad feudum meum de donatione Acharii de Tunstal in Bodeltona—scil., de terra culta, quam illi de frieschiis<sup>2</sup> et bosco coluerint, septemdecem acras et dimidiam, et pasturam in territorio ejusdem villæ ad animalia xiii<sup>cim</sup>, et equum unum, et porcos tres, et oves sexies viginti, et arietes sex, ubicunque pecora ipsius Acharii et hæredum ejus et hominum ejusdem villæ pascuntur, et omnia alia aisiaimenta sua et libertates suas, ita plenarie et libere, sicut in cartis ipsius Confirmation by Ralph FitzRoger, so far as his fee was concerned, of the donation by Acharius de Tunstal to Rievaulx.

<sup>2</sup> I am unable to lay my hand on any note touching this word, which has occurred also in a previous charter. But my recollection is that it denotes a damp locality where the growth is of rough, rugged herbage, tussocks, sweet gale, ling, etc., all mixed, as may be seen in the drier parts of many a moorside swamp or morass.

Acharii continetur, eisdem monachis [93<sup>b</sup>] concessi et confirmavi præsentī scripto, quantum ad me et hæredes meos pertinet. His T. Nicholao, Sacrista de Ripunia; Henrico Pincheneia, Canonico, et toto capitulo de Ripun; Rogero Britone; Radulfo filio Aldelini; Johanne de Crevequer; Huctredo de Stodleia; Rogero filio Aie; Radulfo de Nunnewick; Gilleberto Harenge; Bernardo de Ripun; Johanne Prudume<sup>1</sup>; Gerardo, Scutario meo.

William Fitz-Unfrid de Bolton grants to Rievaulx seven acres of land in Bolton adjoining the land given by Acharius de Tunstal.

CXLIII. . . Willelmus filius Unfridi de Bodeltune . . . Notum sit vobis me dedisse . . . Ecclesiæ S. Mariæ Rievallis . . . in elemosinam, et pro anima avunculi mei, Gamelli, . . . septem acras terræ versus occidentem, juxta terram quam dedit eis Dominus meus, Acharius. Hanc ipsam terram sine ulla contradictione hæredum meorum habebunt liberam et quietam ab omni terreno servitio [94] et consuetudine sæculari. Hanc etiam donationem confirmat Acharius, Dominus meus, sigillo suo. His T. Rogero de Kateric; Nicholao, Presbitero de Boeltun; Willelmo filio Reginaldi; Ivone filio Aluredi; Radulfo filio Bude; Radulfo, nepote Acharii; Rogero filio Acharii; Ricardo filio Acharii; Werri filio Acharii; Copsi de Wandesleia; Turkillo de Tunstal; Daniele de Belgerbi.

Grant by the same donor of eight acres and three perches in Bolton, with assent to the grant of pasture made by Acharius de Tunstal.

CXLIV. cl. . . Willelmus filius Unfridi de Bodeltune . . . Notum sit vobis me dedisse . . . Ecclesiæ S. Mariæ Rievallis . . . in elemosinam, . . . et pro anima Gamelli, avunculi mei, . . . octo acras et tres perticatas in campo de Bodeltun. Totam hanc terram sine ulla contradictione hæredum meorum habebunt liberam et quietam . . . Concessi etiam eisdem monachis totam pasturam quam Dominus meus, Acharius, dedit [94<sup>b</sup>] eis in campo ejusdem villæ, et dedi eis, quantum ad me pertinet . . . ita libere plenarieque Tenendam in perpetuum ad oves et animalia et pecora sua sicut idem Dominus meus, Acharius, eandem pasturam illis dedit et carta sua confirmavit. Hanc donationem meam [warranty]. His T. Hugone, Abbate de Sartis; Adam de Karrum, Canonico; Alexandro, Monacho de Sartis; Hugone filio Willelmi, Dapifero Everardi de Ros; Willelmo filio Briani de Helmesleia; Edmundo de Berechil; Ricardo de Wancugh<sup>2</sup>; Serlone de Mart[on].

CXLV. CII. . . . Dolfinus de Bodeltun . . . Sciatis me dedisse Ecclesiæ S. Mariæ Rievallis . . . pro redemptione animæ meæ, et uxoris meæ, et hæredum meorum, concessu Domini mei, Acharii, et concessu Willelmi, filii mei, tres acras terræ et dimidiam in Bodeltun, juxta terram quam Willelmus filius Unfridi dedit eisdem monachis, a parte occidentali, per eandem longitudinem. Has tres acras terræ et dimidiam dedi prædictis monachis in . . . elemosinam, liberas et quietas . . . Et quum proprium non habui, quando hanc donationem feci, sigillum, prece mea et prece testium subscriptorum, hanc donationem meam Dominus meus Acharius confirmavit, et sigillum suum ad hanc cartam apposuit. His T. Nicholao, Presbitero de Bodeltun; Radulfo filio Bude; Willelmo filio Unfridi; Radulfo de Bodeltun; Hugo filio Halthon.

 . . . Sciatis me . . . confirmasse Deo et Ecclesiæ S. Mariæ de Rievallē . . . in liberam . . . elemosinam, omnes donationes quas Acharius, pater meus, dedit illis in territorio de Bodeltona, Tenendas inperpetuum in omnibus rebus et libertatibus suis, ita libere . . . sicut continetur in tribus cartis per Acharium, patrem meum, quas dedit illis de prædictis donationibus, scil.,

<sup>2</sup> The Grantor is the second son of the Grantor of the three Charters numbered CXXXIX., CLX., CLXI. He had four brothers, Roger, the eldest son (named in Nos. CXXXIX., CXL., CXLIII., etc.), whose son Roger's name will be seen in the next deed; Werri, Jordan, and Conan being the other three. Of these the present Grantor had issue a daughter Ymania, Ymena, Ysmagina (the name appearing in other forms also), who was twice married, but seems to have died without bearing children, and a son Conan. Not only is no reference made to any other descendants of Acharius besides those already named, but it is an inference which it seems hard to evade, deducible from this series of documents, that, with the three grandchildren just named, the family died out. Certainly, General Plantagenet Harrison, at pp. 300, 301, would make it seem otherwise. But he has confused Acharius of Tunstal in Yorkshire with the family of Tunstal in Lancashire. He describes Achary as the giver of "the Grange of Bolton to the Abbot of Rievaulx," dating the gift in 1132, a date not agreeing too well with that quoted in No. CXXXIX., and he then assigns to him two sons, Alan and Walter, who are not only not the sons Acharius himself acknowledges in the charter just cited, but belong to the Lancashire family.

duas sub primo sigillo suo, et ternam<sup>1</sup> secundo sigillo suo, quæ est de duodecim acris terræ et de quodam parvo prato: de qua carta contradixeram illis Eboraci, in Curia Domini Regis. Et ego et hæredes mei adquietabimus et warantizabimus illis hæc omnia contra omnes homines inperpetuum. Hæc omnia concessi eis Eboraci in Curia Domini Regis, coram Henrico,<sup>2</sup> Decano Eboracensi, et Radulfo<sup>3</sup> Archidiacono Hereford, et Willelmo de Stutevilla, et Hugone Bardulf, Vicecomite Eborac., [et] Henrico de Hicklingtona, Clerico Regis, tunc Justiciis Domini Regis. His Testibus. Petro de Ros,<sup>4</sup> Archidiacono Karleol.; Ernasio de Novavilla; Theoberto de Valeines; Wimaro filio Warneri; Thoma de Burg; Radulfo filio Radulfi de Nesham; Willelmo de Atona; Hugone de Bobi, tunc Sub-Vicecomite; Waltero de Bentona; Rogero de Laceles; Willelmo filio Gamelli; Conano de Esche; Adam filio Horm; Radulfo de Vado; Henrico de Karleolo; Hugone filio Arturi; Roberto de Bellerebi; Werrico et Jordano fratribus meis; et multis aliis.

Quitclaim by Roger Fitz-Roger de Tunstal, grandson of Acharius, to Richard FitzGuimar de Leyburn, of all the lands, etc., in East Bolton which had been held by his uncle Richard's daughter, Ymania.

CXLV<sup>b</sup>. Omnibus . . . Rogerus filius Rogeri de Tunstal, salutem. Noverit universitas vestra me remisisse, concessisse, et de me et hæredibus meis, hac præsentī carta mea, inperpetuum quietum clamasse Ricardo filio Wimeri de Laybronne et hæredibus suis totum jus et clamium quæ habui vel aliquo modo habere potui in tota terra, cum omnibus pertinenciis suis, quam Ysmagina, filia Ricardi de Tunstal, avunculi<sup>5</sup> mei, habuit, die quo obiit, in villa et territorio de Est Boletona, tam in dominico quam in servitio—ita, scil., libere, quiete, solute et integre, quod nec ego, nec hæredes mei, nec aliquis successorum nostrorum in posterum, erga prædictam terram, nomine juris, aliquod jus vel clamium exigere vel vendicare possimus. Et

<sup>5</sup> There can be little doubt that this is the correct reading, although the writing looks much more like advunch than avunculi. It is self-evident that the Grantor of the present release and quitclaim is a lineal descendant, and therefore necessarily a grandson, of Acharius or Acharisius de Tunstal, or he could have had no right in the matter; and if so then Richard de Tunstal as his father's brother must be his "avunculus."

<sup>5</sup> This is a curious clause, a counterpart to which I do not remember having before met with. The abundance of querns still to be met with all over the country is a sufficient testimony to the fact that a protective clause of this kind might easily become necessary, if the grant of the mill were intended to continue to be of value.

Ymania, widow of Peter de East Bolton, confirms to Rievaulx the previously named rent of 2s. 6d., another out-rent of 1d., and all the lands, etc., of her fee held by the Convent.

<sup>3</sup> This lady's name has been found recurring frequently in the preceding charters, and in somewhat varying forms, among which are Ysmagina as well as Ymenca, Ymania, etc. There is no authoritative reason for concluding that Reginald de Bolton is her second husband, and indeed from the fact that in the present deed, executed jointly by her husband and herself, she calmly contemplates the possible event of widowhood and another marriage, it might be suggested that she had some reasons for assuming the probability that she of the two would be the survivor. But still, that would not decide the fact that the possibly infirm present husband was the first of the two. From the tenor of the deeds the inference would seem to be the other way. There seems to be more reason in concluding that the Reginald de Bolton of this deed, the Reginald FitzWalter of No. CXLV<sup>k</sup>., and the Reginald Chubbe of No. CXLV<sup>j</sup>. are one and the same person.

Reginald de Bolton and his wife Ymania, Richard de Tunstal's daughter (named in several preceding deeds) confirm to Rievaulx her father's grant of three roods, and also all lands of her fee in East Bolton held by the Convent.

<sup>3</sup> Under Ribald of Middleham Dugdale says, but with manifest want of completeness and accuracy, that Ralph FitzRibald, marrying a daughter of Robert de Brus of Skelton, had by her two sons Robert and Ribald, and that he was succeeded by the former, who paid a fine of two hundred marks, 8 John. "To him succeeded Ranulph his son and heir, who, 7 John, gave two hundred marks for livery of the third part of the inheritance of William de Stuteville in Braham and Leyburne. This Ranulph translated the Canons of Swainby . . . to Coverham, near his Manor House of Middleham, departing this life in 1251." This personage is of course the Ranulph FitzRobert who is named here, and the Court designated, his baronial Court of Middleham.

<sup>1</sup> A description of the monks of Rievaulx worth more than passing notice. William of Newburgh records that just before the foundation of Fountains Abbey, certain monks, at the invitation of Walter Espec, were sent, under the direction of St. Bernard, from Clairvaux into the district of Yorkshire; and it is in reference to this mission that in Annal. de Petroburg. the following statement is made: "Anno MCXXVIII ordo Cisterciensis primo venit in Angliam. Abbatia de Waverle fundata est, etc." But touching this statement the editor of the Memorials of Fountains writes in the Preface (p. xxiii), "Guided, however, by the Chronicle of Fountains, and a comparison of the terms he uses, in reference to the foundation of Rievaulx, with those of the letter to the King, it would appear more probable that the mission sent by St. Bernard from Clairvaux was directed immediately into Yorkshire."

Rievaulx all their right and claim in a certain half-acre of land in Bolton, which had been the subject of a suit at law.

Adam Fitz-Ralph de Bolton quit-claims to Rievaulx all his right, actual or possible, in a certain enclosure which the Convent had by the donation of Acharius de Tunstal.

<sup>1</sup> It should be noted that this Acharius, notwithstanding the identity of name, is not the Acharius de Tunstal so often named in the present series of deeds. That personage has passed away, and his son Richard is now the feudal lord in his place. The date of the deed is approximately fixed by the occurrence of Archdeacon Jocelin's name, to which Le Neve appends simply the figures 1205, but with such notice of the times of his predecessors as to convince us that he was only newly made Archdeacon in that year. But further, the date of the deed cannot well be much later than the said year; for in No. CLXIII. Geoffrey de Luci is met with as a contemporary of Ranulf de Glanville, Roger de Moubray, and William de Vesci, while in No. CXXXIX. Roger de Bavenh, twice mentioned in the present deed, is seen to be a contemporary of Acharius de Tunstal himself, the document itself bearing the date 1175 as that of its ratification.

<sup>3</sup> On the same authority Hamo was Treasurer in 1204, and also in 1215 and 1216. If this be authentic, and also the statement that Dean Simon vacated that dignity before or early in 1199, Hamo's predecessor having continued in office down to 1198 (Le

<sup>3</sup> This date is of great interest, as it most clearly demonstrates the fact that in this year there was an Abbot

Formal grant by the Convent to Sir Henry le Scrope of the lands in Bolton and Bellerby given in exchange for other lands at Newsam on Tees.

Abbot Henry in 1301 (probably), and he again gave place to Robert, who became Abbot in (?) 1303. In 1318, William, the fifth of the name, was Abbot; and thus the present Thomas was intermediate between him and Peter. The whole transaction is confirmed by entries in the Registrum Prioris et Conv. Dunelm. under date 26 March and 31 March 1315.

Grantor of No. CLXVII. He was the son of Simon le Scrope of Flotmanby, and married Giliana, Juliana, or Julian, daughter of Roger Brun, Brune, or Burrigan, of Thornton. By her he had a son, William le Scrope, to whom were born two sons, Richard and William, the latter of whom had a son Henry, who died in 1336. Henry le Scrope, son of Simon of Flotmanby, was of full age in 1205, and as the date of the present document lies in 1315 it is obvious that it must have been the second Henry who was party to this convention.

cujus rei testimonium præsentī cartæ, per assensum totius Conventus et Capituli nostri, sigillum nostrum commune est appensum. Hiis T. The variations between the two copies are too slight to call for notice, save only that in the list of witnesses Eggescliff is written for Eggesclive, Swynythways for Swynythwayt.*]

Henry le Scrope warrants the exchange with the Convent of certain lands, tenements, etc., of his in Neusam on Tees for the like of theirs in East Bolton according to the agreement in No. cxlv.

Mariæ, et Religiosis viris, Abbati et Conventui de Rievallē, unum mesuagium, octo tofta, unam bercariam et quatuordecim bovatas terræ, cum pertinenciis, in villa et territorio de Neusum super Tese, in Episcopatu Dunelm. —scil., quicquid habeo in eadem villa in confectione hujus chartæ, cum omnibus suis pertinenciis et proficuis quibuscunque, sine ullo retenemento, in escambium pro tribus mesuagiis, una bovata, et quadraginta acris terræ, triginta acris prati, viginti et una acris bosci, cum pertinenciis, in Est Boulton in Wandeslayedale, et uno mesuagio et viginti acris prati, cum pertinenciis, in Belerby, Habendum dictis Abbati et Conventui de capitalibus dominis feodi per servitia inde debita et consueta. Et ego Henricus et hæredes mei [6] omnia prædicta [warranty]. . . . Hiis T. Dominis Thoma de Richemund, Johanne de Coigners, Militibus; Willelmo de Aselakby; Johanne filio ejus; Nicholao de Surteys; Willelmo de Syningthwait; et aliis.

<sup>1</sup> On March 26, 1315, Sir Henry le Scrop makes the exchange specified in this document, and obtains the confirmation of the Bishop of Durham. On the 31st of the same month the Prior and Convent of Durham give their confirmation of the same.—(Registrum Secundum, p. 52.)

<sup>2</sup> No locality is assigned in the present document, but the name of the donor himself, and those of so many of the Testes, are sufficient to show in what district it must have been. Paull or Pagler, Easington, Rotsea, Sewerby, Waghen, are all in Holderness.

æstate. Concedo etiam quod in præfata gardini particula quodcunque eis placuerit ædificium ædificent, et ego et hæredes mei præfata[m] terram monachis prænominatis contra omnes homines garantizabimus. Hujus donationis, et hæredum confirmationis et concessionis, Testes sunt isti:—Willelmus, Presbiter de Pagla; Simon filius Turkilli; Robertus de Esintona; Robertus filius Simonis de Sigillo; Willelmus de Rotese, Miles; Willelmus de Siwardebi, Miles; Osbertus de Wagna; Nigellus frater Bernardi Clerici; Stephanus Niger; Simon Blund; Henricus Murdac; Walterus de Lincolnia; Chnutus; Petrus filius Roberti de Esintona; Ricardus, serviens Bernardi.

CXLVII. ciii. [96] . . . Alardus de Willardebi . . . Notum sit vobis me dedisse Ecclesiæ S. Mariæ Rievallis . . . in elemosinam, tres acras prati et dimidiam in prato de Willardebi, de dominio meo, per easdem divisas quas ego et Malgerus monachus fecimus. Hanc donationem feci prædictis monachis sub testimonio Gregorii, Prioris, et Capituli S. Mariæ de Bredlingtona; et quia volui hanc donationem esse ratissimam et perpetuo stabilem, prece mea Dominus Prior prædictus de Bredlingtona sigillum suum cartæ meæ affixit. His T. <sup>2</sup> After Seinter, all the other witnesses' names are in the nominative instead of the ablative.

Cyrograph of agreement between the Houses of Rievaulx and Kirkham, with mutual obligations, made in view of a projected cession by the latter in favour of the former.

CVI. Hæc sunt illa quæ concessimus et donavimus Monachis de Rievallē de possessionibus nostris, pro amore Dei et salute animarum nostrarum, et pro communi societate statuenda inter nos, pro pace et ho[97]nore Prioris nostri, et pro voluntate et desiderio advocati nostri—videl., Kirkeham, cum ecclesia et ædificiis nostris, et cum gardinis et ortis et molendinis nostris, et omnibus in eodem loco consistentibus, præter unum horreum, quod inde transferemus; et Hwitewella et Wivestou; et iiii carucatæ terræ in Sixtendala, quas Advocatus noster adhuc tenet in manu sua; et de nostro instauramento i carruca et c oves, tali conditione, quod Advocatus noster dabit nobis totam Lintoniam et Hwersletorp, cum omnibus eidem<sup>2</sup> villæ pertinentibus, et ipse eas nobis adquietabit ex omni calumpnia et liberas faciet ex omni servitio. Et Prior noster et sui auxiliarii ædificabunt nobis Ecclesiam, Capitulum, Dormitorium, Refectarium, de spuor,<sup>3</sup> sufficienti magnitudine, et alias quascunque domos necessarias de alia materie—scil. Infirmatorium, Cellarium, Hospitium, Pistrinum, Stabulum, Granarium, Horreum,—et ibi nobis firmabunt bonum molendinum si fieri potest sine nimis expensis. Ecclesiam co-operient de scindula<sup>4</sup> et regulares officinas claustrī de ros.<sup>5</sup> Cartas autem et confirmationes Lintoniæ,

<sup>3</sup> So far I have been unable to ascertain positively what this term may imply or what may be its philological connection. "De alia materia," in the succeeding clause, seems too indefinite to found any certain conclusion on; although it might be advanced that at that date, brick not being in use for such purposes, the only two kinds of material possible were stone and wood, or possibly what is termed "post and pan," or some accommodation of it; and as we can only imagine stone would have been the material employed in the construction of the very most important buildings of the Conventual Edifice—namely, the Church, the Chapter-House, the Dormitory, and the Refectory—it seems almost to force upon us (though, I think, wrongly) the conclusion that by "spuor" may be understood "ashlar." But see Introduction.

<sup>5</sup> This beyond all question means rushes, or possibly reeds. Rushes, locally called 'seves,' are in use to this day throughout this district, as thatching material. That they have been so used from time immemorial there is no doubt. In the Consuetudines Cotariorum de Hakenes, printed at p. 365 of the Whitby Chartulary, a part of the services due from each cotarius was "coopertorium metere," to mow rushes for thatch. Under the heading Ros, Ducange gives an extract dating in 1318 as follows—"pour les carpentages quel voudroit faire aus dites maisons et hosteils, nous li devons livrer sis milliers de Ros" (Chart. Abb. S. Amandi, Reg. 62, ch. 98). The great dorter at Ely was thatched until 1360.

et omnium possessionumstrarum, adquirent nobis. Privilegium etiam Domini Papæ nobis impetrabunt, [97<sup>b</sup>] sine nostro labore vel expensa, ad tenorem illius privilegii quod nobis magis placuerit et sit canonicum in hac diocesi. Sciendum etiam quod, in manu nostra, cum ecclesia parochiali de Wivestou, i carrucatam terræ retinemus, quæ ad præfatam ecclesiam pertinet, et in qua ipsa ecclesia nostra stat in moram. Decimas etiam suas nobis dabunt monachi ubicunque terras excoluerint in ipsa parochia, et in Hwitewella, et in dominicis Advocati nostri—videl., de omnibus rebus unde decima dari solet, nisi rationabili consideratione et ex nostro consensu eas adquietare valuerint.<sup>1</sup> Omnia mobilia nostra nobiscum, discedentes a Kirkeham, auferemus, i.e.,<sup>2</sup> cruces et calices, libros et vestes et omnia quæ ad ornatum ecclesiæ pertinent, necnon et fenestras vitreas<sup>3</sup> coloratas nobis retinemus, pro quibus illis albas faciemus. Tintinnabulum unum eis remanebit, quale voluerimus. Vasa etiam et utensilia et instrumenta domui necessaria, quæcunque inventa fuerint, sive in Kirkeham, sive in Hwitewella, nobis licebit pro nostra voluntate transferre. Hoc quoque sciendum est, quod nec a loco nostro volumus discedere, nec Priorem nostrum amittere, donec ea, quæ inter nos constituta sunt, ad debitum finem producta fuerint.<sup>4</sup> Et si forte, infra annum [98] locum mutaverimus, res et redditus Ecclesiæ nostræ, sicut modo sunt, per annum integrum in manu et potestate nostra erunt, ad debita nostra adquietanda. Similiter etiam res et redditus Lintoniæ in manu monachorum ad construenda ædificia nostra. Hæc omnia, prout inter nos constitutum est, ipsi ad finem debitum producere satagent, salvis eorum conventionibus quas in terris nostris supradictis invenerint. Sciendum quoque quod omnes canonici et fratres de Kirkeham, qui in præsentī vivunt, tantum habebunt in Capitulo et Ordine Cisterciensi quantum ejusdem Ordinis monachus.

Quitclaim to Rievaulx by Stephen Manuivelain of any rights. he had in the waste below Pickering.

<sup>2</sup> What I have expanded by i.e. stands in the mss. i., or the letter i dotted on either side. There can be little doubt that it is rightly expanded.

CONTROVERSIA INTER NOS ET ALANUM DE RIDALE.<sup>2</sup>

cx. . . . Rogerus de Molbrai . . . Noverit universitas vestra quod omnis controversia quæ vertebatur inter me<sup>3</sup> et Alanum de Ridale super moram quæ jacet inter Wellebrunam et Buleforde, et tendit usque ad Coldic—quæ, scil., communis est his tribus villis Wellebrune, Houetun et Buleforde, in hac forma est terminata, et in perpetuum sopita coram me et Curia mea, et multis vicinis meis et ministris Regis—David, scil., Lardener, et Odone de Neusum, et Willelmo Dod, et aliis pluribus, ex parte Vicecomitis:—Idem Alanus veniens in Curiam meam dicebat prædictam moram, et exitum monachorum Rievallis, quem in illa frussaverat, sui juris esse, et ad dominium suum pertinere, seque duelli certamine fidem dictis facturum. E con-

Formal statement of the settlement of a claim made by Alan de Rydale versus the Convent of Rievaulx, and Roger de Moubray as their patron, decided after recourse to the wager of battle.

<sup>3</sup> This may seem to be inconsistent with the heading, which states that the contention lay between Alan de Ridale and the Convent. But it will be seen, on a moment's consideration, that de Ridale's contention affected Roger de Mowbray's rights, and the validity of his grants, to Rievaulx. The entire deed is an exceedingly curious and interesting one, involving, as it apparently does, a bona fide appeal to arms to decide between the formal claims made by two parties in a purely legal contention. Whatever may be the balance of the influence we may be inclined to distribute between the compulsion of his friends and the forcible persuasion of the many "rounds" he had to fight, and blows to sustain, still it is evident that Alan de Ridale had the worst of it, and was forced to give in. And surely it is not a little significant that he should have had the hardihood to contend to such an extremity with so powerful a man as de Moubray, who, besides, appears to have been his feudal lord.

tra ego, asserens eam communem esse debere prænominatis tribus villis, et monachos debere præfatum exitum habere, sicut pater <sup>1</sup> meus, et mater mea, et ego liberius illum habueramus, et ipsum Alanum eundem exitum contra justitiam frussasse, quendam de liberis hominibus contra illum posui qui meam assertionem et jus [99<sup>xb</sup>] elemosinæ meæ defenderet. Igitur congregientibus illis, tandem, post multos assultus et ictus, compellentibus amicis suis, idem Alanus in ipso loco certaminis, coram omnibus qui aderant, quietum clamavit elemosinæ meæ, et Ecclesiæ ac monachis S. Mariæ Rievallis prædictis, exitum liberum in perpetuum, et etiam quietum clamavit illis quicquid continetur infra divisas quæ nominantur in cartis quas ego dedi præfatis monachis de donatione mea de Wellebrune et Houetun, tam in bosco quam in plano, et in omnibus aliis rebus, præter prædictam moram, ita quod ipse Alanus et hæredes ejus nichil omnino reclamabunt in perpetuum infra prædictas divisas. De mora vero præscripta ego et prædictus Alanus in hoc ibidem spontanee consensimus—quod xii legales milites eligeremus de vicinis nostris, et quicquid illi de eadem mora, juramento præstito, affirmarent, ratum irrefragabiliter haberemus, et ad hoc diem accepimus. Die vero statuta, ego et Curia mea, et multi de vicinis nostris, convenimus in sæpedicta mora, et ibidem per xii legales milites juratos, electos ab utraque parte, cognitum atque probatum fuit quod tota eadem mora hactenus fuerit communis, et esse debeat juris perpetuo prædictis tribus [100] villis,—Wellebrune, scil., Houetun, et Buleford; et in hoc idem Alanus consensit, et ideo quicquid operis ante fecerat in eadem mora ex sententia judicum ibi remansit, et sic per finem duelli tota controversia est terminata. Isti vero sunt milites qui pro sæpedicta mora juramentum fecerunt:—Willelmus de Steinegriva; Drogo de Harum; Petrus de Surdeval; Odo de Neuhus; Robertus de Benefeld; Willelmus de Bailol; Robertus de Steinegriva, frater Willelmi de Steinegriva; Bartholomæus de Toreni; Willelmus filius Engeleri; Hugo Holthorp; Stephanus de Killum; Tuoldus de Novavilla. Ideo autem volui hanc actionem conscribi et sigillo meo signari, ut rei veritas tam præsentibus quam futuris innotescat, et præfatus Alanus et hæredes ejus non possint iterum in litem revocare ea quæ ordine judiciario et per finem duelli finem acceperunt, in perpetuum sopita. His T. de Ministris Regis a Vicecomite missis; David, Lardiner Regis; Gaufrido

Quod si forte aliqui, sub nomine ecclesiæ prædictæ, aliquid ceperint in bosco, vel in plano, vel in pastura, aliter quam ceperunt antecessores eorum tempore Nigelli patris mei, ego et hæredes mei nullo modo id patiemur, sed monachis jus suum contra omnes warantizabimus. De decimis suis, hoc est, de Wellebruna, et de Houetune, si quis eos vexaverit, et decimas ab eis exigerit, nec ego nec hæredes mei inde intromitemus, nec aliquis per nos, vel quem inde retrahere poterimus, nec aliquem contra eos inde loquentem adjuvabimus vel manutenebimus. Hæc omnia firmiter tenere et sine malo ingenio perpetuo servare manu mea affidavi. His T. Roberto Capellano; Hugone Malebisse; Roberto de Bellocampo; Radulfo Chinun<sup>2</sup>; Petro Clerico.

Confirmation by Aaliza de Gant, in her own right, of the grant of two bovates in Hunmanby, and of the grants made to the Convent by Ralph de Noville, and Ranulf FitzWalter, and other matters.

CARTA ALIZ DE GANT, COMITISSÆ.

<sup>1</sup> The first Robert de Meinill is said to have died during the time of Henry I.; that is, previously to 1135. And a certain Stephen de Meinill, a successor of his in the Whorlton Barony, died in 1191. So far, then, as these dates go, the supposition that there were two Stephens in succession after Robert, the one his son and the other his grandson, is not in the least invalidated. But in the current pedigrees the name of the wife of either Stephen—assuming there were two—does not seem to be given. This document preserves from its date (about 1180-1185) the name of a wife of the second Stephen, if really there were two, as is almost certain. But this is not all. In No. LXXII., Stephen de Mainil, certainly the second of the name, mentions his wife Sibilla, as well as his sons Robert and Henry—this latter being, it would seem, a witness to the present deed. Stephen, then, must have been twice married.

<sup>2</sup> There is a Hagg Wood in Greenhow still, and not out of neighbourhood to the road leading on to the boundaries of Bildsdale; and, besides that, lying in a part offering no inconsistency with what is stated in connection with the other limit named on the west.

<sup>5</sup> It is by no means certain that this is correctly copied. The form given is, however, the presumable form. The same personal name occurs again below, in No. CLXXXIX., with a different Christian name.

<sup>6</sup> Neither title nor number precedes the present deed. The numbering has been continuous up to the last, which is marked cxxii. This order of numbers is resumed at the top of f. 117, where cxxiii. presents itself. The writing and ink in the interspace appear to be the same as in the previous folios, with but few exceptions; the only difference observable being that on f. 110<sup>b</sup> et seq. to f. 115<sup>b</sup> the writing is closer and smaller.

Torpin de Allerston grants to Rievaulx, out of the land assigned to his wife as her dowry, a carucate of land in Allerston, subject to certain conditions, etc., specified.

CLXVII. [f. 102<sup>b</sup>] . . . Torphinus [108] de Alvestein, et Alanus filius ejus, et Matildis de Fribois, uxor ejus, salutem. Sciatis nos dedisse . . . Ecclesiæ S. Mariæ Rievallis . . . in . . . elemosinam, i carrucatam terræ in Alvestein, quam ego, Torphinus, dedi in dotem prædictæ Matildi, uxori meæ, et hæredibus suis quos de me susceperit, cum concessu Alani, filii mei, sicut ipsa carrucata terræ jacet in campo de Alverstain, cum omnibus pertinenciis suis in pratis et pasturis, et in omnibus aliis rebus, excepto quod, toftis ipsius carrucatæ retentis in manu nostra, in escambium dedimus illis v acras terræ in Gindala de ofnamis<sup>2</sup> nostris, et ex parte occidentali ipsius vallis xxvi perchatas ad ædificia sua.<sup>3</sup> In toftis quas fecimus de utlandis<sup>4</sup>

<sup>3</sup> It will be observed that the Grantor reserves the tofts appertaining to the carucate of land conveyed, giving in lieu thereof five acres of land in Gindale, and twenty-six perches elsewhere, specially intended as sites for the buildings made requisite by the retention of the aforesaid tofts. These tofts, it hardly need be said, were the plots of ground specially set apart for the ædificia of the villani and others occupied in the cultivation of the carucate now given away, but not given with it. Usually in the rear of each toft was a croft, a sort of home-field of varying dimensions—as indeed were the tofts also. In compensation, then, for these tofts and crofts, which were not allowed to accompany the land granted, were the acres in Gindale given, and—as is to be presumed—so many perches more in another place more convenient for the necessary buildings than Gindale was. Besides, it will be noticed, other compensating lands were given out of a series of building sites recently arranged from out of freshly enclosed soil near to Gindale, insufficient in themselves, it may be, but subsidiary to the new building sites given elsewhere, and, with them, adequate to all the requirements for the area of land granted.

<sup>4</sup> In reference to this word I will cite what I have already printed in the Antiquary for April 1886:—"The term itself, outlands, presupposes a contrast or antithesis to inlands, and this term at once suggests a reference to the state of things in Edward the Confessor's time, and before, when the 'lord of the manor was a thane or hlaforð; the demesne land was the thane's inland, and the rest—the land in villenage—was the geneatland, or the gesettes-land.’—(Seeböhm, p. 128.) The idea in this part of Cleveland, up to lately at all events, connected with the word inland, is that of enclosed, in contradistinction to unenclosed or common land. Probably the idea is one of survival, connected with that of the ancient Common field. But in the documents before us the ‘outlands’ (utlandæ) can only be the lands of the vill not in demesne, but all equally held by the grantor of the capital lord of the fee, and consequently under his control.”

<sup>2</sup> This is so written; and as utendas follows, five words lower, I have thought it best to leave it as written. No doubt the acres had to be “enclosed” and “used,” and for the purpose of enclosing the bercharia; and so the plural form must be correct.

<sup>2</sup> In the Dodsworth MSS., vol. vii. fo. 92, is inserted copy of a charter headed "Carta Thorphini de Alvestein," which differs from this only in the omission of the name of the Grantor's son as a participator in the grant, and in the list of witnesses. Those are fewer in number, as well as entirely different. They are Willelmus de Ethun, Radulfus de Bolebec, Galfridus de Alvestein (presumably the nephew of the Grantor), Roger Manuivilain, Alanus Malecace, Willelmus de Cornebur. It may, most likely, be safely assumed that the Dodsworth copy is a copy of a somewhat earlier deed than this in the text.

The variations between the two copies are sufficiently numerous, but so many of them are so slight and unimportant that they need not be noticed in detail. The most striking or important are as follows:—Espeke, Especke for Espec; different cases of the possessive adjective noster, instead of corresponding cases of meus; Malebish' for Malebestie; Richton for Ricton; Gaunt for Ganth;

Hestescaith for Hestecarth; Tesdal for Thesedale; Westerdal' for Westdale; the whole sentence touching the donation of Hugo de Baillol, which is omitted in the copy before us; Geremie for Jerhemie; tresdecem for x before acras in the notice of Robert Bruntofte's donation; et pecunia pro mурdro, omitted in the present deed before murdris; parcorum for parcharum; tithingpeny for thidingepeni; and Gettington for Gaittington.

Bulemer, cum omnibus pertinenciis suis, illis concessit, et carta sua confirmavit: ex dono quoque Everardi de Ros sartum et boscum de Helmeslach, per metas et divisas quæ in carta ipsius Everardi nominantur, et communem pasturam de Pockeleia, cum cæteris libertatibus, sicut idem Everardus hæc omnia illis dedit et . . . confirmavit, et sicut Rex Henricus, pater meus, hæc eadem concessit et confirmavit: item ex dono Roberti de Sproxtun, et Simonis filii ejus, sedem berchariæ et quinquaginta acras terræ in territorio de Sproxtun, et pasturam ad oves cccc<sup>tas</sup>, et ad boves xl<sup>ta</sup> viii<sup>to</sup>, ubique, sicut in cartis eorum continetur, et cætera aisiamenta et libertates, sicut idem Robertus et Simon illis dederunt et . . . confirmaverunt: de dono quoque Gilleberti de Ganth, duas bovatas terræ in Hundemanebi, cum omni communi pastura ejusdem villæ, sicut idem Gillebertus illis dedit et . . . confirmavit; ex dono Radulfi de Novavilla [112] unam carrucatam terræ in Rictona, cum omnibus pertinenciis suis, sicut idem Radulfus illis dedit et . . . confirmavit: ex dono Odonis de Boltebi terram et wastinam de subtus Heste[l]carth, et communem pasturam de Boltebi et de Ravenestorp et Trillebi, sicut idem Odo illis dedit et . . . confirmavit; et terram [quam] Adam filius ejus illis dedit, et sicut idem Adam hæc omnia illis confirmavit, et sicut continetur in carta ejus et cyrographo, quæ facta fuerunt in Curia patris mei apud Danecastrum coram Rannulfo de Glanvilla, et cæteris Justiciis ejus: ex dono Willelmi de Stuttevilla quandam partem terræ in Mortona . . . sicut idem Willelmus illis dedit et . . . confirmavit: ex dono Roberti de Laceles, et Gaufridi, filii ejus, unam carrucatam terræ in Mortona, et unam culturam xv<sup>cim</sup> acrarum, cum prato et cum omnibus aliis rebus ad easdem terras pertinentibus, sicut in cartis eorum continetur: ex dono A[c]harii de Tunstal totam terram, et totam pasturam intus et extra, per omnia, et omnia alia aisiamenta quæ dedit illis in Bodeltuna, sicut in cartis ejus continetur: ex dono Willelmi filii Umfridi, et Dolfini de Bodeltun, et Petri filii Gillonis, omnes terras quas dederunt illis in eadem Bodeltuna, sicut illis dederunt et . . . confirmaverunt: ex dono Walteri Engelram, et Willelmi, filii ejus, totas terras quas illis dederunt in Heslertona, cum communi pastura ejusdem villæ, in moris et marescis, et in omni alio loco pasturæ, intus et extra, per omnia, longe et prope, ubicunque pecora eorum et hominum suorum pascuntur, libere et quiete, cum omnibus aliis aisiamentis, sicut in cartis eorum continetur: ex dono Adæ filii Petri, et ex dono Mathæi filii Saxi, totas terras, et totas minerias ferri, et totum mortuum boscum in [112<sup>b</sup>] Sitlintun et in Floctona, cum pasturis et omnibus aliis

CLXXXIX. CARTA TORPHINI DE ALVESTAIN ET GAUFRIDI NEPOTIS EJUS DE JURATORIBUS VASTI.

CXXXII. . . . Thorphinus de Alvestain et Gaufridus, nepos ejus, salutem. Sciatis quod isti homines juramento recognoverunt proprium wastum Regis esse ab Alvestainbech usque Tacriveling—scil., Rainaldus Forestarius, et Hugo Boia, et Alfwinus Hert, qui tres custodes fuerunt ejusdem wasti, et post eos [122<sup>b</sup>] juraverunt Thorold de Novavilla, et Gillebertus de Atuna, et Radulfus Luvel de Grisetorpe, Willelmus filius Normanni de Ecbricetstuna, Asketillus Malecaca, Gamel de Rodestuna, Theobaldus de Martuna, Gamel de Roaldesbi, Cospatrickus frater ejus, Ricardus filius Rogeri de Thornetona, Eugenaldus<sup>1</sup> de Wiltona, Theodoricus de Sextendal, Theobaldus filius Pagani de Wicham, Thor filius Acce de Snegintona, Rogerus filius Ucce de Rolestuna, Hugo filius Walthepi de Rolestuna, Stephanus Manievilain, Walterus Bardulf, Liulfus de Kintorne, Ricardus de Galmetona, Willelmus filius Ketelli, Ricardus Rollevilain, Stephanus filius Gamel de Pikaringa, Robertus de Bonefelde, Walterus filius Arnaldi de Aselacbi, Willelmus filius Rostune,<sup>2</sup> Lucas de Neutona, Godefridus de Neutona:—

Important and authoritative statement by Torphin de Allerston, and his nephew Geoffrey, touching the boundaries of the Waste below Pickering, as recognised by a jury of the principal men of the district, headed by the Wardens of the said Waste.

Rostune may be a personal name, but as there is a place called Ruston (in the parish of Wykeham) in the close neighbourhood of the places furnishing distinguishing appellatives to many of the persons named in this list, the presumption almost is that some Christian name is omitted before Rostune.

<sup>1</sup> The boundary here given is one the general run of which is perhaps, on the whole, fairly easy to make out. And yet on trying to make out its details it is found to be beset with manifold difficulties and perplexities. It is impossible to give the questions involved adequate consideration in the present series of notes; but an attempt will be made to deal with them in a manner more or less adequate in the Introduction. Of that part of the entire boundary involved by the stream to the name of which this note is appended, it may at least be said that it is altogether clear and unmistakable.

<sup>2</sup> Not the slightest trace of this name has rewarded the search made for it. And unfortunately there are other names similarly involved, as to which the same sort of remark, however qualified in some one particular or more, has necessarily to be made. One remark, however, it seems requisite to make in connection with Tacriueling—assuming that to be the correct reading of the name: it might be Tacrineling—and that is that Allerston Beck and Tacriueling are clearly intended to represent or denote the eastern and western limits of the grant or grants involved. This will stand out more evidently if we refer to the document containing the fullest delineation of the boundary under notice, and that is No. ccx., or Henry the Second's Charter of Confirmation, which, so to speak, consolidates the mass of charters which go to the completion of the grant of the "Vastum subtus Pickeringam." The document referred to, after noticing that the metæ et divisæ concerned had been formally sworn to by the Wapentake of Pickering-Lith, goes on to specify as follows:—"scil., quicquid est inter Alvestainebech et Tacriueling in longitudine, præter pratum de Eduimerse—per has, scil., divisas: a loco ubi Alvestainebech cadit in Derewentam, sicut eadem Derewenta currit usque ad locum ubi Ria cadit in Derewentam; et inde ubi Costa cadit in Riam; et inde per Costham ad Tacriueling, et inde per Tacriueling usque ad fossatum monachorum, et inde per idem fossatum sicut currit Lund et cadit in Costham; et inde per Costham contra aquilonem sursum usque ad locum ubi Kiptoftesich cadit in Costam, et inde sicut Kiptoftesich tendit usque ad Midsich, et inde per Midsich usque ubi Thorntonebech cadit in Midsich; et inde per Thorntonebech, contra aquilonem, usque ad fossatum quod circuit campum de Theokenarais, et inde per idem fossatum usque ad Blastam; et inde per sikettum quod ibi est, in Midsich, et inde ut Midsich descendit in Alvestainebech, et inde sicut Alvestainebech descendit in Derewentam." Now, it is to be observed that the boundary is coincident with the Costa from its confluence with the Rye as far as Tacriueling, and that then it deviates from the water-line hitherto followed, and threads Tacriueling itself (whether it be a thread of water, or a longitudinal depression of the land, or an artificial bank), until it arrives at a dike made by the monks themselves, following that dike alongside the Lund until the Costa is once more reached. The question of course is, "On which side of the Costa is this digression made?" The most probable answer seems to be, "On the west side"; and that it is quite within the range of probability that Tacriueling was near what is now called Tranmere Hill, and that what is now Ackland Beck represents the ancient Lund; and perhaps this last suggestion is not robbed of any probability by the circumstance that its course is very circuitous, and that "sicut circuit Lund" is the reading, instead of "sicut currit Lund," in the Patent Rolls copy of King Richard's Confirmation which we have in CLXXII.; and this, besides the fact that the Ackland Beck takes its course through what is marked on the map as "Lund Forest." But, however this may be, the boundary, after having rejoined the Costa, proceeds northwards along the line of the

said stream until it reaches the drain or slow stream called Kiptoftsich, the course of which it follows until it reaches another like drain called Midsich, which drain again soon finds its way into Thornton Beck. This last feature enables us to identify the Midsich of the boundary as the Midsyke Drain of to-day, which lies something less than two miles nearly due south of Pickering. And this is a feature which probably enables us to identify the Kiptoftsich of the divisa; for there is a Toft Drain as well as a Toft-Swang Drain communicating with Midsyke towards the west, and reaching close to the Costa on the east. It may not be possible to decide whether the one or other of these "drains" may represent the old Kiptoftsich; but there can be little doubt that the modern Wintofts is the survival of the ancient Kiptofts, and that the boundary we are pursuing took its turn to the east in its close vicinity. Arrived at Thornton-beck, it will be noted that the boundary-line turns up the course of the stream, or towards the north, continuing in that direction until it strikes the dike or bank which encloses the Theokemersch "campus." This name Theokemersch or Theokemara is lost. But from the present document we find that Thornton and Theokemarescus were conterminous: and, by inference from No. CLXIII., that, in part at least, the latter abutted upon Wilton; and hence the deduction is that the lost Theokemersch may be found again in what is now called Thornton Marshes. But it becomes necessary, here, to draw attention to the fact that there are clearly two slow drains or sykes involved in the present delineation, both called Midsich, the one of them flowing into Thornton Beck, the other into Allers-ton Beck. With this latter we are no further concerned here, than as far as its connection with Theokemersc is concerned. The next mere or boundary-mark mentioned is Blasta, of which no trace seems to be left. I should guess it to have been not far from the angle formed by the incidence of the modern Carr Drain, flowing between Thornton and Wilton, with the "Friar Dike," which is the northern boundary of Loft Marshes, and literally "descendit in Alvestainebech." And, following this stream to the point of its confluence with the Derwent, we reach the place from which the boundary started. But there is still one matter remaining to be noticed, and that is the exception made in No. CCX. in the words "præter pratum de Eduiemersch." The following extract from No. CXC., or William de Vesci's charter "de Wasto," gives the necessary explanation, and, besides that, leads on to an approximate identification of Eduiemersch: "Ex occidentali parte rivuli qui de Derewenta se extendit versus Pickaringam, dedi eisdem monachis quicquid habui inter Costam et Riam et Kyptoftesich et præfatum rivulum . . . præter pratum quod vocatur Eduiemersch, quod certis divisis coram me a liberis hominibus meis, cum prædictis monachis, discriminatum est—salvo ponte et via mea," this same bridge being described in No. CXCII. as Pons de Houm, and known as Howe Bridge to this day; the rivulet which "directs itself towards Pickering" being, beyond question, what is now called the Trumper Sewer. In this vicinity, then, Eduiemersch has to be looked for, as regards its local habitation.

toftesich, et ita per Kiptoftesich usque in Costam, et ex altera parte de Costa usque in Tacriuelingam. Infra has divisas nominatas habebat Eustachius filius Johannis dimidiam carrucata[m] terræ et pratum quoddam—scil., in Eduicmersch,<sup>1</sup> de quo prato singulis annis fenum auferre potuit, pro quo annuatim iiii s. solvebat socagio Regis de Pikeringe, nec aliquid amplius habuit in wasto, neque pasturam neque turbariam. Hæc juravimus et hoc testari parati sumus.

CXCVI. [127] CARTA REGIS HENRICI SENIORIS DE DANEGELD ET TEMANETALE PRO RIEVALLE.

King Henry I. confirms the nine carucates given by Walter Espec, and grants immunity from the payment of Danegeld on account of them.

CXCVII. CARTA HENRICI REGIS JUNIORIS DE PRIVILEGIO RIEVALLENSIUM.

<sup>1</sup> The last deed is numbered CXXXVIII. The present number is consequently entirely wrong. The charter which stands next in order has transverse lines passed through it, as if with the object of crossing it out; and then the deed next in order is numbered CXXXIX.; as it would have been in due sequence if neither the present document nor its successor had been inserted.

concerned, and that the total impost on the whole only amounted to two shillings. As to this, Bishop Stubbs, while noticing the fact that the Danegeld had been "increased heavily" by the Conqueror, indeed "trebled in 1084, six shillings being exacted from each hide of land instead of two, the usual sum raised under the Anglo-Saxon kings," goes on to say—"Monasteries possessed in many cases immunity from Danegeld; in other cases they had special commutations; a large extent of land frequently 'defendit se,' that is, was held responsible, or rated, as one hide."—Constitutional History, i. 382. It would appear, then, that the abated amount previously chargeable on these nine carucates was by this charter entirely remitted.

Walteri Espec—scil., Grif et Thillestonam, cum omnibus appendiciis eisdem terris pertinentibus . . . et vallem quæ dicitur [128] Bildesdala, et hæc omnia cum viis et semitis, et divisis quas Walterus Espec illis constituit, et carta sua confirmavit et divisit. Charter by Henry II. taking Rievaulx and its possessions under the Royal protection, and giving them certain immunities and forest privileges.

CXCVIII. cxxxix.<sup>3</sup> Henricus Rex Angliæ et Dux Normanniæ . . . Sciatis me recepisse in mea propria manu et custodia et protectione Domum de Rievallē, et monachos, et omnes fratres in ea Deo servientes, et omnes terras et res et possessiones eorum sicut meam propriam elemosinam. Et volo et firmiter præcipio quod omnes terras et tenuras suas habeant et teneant in perpetuum, et libere et quiete et honorifice et integre, cum omnibus libertatibus et liberis consuetudinibus et quietanciis suis in bosco, solutas et quietas de sciris et hundredis et wapentachiis et placitis et querelis et geldis et Danegeldis et themantale et auxiliis et [129<sup>b</sup>] scutagiis et assisis et exercitiis et occasionibus, et omni terreno servitio et sæculari exactione: Et in boscis eorum nullus habeat forestam vel fuget sine licentia et voluntate eorum, super forisfacturam meam: sed the Oxfordshire Dorchester, the curious fate of being at different times the seat of two distinct bishopricks. At the time of the local conquest in 1170, Chester contained no monastic house; like Shrewsbury, it was a stronghold of the seculars, who possessed two important churches, one within and the other without the walls. Within the city was the church of St. Werburgh, from which the first Norman Earl Hugh removed the secular canons, rebuilt the church, and turned it into a Benedictine Abbey. A little before this, Peter, the first Norman Bishop of Lichfield, following the same policy as Remigius at Dorchester and John of Tours at Wells, removed the seat of his bishoprick from little Lichfield to greater Chester. He fixed his throne in the minster of St. John without the walls. . . . The stately Norman work which still remains in the church is most likely due to this bishop. For his successor, Robert of Limesay, moved his throne again from St. John's to Earl Leofric's minster at Coventry. Still the Bishops were often spoken of as Bishops of Chester, and St. John's kept up a kind of vague claim to be looked on as a third cathedral church alongside of Coventry and Lichfield."

<sup>1</sup> There was no Bishop of Rochester at the date required, whose initial was R. As Hugh Pudsey, the second witness to this Confirmation, was elected in 1152-3, and Bishop Walter of Chester died in 1159, the date of the document lies between those two years. But, according to Le Neve, Walter, brother of Archbishop Theobald, was elected Bishop of Rochester in 1147-8, and did not die until July 1182. We have therefore the alternative of supposing that the Rievaulx scribe had miscopied the initial R, or else that Le Neve's authority, Chron. Gervasii, was in error. The last hypothesis can hardly be maintained.

<sup>1</sup> Geoffrey Plantagenet, a natural son of Henry II., was elected Archbishop of York in 1189, although not consecrated until nearly two years later. Henry II. died in July 1189. Consequently this confirmation must date from the earlier part of that year. There is then the difficulty that Le Neve states that Geoffrey's election dates 15th Sept. 1189, or more than two months after the King's death. It is not easy to suggest a satisfactory explanation of the discrepancy. Perhaps, however, the following suggestion by Mr. W. Brown of Arncliffe Hall may not be without value. Premising that he can find no Archbishop Geoffrey contemporaneous with Henry II., and adverting to the fact that there were two places called Bures or Burum at which King Henry is known to have been, the one, Bures-le-Roi, and the other Bures simply, and that, with one exception, only the former is to be understood when Burum is mentioned in connection with the said King, he goes on to say that Henry II., in July 1171, made a charter at Burum, which Eyton takes to be Bures-le-Roi, in favour of Newstead Abbey, to which Geoffrey, Archdeacon of Canterbury, was witness. This same Geoffrey was also witness to a charter by the younger King Henry (who predeceased his father), at the same time and place. In both these charters Geoffrey is the first witness. Can the "Archiepiscopo" in No. cci. be a mistake for "Archidiacono"? Bures-le-Roi is, I take it, the Bures St. Mary's of the present day, and derived its older name from the fact that Eadmund, King of the East Angles, was crowned there, according to the testimony of Geoffrey de Fontibus.

of "York or West-Riding," but his name is out of place; for he is put before Hugh de Stotevagina, who is said to have held the office in 1138. Archbishop Roger, the first witness, was consecrated in 1154, and Archdeacon Geoffrey became bishop in 1174; consequently the date of this confirmation lies between those two years, and thus a distantly approximate date is afforded for John FitzLetold's occupancy of the office of Archdeacon.

<sup>4</sup> He was the King's youngest brother. It is supposed that in contemplating the Conquest of Ireland, Henry intended that kingdom for his brother William, for whom no provision had been made by their father, Geoffrey of Anjou. Henry's brother Geoffrey had succeeded their father in his patrimonial domains, but was driven out of them by Henry in 1156.

CCXIII. CLIII. Henricus, D.G. Rex Angliæ et Dux Normanniæ . . . Sciatis me . . . confirmasse Ecclesiæ S. Mariæ Rievallis, . . . omnia subscripta quæ Bernardus de Balliolo rationabiliter dedit eis et [140] carta sua . . . viz., communem pasturam lx matribus equabus, cum nutrimento suo, per totam forestam ipsius Bernardi in Thesedale, et pasturam ad sexies xx<sup>ti</sup> animalia sine secta, et ad xii vaccas et duos tauros, cum nutrimento suo, in una parte ejusdem forestæ, secundum quod determinatum est in curia ipsius: et duas bovatas terræ in villa sua de Middeltona, . . . et communem pasturam ejusdem villæ, cum omnibus libertatibus et aisiamentis quæ pertinent duabus aliis bovatis in eadem villa, et omnia aisiamenta in prædicta foresta sua, sicut ipsa carta testatur et in eadem carta determinatum est: et duas bovatas terræ in villa sua de Westerdala, cum . . . communi pastura . . .; et communem pasturam sexies xx<sup>ti</sup> animalibus, sine secta, per omne territorium et per totam forestam suam de Westerdala, . . . Quare volo et firmiter præcipio quod ipsa Ecclesia de Rievall et monachi omnia supradicta habeant et teneant bene et . . . de ipso Bernardo, et de hæredibus suis, libera et soluta et quieta ab omnibus servitiis et consuetudinibus et exactione sæculari, in . . . elemosina — Reddendo ipsi Bernardo et hæredibus suis duas marcas argenti annuatim, unam ad Pentecosten, et alterum ad festum S. Martini, pro omnibus servitiis, sicut dedit eis et concessit, et sicut carta ejus testatur. T. R., Archiepiscopo Rothom.; G. Præposito Beverlacensi, Cancelario Henrici<sup>2</sup> Regis, filii mei; Radulfo, Abbate de Parco de Lue; Thoma, Priore de Danestaple; Rogero, Capellano meo; Rogero le Bigod; Rogero de Stutevilla; Hugone de Creissi; Willelmo de Stutevilla; Roberto filio Bernardi. Apud Clarendonam.

Grant by Bernard de Baliol to Rievaulx of wide pasturage in Teesdale, with other privileges, and of land and pasturage in Westerdale.

<sup>2</sup> Aschetil FitzGospatric appears as a witness to No. civ. (another charter by the author of the one before us), besides being named in it as being the former tenant of the carucate of land thereby transferred to the Abbey. There can be no doubt that the said carucate is the land for which the eleven bovates here named were given. For, on that conclusion, the expression "propter iii bovatas terræ de incremento" is fully explained. Aschetil gave up eight bovates and receives eleven in exchange for them.

his "Pedigree of Baliol, Barons of Gainford," etc., a Wimundus de Baliol was father of Bernard, Guy, Josceline, and Hawise. Of these, Guy, by his wife Dionisia, was father of Hawise, Bernard, and Joceline. This Bernard again was father of another Bernard, who was the grantor of the present Charter. In other words, he was son of the founder of Barnard Castle.

et bladis meis et hominum meorum, ex parte aquilonali, a Graigretknottes<sup>1</sup> usque ad divisas Episcopi Dunelm., et inde versus occidentem quantum foresta mea durat versus Westmere-land, ita quod pulli et pultræ, quando fuerint duorum annorum, inde removebuntur. Et præter hæc dedi eis pasturam in una parte ejusdem forestæ ad sexies xx animalia sine secta, et ad xii vaccas et duos tauros, cum nutrimento suo, ad opus pastorum suorum infra Egleshope<sup>2</sup> et Hodeshope, per has [142] divisas:—Ex parte aquilonali de Mideltona a capite de Snelesgile<sup>3</sup> super Langeschaghe<sup>4</sup> usque ad Wlvelaikeburne, et a Wlvelaikeburne per transversum Egleshope usque ad Graigetknottes, et sicut divisæ sunt inter me et Episcopum Dunelm. superius versus aquilonem, quantum foresta mea durat. Item ex parte meridiana a capite Snelesgile per Gaitecastel us[que] ad rivum de Hodeshope, per filum aquæ superius versus aquilonem usque ad divisas forestæ prædicti Episcopi, quantum foresta mea durat, ita quod vituli et vitulæ ipsarum vaccarum, quando fuerint duorum annorum, inde remo[ve]buntur. Quare vaccæ, cum tauris suis, et nutrimento suo, libere pascentur in comuni pastura de Mideltona ubicunque pecora ejusdem villæ pascentur, quando pastores eorum voluerint. Et in eadem hope, nearly as certainly, that of the latter. As regards the element laike, it may be observed that it occurs in other local names in the same vicinity, and so there is little doubt that it has some special significance. I have met with the term cocklaik or cocklake in the same sense as cockshut or cockshoot (see Yarrell's British Birds, ii. 588) or cock-road; the meaning being the route or line of flight taken by the woodcock in its passage to its feeding ground in the evening; and wlflaik, as meaning a place frequented by wolves, suggests a by no means impossible explanation of the name before us. See notes and below. But, on the other hand, it is necessary to advert to the fact that in No. cxvi., of which the present deed is, in many respects, a reproduction, the name is spelt Wlfuellaickeburna, and that is Wolf-well-oak-burn, and in all probability this is the preferable reading.

provincial word for a rounded rocky summit, and the name may be so explained.

<sup>2</sup> This name is found still in existence some six miles north-west of Barnard Castle, and a mile or so distant from the Tees. And there is another hope in the same vicinity, but further to the north, which may, quite possibly, as being in close proximity to a stretch of moorland named "Monkmoor," supply the habitation of Hodeshope.

<sup>3</sup> Snaisgill is a local name found in the same neighbourhood, and, whether the corruption exhibited in that form be due to the country folk or the nomenclators of the Ordnance Survey, there is no reasonable doubt that it represents the name Snelesgile. It is worthy of passing note that the same prefix is not an unknown one in the formation of local names. Thus there was a mediæval Snelesgriff in the parish of Guisborough, not to mention others.

pastura inter Egleshope et Hodeshope habebunt domum longitudinis x perticarum et latitudinis xx pedum, et canes et hortos sicut voluerint infra clausuram suam, quæ semper erit magnitudinis cuius fuit tempore quo carta hæc facta fuit. Et facient in eadem pastura faldas animalibus suis, et clausuras ad fenum faciendum quantum voluerint, et ubi eis placuerit et utilius fuerit. Et in pastura equarum habebunt faldas ad equos illaqueandos, et facient ibi fenum quantum voluerint, et ubi eis placuerit, sine defensa facienda antequam falcaverint: [142<sup>b</sup>] sed postquam falcaverint, libere custodient et colligent fenum suum: et habebunt longitudinis x perticarum domum, et latitudinis xx pedum in plano ad caput de Kauesete,<sup>1</sup> juxta ubi Ethresgilebec cadit in Theisam versus orientem, et circa v<sup>quo</sup> acras terræ claudendas sepi et fossato, et utendas sicut voluerint, a festo S. Martini usque ad initium mensis Aprilis, ad equos et pullos suos et pastores; et reliquo tempore frater eorum, et duo servientes qui equos custodierint, ibi erunt per noctes, et diebus requiescent et comedent quando opus fuerit, et curam agent clausuræ suæ et domus, ne pereant; et ubi fenum suum comportaverint, claudent illud sepi sufficiente, et libere ducent fenum suum ad prædictas domos animalium et equorum, et vias caretis emendabunt. Concedo etiam in foresta mea ligna et materiem et opertorium<sup>2</sup> ad prædictas domos, et ad faldas, et ad focariam, et alia aisiamenta ad suos proprios usus in eisdem locis, et ut libertatem habeant per totam terram meam eundi et redeundi, et ducendi res suas et pecora ad pasturam, et reducendi. Præterea dedi eis duas bovatas terræ in villa mea de Mideltona plenarie, cum . . . et pasturam intus et extra, ubicunque pecora ejusdem [143] villæ pascuntur, ad iii equos et x boves et ad sexies xx<sup>ti</sup> oves, quarum agni, post separationem, inde removebuntur, et ad viii<sup>to</sup> vaccas, cum tauro et nutrimento suo, cum quibus ibunt in prædictam pasturam animalium quando pastores eorum voluerint, ita quod vituli et vitulæ, cum fuerint duorum annorum, inde removebuntur. Præterea dedi eis pasturam ad sexies xx<sup>ti</sup> animalia

<sup>1</sup> The orthography of this name is so uncertain that it is almost idle to speculate upon what it is intended to represent. Whether the third letter is n or u, and the penultimate c or t, cannot be decided by the writing. Sece would be meaningless in such a position, and sete would not; and it is not at all an unusual final element in place-names occurring a little more to the north. Thus, such names are not uncommon

sine secta, et ad xii<sup>cim</sup> vaccas et duos tauros, cum nutrimento suo, ad opus pastorum suorum, per omne territorium et per totam forestam meam de Westerdale, ubique, longe et prope, sine retenamento, excepto pratis et bladis, ubi, post ablatam vesturam, libere utentur pastura sicut homines ejusdem villæ, ita quod vituli et vitulæ vaccarum, cum fuerint duorum annorum, inde removebuntur: et ad prædicta animalia habebunt juxta Wulvedalebec<sup>1</sup> subtus Hogthaith<sup>2</sup> domum et clausuram, et cætera omnia [aisiamenta] ibi et alibi in pastura et foresta, sicut concessi eis inter Egleshope et Hodeshope; et in eadem villa dedi eas duas bovatas terræ plenarie, cum stauramento, et aliis pertinenciis et aisiamentis, sicut concessi eis in Mideltune, et habebunt ad pastores animalium suorum unum logiam longitudinis xv<sup>cim</sup> pedum et ejusdem latitudinis. Et est sciendum quod hæc logia e[143<sup>b</sup>]rit in superiori parte de Eskletes,<sup>3</sup> et quod prædictus frater, cum duobus servientibus, frequentabit supradictam domum equorum, sicut præscriptum est, sine majori familia et sine occasione. Si vero in his pasturis pecora eorum metas statutas transierint, sine facta custodia, homines mei avertent ea sine molestia. Si autem facta custodia transierint, homines mei ducent ex eis duo ad proximam villam meam secundum legem patriæ. Si vero in pratis vel bladis inventa fuerint, secundum modum imparcabitur. Pedicas vero ponent ad capiendos lupos<sup>4</sup> ad considera-names in this northern district, and among other instances one is found not far from Rievaulx itself.

<sup>1</sup> The modern form of this name is Wooddale beck; and it is noteworthy that in another part of the same district, about six miles distant north-east, the same mediæval name is corrupted into the same modern form—to be sure, with diversities of spelling. I refer to Wooddale, near Stonegate, which in the Brus Partitio is written Ulvdale.

<sup>2</sup> A manifest corruption of Hogthwaith or Hogtwaith. Its site may be determined by that of the farmstead known as Thwaites or Waites House, near Wooddale House in Westerdale Head, and about two miles north of Esklits.

<sup>4</sup> In addition to the two local Ulfdales or Wolfldales noticed in a preceding note, there is, on the moorland ridge lying between Great Fryup and Danby, and not more than three to four miles east of Wooddale in Westerdale, a house or grave-mound called Wolfpit. In this there is a large excavation of a totally different aspect from the cavities usually found in such hills, and which are due to the non-scientific openings made in search of the supposed valuables contained in the barrows. The name is certainly not of modern imposition, and it is now very many years ago—I daresay twenty years before I became acquainted with such sources of information as the present charter—that in a story I wrote for publication in a Boys' Magazine I made this hill the scene of a struggle with a wolf. Doubtless, it was, in tionem Forestarii mei, et ad summonitionem ejus removebunt, octo diebus ab eo præmoniti, et quicquid in illas inciderit meum erit præter pecora eorum. Et pastores eorum libere utentur cornibus in eisdem pasturis propter bestias et latrones.<sup>1</sup> Hæc omnia dedi eis in . . . elemosinam, libera et soluta et quieta . . . Tenenda in perpetuum, Reddendo michi et hæredibus meis annuatim ii<sup>as</sup> marchas argenti, unam ad Pentecosten et alteram ad festum S. Martini, pro omnibus servitiis. Hæc omnia dedi eis ita libera sicut aliqua elemosina potest unquam dari melius et liberius et quietius; et ego et hæredes mei manutenebimus et warantizabimus prædictis monachis [144] hæc omnia . . . et adquietabimus omnibus servitiis et consuetudinibus. Et quia volo ut hæc elemosina mea firma sit semper et stabilis, ego ipse et xii<sup>cim</sup> liberi homines mei manibus nostris affidavimus in manu Willelmi de Mundevilla hæc omnia fideliter et sine malo ingenio servanda in perpetuum. Set et Ecclesiam Ebor., in cujus Capitulo hanc affidationem feci, ego et prædicti homines mei horum omnium testem inter me et eosdem monachos constitui, ita ut si ego vel hæredes mei ab hac dotatione et hujus cartæ tenore deviare temptaverimus, ipsa Ecclesia ad hæc exequenda nos ecclesiastica revocet disciplina. His T. Rogero Ebor. Archiepiscopo.<sup>2</sup>

Sciant præsentēs et futuri quod ego, Walterus Espec, dedi et concessi Canonicis de Kircham ecclesiam de Kircham, cum una carucata terræ et omnibus eidem ecclesiæ pertinentibus: et ecclesiam de Gartona, cum una carucata terræ et omnibus eidem ecclesiæ pertinentibus, et nominatim campum quem flattum S. reality, the position occupied by a pedica of the description mentioned in the present deed.

<sup>1</sup> Another striking feature, if not of the times, yet at least of the condition this wild country then was in, at the date of this charter, or before 1180. And perhaps the circumstance under comment loses none of its interest when we bear in mind that, besides this grant to Rievaulx, grants fully as extensive, and probably more valuable, were made to the Templars in the same parish.

<sup>3</sup> It may, at first sight, seem out of rule to find a deed recording the conveyance of large, and virtually foundational, grants to another Religious House in the Cartularium of any Abbey whatsoever. But we have already become aware, on the perusal of No. CXLIX., that there were business transactions between the two houses of Rievaulx and Kirkham of a special as well as noteworthy description. The full consideration of this matter, as already intimated in a note to the charter (or rather deed) just adverted to, must be deferred for the present.

dale, cum una carucata terræ et cum omnibus eidem ecclesiæ pertinentibus : et ecclesiam de Helmesle, cum una carucata terræ et cum omnibus eidem ecclesiæ pertinentibus, et tres toftas—scil., toftam Canonorum, et toftam Presbiteri, et toftam Aldredi ; et in Kircham xx<sup>ti</sup> iiii<sup>or</sup> acras terræ quæ sunt inter boscum et aquam de Derewenta, et meum novum gardinum, et mansuram quam Radulfus Presbiter ibi habuit ; etiam proprii porci Canonorum ibunt in boscum meum de Kircham sine pannagio, cum suo nutrimento ; et segetem suum ad molendinum meum molent sine molitura, et decimum denarium habebunt de firma molendini. Præterea concessi eis septem carucatas terræ de Wiuestoue, cum toto instauramento quod fuerit in eadem villa post decessum meum, ubi in vita mea eis dare noluerō. Et pro decima quinque caruca[t]arum de Tillestona, et pro decima iiii<sup>or</sup> carucatarum de Grif,<sup>1</sup> et pro omnibus quæ Canonicis pertinebant, quæ modo habent Abbas et monachi Rievallenses, donavi eis meum purprestum de Kircham, et domos meas, et molendinum et prata mea, et omnia quæ habui inter boscum et aquam, et piscationem de aqua de Kircham et de Husum ; et totam villam de Witewelle, cum ix carucatis terræ, in bosco et in plano et in omnibus [145] quæ villæ pertinent ; et in Sextendale iiii carucatas terræ et, post decessum meum, alias iiii<sup>or</sup> carucatas, quas habeo in manu mea de octo quæ sunt in eadem villa, nisi in vita mea eis dederō, et hoc cum toto instauramento quod ibi erit in die illa ; et apud Helmesle ibunt animalia et pecora Canonorum cum animalibus et pecoribus Walteri Espec in una pastura, et ubi Walterus accipiet boscum ad suas necessitates ibi et Canonici accipient : etiam homines Canonorum habebunt communem pasturam cum hominibus villæ, et porci Canonorum et hominum suorum, qui nutriti sunt in hiis terris suis supranominatis, erunt in bosco de Helmesle sine pannagio : set et Canonici habebunt pannagium ; et Canonici habebunt decimam cervorum et porcorum et caprarum, et ferarum silvestrium, quæ Walterus et posterī sui capient ; et similiter volatiliū<sup>2</sup> quæ capientur per suas riverias ; et decimas denariorum de firmis suis, et de mala<sup>3</sup> maneriorum, et nominatim de Husum, et de at least the presence of waterfowl, in addition to what we are more accustomed to think of as "game birds."

<sup>3</sup> But the merest guess at the meaning of this word can be made. It may be a latinised form of the modern word meal, meaning that which immediately results from the process of grinding, and before it is exposed to the processes by means of which it becomes flour.

molendino de Husum quod factum est apud Rudell. super ripam aquæ de Derewente, et meas domos de Eboraco, et decimam Lintoniæ: et in Norhumberland, totum manerium de Titlingtona, et ecclesiam de Hildertona, cum omnibus eidem ecclesiæ pertinentibus; et ecclesiam de Neutona in Glendale, cum omnibus eidem ecclesiæ pertinentibus, et totam terram Ulfkilli Clerici: et ecclesiam de Karram super Tvedam flumen, cum omnibus eidem ecclesiæ pertinentibus, et totam villam de Karram, cum omnibus eidem villæ pertinentibus, in terris et aquis, in pratis et pasturis, piscinis, molendinis, et in divisis et in consuetudinibus ejusdem villæ; et totam terram Ulfkilli Clerici, quam de me tenebat in eadem villa, sicut alii liberi homines ejusdem villæ, per easdem divisas: et [145<sup>b</sup>] omnes meas dominicas decimas, et nominatim decimam denariorum de censu terrarum mearum in Norhumberland. Et si dederò alicui aliquam ex terris illis, semper decima remanebit Ecclesiæ S. Trinitatis de Kircham. Hæc omnia supradicta concessi et donavi Priori et Canonicis S. Trinitatis de Kircham, ita bene et quiete, libere et honorifice, sicut melius et liberius unquam habui, cum omnibus liberis consuetudinibus, et sicut Canonici ejusdem Ordinis liberius et quietius habent; et concedo ea esse quieta de omnibus terrenis servitiis quæ michi et successoribus meis pertinent, salva dignitate Ecclesiæ S. Petri de Ebor., et Archiepiscopi ejusdem Ecclesiæ, et salva dignitate Ecclesiæ S. Cuthberti Dunelm., et Episcopi ejusdem Ecclesiæ. His T. [none given].

CCXVII. CYROGRAPHUM INTER NOS ET WILLELMUM DE ROS.

Hæc est finalis concordia facta in Curia domini Regis apud Westm., a die S. Hilarii in quindecim dies, A<sup>o</sup> r. Regis Henrici, filii Regis Johannis, sextodecimo, coram Stephano de Segrave, Roberto de Lexintonia, Wilhelmo de Ebor., Magistro Roberto de Scherdelawe, Radulfo de Norwico, et Adam filio Willelmi, Justiciis, et aliis Domini Regis fidelibus . . . Inter Rogerum,<sup>1</sup> Abbatem de Rievallæ, querentem, et Willelmum de Ros,<sup>2</sup> impedientem, de quatuor carucatis terræ, cum pertinenciis, in Grif, et de quin-

Final Concord between Abbot Roger of Rievaulx and William de Ros concerning forest and other rights within the limits of Walter Espec's original grant to the Convent.

This seems to be the fine referred to in No. VIII., to which fine, so referred to, Abbot Roger was a party. The date of the transactions involved in No. VIII. appears to have been 1251-2, or about twenty years later than that of the present fine.

que carucatis terræ, cum pertinenciis, in Tillestona, et de communa pasturæ et bosci in Haumelak et Pokeleia, unde idem Abbas questus fuit quod prædictus Willelmus voluit habere forestam infra easdem novem carucatas terræ, . . . et in boscis qui pertinent ad ipsas novem carucatas terræ, et posuit ibidem forestarios suos ad custodiendum feras qui sunt in boscis et terris ipsius Abbatis, infra divisas et bundas earundem novem carucatarum, cum pertinenciis, et quod idem Willelmus impedivit ipsum Abbatem habere communam herbagii et personæ<sup>1</sup> ad averia sua, et communam buscæ et mairemii in boscis de Haumelak et de Pokeleia, contra cartam Roberti de Ros, patris ipsius Willelmi, cujus hæres ipse Willelmus est, et unde placitum warantiæ cartæ summonitum fuit [146] inter eos in eadem Curia—scil., quod prædictus Willelmus recognovit et concessit, pro se et hæredibus suis, quod prædictæ novem carucatae terræ, cum pertinenciis, et bosci qui ad easdem novem carucatas terræ pertinent in boscis, pl[anis], moris et omnibus aliis locis, simul cum es[s]arto et pertinenciis suis, quæ habent ex dono Everardi de Ros, de cætero sunt omnino deaff[ore]statae inperpetuum, ita quod idem Willelmus et hæredes sui nunquam aliquid juris exigent infra metas et bundas prædictarum novem carucatarum terræ cum<sup>2</sup> boscis et assarto . . . nomine forestæ, nec in boscis ad prædictas novem carrucatas terræ pertinentibus, nec etiam capient ibidem aves aeriantes, nec ponent ibidem custodes vel forestarios suos, sed idem Abbas et successores sui habebunt custodes et forestarios suos ad custodiendum boscos et terras infra easdem novem carucatas terræ et assartum, cum pertinenciis. Et easdem feras, et omnimodam salvaginam,<sup>3</sup> capiant per canes et leporarios suos, et per arcus et sagittas, et omnibus aliis modis quibuscunque poterunt, pro voluntate eorum, sine omni impedimento vel contradictione ipsius Willelmi, vel hæredum suorum, et hominum suorum. Concessit etiam idem Willelmus prædicto Abbati et successoribus suis com[m]unam herbagii et personæ et communam buscæ et maeremii in omnibus boscis et tenuris de Haumelak et de Pokele, exceptis veteri Parco ad orientem de Haumelak, et alio Parco ad occidentem de Haumelak qui dicitur La Haye, et bosco qui dicitur Plocw[u]de, in quibus parcis et bosco dictus Abbas et successores sui nullam communam habebunt; set in omnibus aliis boscis et tenuris de Haumelak et de Pokeleia habebunt communam buscæ et maeremii ad omnes proprios usus suos libere, quiete, et sine omni contradictione dicti Willelmi vel hæredum suorum et hominum.

suorum. Et idem Abbas et successores sui habebunt communam herbagii et pessonæ in omnibus prædictis boscis et tenuris de Haumelak et Pokeleia, exceptis prædictis boscis de Plocwude et duobus parcis, ut prædictum est, ubi nullam communam habere debent, ad omnimoda animalia et pecora sua, exceptis capris, cum libero introitu et exitu hominum, animalium et pecorum suorum, et ad cariandum quod necessarie habeant, sine aliquo impedimento. Omnes autem prædictæ novem carucatæ terræ, cum omnibus boscis suis, et prædictum assartum, cum pertinenciis, habebunt et tenebunt idem Abbas et successores sui, et Ecclesia S. Mariæ de Rievalle, sub sua propria custodia in omnibus, sicut prædictum est, in liberam, puram et perpetuam elemosinam, quietam ab omni sæculari servitio et exactione in perpetuum. Et idem Willelmus et hæredes sui warantizabunt . . . Et pro hac recognitione, concessione, warantia, fine et concordia idem Abbas dedit prædicto Willelmo cc<sup>tas</sup> marcas argenti. CCXIX. CLXXIII. Henricus,<sup>2</sup> D. Gr. Ebor. Archiepiscopus, omnibus successoribus suis et Capitulo Ebor., salutem. Notum sit omnibus . . . [quod] Robertus de Ros, in præsentia nostra et multorum aliorum confirmavit et concessit Ecclesiæ Rievallensi omnia dona quæ dederat illi Walterus Espec, sicut in carta ipsius Walteri Espec continetur, quæ ibi lecta est in audientia nostra. Insuper promisit Domui illi et fratribus omnem manutentionem; et primum hæc omnia sacramento firmavit, deinde Christianitatem in manu mea qua se obsidem dedit, et me plegium constituit de his omnibus. Si igitur hæc omnia transgrediens prædictam Domum vel fratres in aliquo vexaverit, vel possessiones eorum invaserit, vel in aliquo minuere temptaverit, ecclesiastica censura coerceatur, et a districto iudice, si non congrue satisfecerit, in extremo examine judicetur. De illis autem qui minime confessi fuerint, tantum faciatis quantum nobis ipsis faceretis de adversariis nostris si oporteret<sup>1</sup>: Nec remaneat pro absentia nostra. Illos enim specialiter vobis commendamus.

CCXXI. CLXXVI. Rogerus, D. Gr. Ebor. Archiepiscopus . . . Confirmation by the same Archbishop of the arrangement touching the tithes of Crosby and Leake.
Quod inter ecclesias, earum assensu, et ad ipsarum utilitatem et pacem, constat esse contractum, episcopali debet confirmatione roborari, ne posteriorum malignitate possit inpune dissolvi. Inde est quod pactum quod factum est inter Ecclesiam Rievallis [148<sup>b</sup>] et ecclesiam de Lecc, super decimis monachorum Rievallensium, de terra de Crossebi—viz., de duabus marcis singulis annis, nos ratum habemus et confirmamus, sicut in Episcopi Dunelm. carta cernitur confirmatum, auctoritate B. Petri et nostra prohibentes ne quis ausu temerario quod utiliter contractum est nefarie præsumat solvere, vel aliquibus injustis modis perturbare. Si quis vero hanc nostram prohibitionem sciens, temere præsumpserit contraire, districtæ justitiæ severitate se noverit puniendum. Hujus confirmationis Testes sunt—Willelmus, Cantor Ebor.; Johannes Letoldi, Canonicus Ebor.; Willelmus Capellanus; Rogerus Hurel, Radulfus de S. Georgio, Petrus de Carcasona, Clerici Domini Archiepiscopi. Valete.

<sup>1</sup> "Ralph died possessed of this dignity (Archdeaconry of York) in 1194."—Le Neve. But the same authority states that Geoffrey, late Provost of Beverley, was so styled in 1176. Of course there is time between 1176 and 1181—the year of the Archbishop's death—for Ralph to have received the appointment; but there is no certainty touching these early Archdeacons. Fortunately the Christian name of Le Neve's R. de Alneto is known; for he was Archdeacon of York between 1154 and 1184. See p. 174, n.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>3</sup> "Bartholomew was Archdeacon of Richmond at an early period, but the date of his appointment has not been ascertained."—Le Neve. But it should be noted that John, the Treasurer of York, who is the first witness named, is said to have held that office between 1154 and 1163 only. Nothing definite can be made out.

<sup>4</sup> This is the Archdeacon Radulfus named in the preceding confirmation. If one might be guided by the date assigned for John the Treasurer, Radulfus Baro would have to be inserted before Geoffrey in Le Neve's list.

The Dean and Chapter of York attest the resignation by Ralph FitzSerlo of any claim he may have had as regards Grif and Tilston.

up some of the obscurity involving the York Cathedral officials named in the present series of documents.

CCXXXIV. CARTA DE KIRKEHAM DE DECIMIS.

Cession by the Prior and Convent of Kirkham to Rievaulx of the tithes of the land in Grif and Tillestona granted to the latter by Walter Espec.

Domino salutem. Notum sit omnibus vobis nos, pro Dei amore et salute animarum nostrarum, concessisse et dedisse in perpetuam elemosinam Ecclesiæ B. et gloriosæ Virginis Mariæ de Rievallē, et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus, decimas et beneficia ad nos pertinentia de Tillestone et de Grif, et de illa parte de Bildesdala quam possident in præsentē, ita soluta et quieta ab omni consuetudine sicut unquam nos [144<sup>b</sup>] melius et quietius et liberius in hodiernum diem tenuimus.

CCXXXVI. CAPITULUM DUNELM. DE DECIMIS DE COTUM.

Attestation
Durham as to a covenant between

CXCI. Hæc est conventio facta inter monachos Dunelm. et monachos Rievallenses:—quod monachi Dunelm. concedunt Rievallensibus decimas garbarum de Cotum quæ pertinent ad matricem Ecclesiam de Alvertona—Tenenda de eis pro tribus marcis quas Rievallenses persolvent eis singulis annis—scil.,

Savaric, Abbot of York, the first Abbot Richard of Whitby, Prior Cuthbert of Guisborough, and Archbishop Henry Murdac of York. The latter was Archbishop from 1147 to 1153 (see Whitby Chartulary, pp. 164, 165, and notes). There is then, it is more than likely, a gap in the succession of Priors, for William Muschamp, "Prior de Kirkhame," in No. XLVII., is a contemporary of Robert (Fursan) de Ros, who had livery of his lands, etc., in 1190-1. Again, in No. XLVIII., William, Prior of Kirkham, is mentioned among the Testes. He is, no doubt, the William Muschamp of the preceding charter. But there is a Walter, Prior of Kirkham, named in this same Robert Fursan's grant of Privilege to the Burgesses of Helmsley, the date of which, I think, has not been ascertained. However, the Grantor died before 1226-7. There is further a confirmation by William de Ros, son of the aforesaid Robert Fursan, of a grant by his father in aid of a pitancia to the Convent, to be enjoyed on the Feast of All Saints yearly, the first witness to which is William, Prior of Kirkham. This may be the William just previously noticed. And there is a yet further Prior William, whose name occurs once and again (as will be noted in the sequel) about the year 1280, a little before and a little after. Yet another Prior, unmentioned in Burton's list, will be met with below, and in two places; but as in either instance the mention is made in a confirmation only, there is more of the indefinite, as regards date, than even in the case of an undated charter. Robert FitzThomas Baro de Graistoke, confirms to Rievaulx "1x acras terræ arabilis in waldo de Folketon quas habent de dono Ricardi, Prioris, et Conventus S. Trinitatis de Kirkeham." Now Thomas de Greystock and his wife Agnes (widow of Thomas de Pennington) had transactions with the Convent of Furness in 1254, having become man and wife certainly within the preceding seven years or so. But the identification of Robert FitzThomas de Greystock remains to be effected. He was probably grandson of the Thomas who married De Pennington's widow, and who would appear to have left issue by another wife, the daughter of Robert de Veteriponte, two sons, Thomas and William, and a daughter (see Dods-worth, iii. f. 40). All that can be added here is that Robert FitzThomas's confirmation was sanctioned by Royal Confirmation dated 1332.

cxcvi. G., Prior, et Capitulum Ecclesiæ S. Cuthberti de Dunelmo . . . Sciatis nos concessisse et confirmasse donationem quam Venerabilis Dominus noster, Hugo, Episcopus Dunelm., dedit Ecclesiæ Rievallensi—scil., Crossebi, quam Venerabilis prædecessor ejus, Willelmus, Episcopus, prius eidem

<sup>1</sup> This is so unusual a name that little more can be done than to say it is quite uncertain whether it should be read Orenge or Oreuge; and to add that it is doubtless some Norse name. Her sister's name, Sigridur, and her mother's, are sufficient to warrant so much.

<sup>2</sup> This entry is not without its importance, as tending, in conjunction with the next, to clear up some of the uncertainty attaching to Le Neve's list of the early Archdeacons of York (see above, p. 167, note 5 to No. ccxxv.). John FitzLetold and Ralph de Alneto (or, as here, Alnai) are contemporaries, and it is certainly to be presumed that they preside over different Archdeaconries.

CCXLI. Frater Alexander, Cistercii dictus Abbas, et Frater Henricus, Clarevallensis, dilectis in Christo fratribus et co-Abbatibus suis, S[ylvano]<sup>1</sup> de Rievalle et R[oberto]<sup>2</sup> [147] de Fontibus, necnon et cæteris fratribus earundem Domorum, tam præsentibus quam futuris, æternam in Christo salutem. Quia nostrum est providere paci et tranquillitati fratrum nostrorum, constituimus et confirmamus compositionem quæ inter Domos vestras facta est a venerabili fratre nostro, Ricardo, Abbate Mortui Maris, et aliis Abbatibus sibi assistentibus—scil. Beeland., Woburn., Saltraienti et Jorevallensi. Est autem hujusmodi compositio:—quod grangia fratrum de Fontibus in Clivelanda<sup>3</sup> stabit in perpetuum: similiter et grangia Ratification by the Abbots of Citeaux and Clairvaux of an arrangement entered into between Rievaulx and Fountains, touching their several granges in Cleveland.

<sup>1</sup> There can be no hesitation in filling in the required letters of this name, for no other Abbot is recorded having the same initial; and this necessarily leads on to the identification of the Abbot who is mentioned in immediate sequence to Abbot Sylvanus. There is no doubt that Sylvanus was Abbot before the middle of 1181, although in the list of Abbots as given by Burton, Bernard, the Abbot next before him, is said to "occur" in 1180: for he is specially named in No. cclvi., which is a Bull of Protection by Pope Alexander III., addressed to Archbishop Roger of Bishopsbridge, and Bishop Hugh Pudsey: and Alexander died in August 1181. The probability of course is that the date of the Privilegium in question is not to be driven down into the weeks or months immediately preceding the death of the Pontiff named.

what granges these, belonging to Fountains and Rievaulx respectively, actually were. But the inference, under the circumstances specified, is not one difficult to draw. In the first place, the granges of the two houses are adjacent to each other; and in the second, they are not far from the sea—"versus mare." The only possessions of Rievaulx in Cleveland answering to this description were those at Normanby (see above, Nos. cxvi. - cxix.), and the corresponding property of Fountains was at Estun, of which parish Normanby is a township. Under the head of Estun, Burton says, "Stephen, son of Robert de Mainel, gave, about A.D. 1230, all his sand here (sabulum) belonging to this town, as far as the land where the sea ascends, as far as the Tees, to make fisheries thereon; also two acres of land," etc. The date affixed to this grant is the only difficulty in our way, and that is removed if we bear in mind that there were two Stephens de Menil, each son of Robert, and that the former of these may have been the original donor, and the second have confirmed previous gifts of his ancestor, as it is matter of fact that he did as to previous grants to Guisborough, in the very place under mention. Indeed, with the present document to fall back upon, it seems difficult to arrive at any other conclusion.

<sup>4</sup> That Abbot Ailred of Rievaulx and Abbot Roger of Byland were contemporaries is a fact to notice, as is also the further fact, established by the present document (which will be more fully noticed in a subsequent note), that Abbot Roger of Byland was also contemporary with Abbot Sylvanus of Rievaulx. Touching Abbot Ailred, who is among the Testes to No. cxcix. in the Whitby Chartulary, I have remarked in a note there (p. 164) that "Burton only gives 116—towards the date of this Abbot; but that," from the document annotated, "it is clear that he must have been Abbot before 1153." But much more than this may be alleged. In an instrument—or rather two instruments—quoted viventes, quantum ad unitatem Spiritus et vinculum pacis utriusque Domus pro una et eadem habeatur. Et ideo, obeunte aliquo fratre Rievallensi, fratres de Bellelanda in missis et psalmis cæterisque oratio[148]nibus sicut pro fratre ipsius Domus facient; quod et ipsum, obeunte aliquo fratre Bellelandæ, Rievallenses pro ipso persolvent. Si vero aliquid adversi vel persecutionis ab advocatis, vel a potentibus, vel vicinis uni Domui emergerit, per invicem stabunt consilio et auxilio, sibi in omnibus adhærentes. Si autem infortunio aliquo, sicut incendio, Domui uni periculum destructionis institerit, altera, secundum consilium eorum qui statum Domus cognoverint, in consulendo et subveniendo karitative se habebit. Constitutum est etiam ut metas quas inter terras et pascua et loca sua fuerunt, sicut infra scriptum est, nullus transgrediatur, sed perpetuæ pacis caritatisque custodiam singula Domus suis terris et pasturis, cæterisque possessionibus sint contentæ. Quod si quis transgressus fuerit, pœna quæ infra notatur, remota omni dispensatione, plectatur. Concesserunt quoque Fratres Bellelandæ Fratribus Rievallensibus habere pontem suum laqueatum<sup>1</sup> ad retinenda ligna sua quæ per aquam Riæ convehentur: qui pons ejus altitudinis erit cujus fuit ea die qua hæc conventio facta est; vel, si eum exaltare voluerint, usque [148<sup>b</sup>] ad æqualitatem ripæ illud exaltare poterunt. Concesserunt eis etiam viam a ponte per boschum et campum Beghlandæ<sup>2</sup> quantum terra eorum durat versus Hestelsceit octodecim pedum in latum, et ipsam viam emendare quandocunque opus fuerit, et ipsi fratres Rievallenses voluerint; et quod libere poterunt firmare stagnum et pontes in ripa ex parte Beghlandæ, et fratres Bellelandæ in ripa ex parte Rievallensi, ita ut nichil amplius by Dr. Greenwell in the preface to the Feodarium Prior. Dunelm., pp. lxi, lxii, and to which the date 1147 is assigned, Æthelredus, D. G. Abbas Rieuall' is named, and, with him, Robert, Abbot of Newminster, Cuthbert, Prior of Giseburn, etc. Abbot, then, from 1147 and before, Ailred had passed away, as appears below, before 1170.

<sup>1</sup> A somewhat curious stipulation. The idea in the expression "laqueatus" is, of course, the same as that involved in what is called, in this part of the country, and elsewhere in the north, a "water-heck," the object of which is to prevent the trespass, by passing along the bed of a shallow stream, or part of a stream, of the cattle of one occupier upon the lands of another occupier. Indeed, during the present year, I have seen a bridge "laqueatus" with wire netting, apparently to prevent the passage along the stream of the water-fowl belonging to the adjacent farmstead. This was in Kirkcudbrightshire. It is obvious that, to a certain extent, such interference with free passage below, or underneath, the bridge might operate prejudicially to the interests of the Byland brethren.

habeant nec Bellelandenses super ripam Riæ versus Rievallem, nec Rievallenses super aliam ripam Riæ versus Beghlandam. Præterea terra inter Eskbergam et Riam, sicut fossatum illorum vadit subtus Eskabergam, remanebit Domui Rievallensi sicut in carta de Bellelanda habent, et similiter Oswaldesengas. Porro domus quam ædificaverunt fratres Bellelandæ apud Depedalam<sup>1</sup> remanebit eis quiete, cum omnibus quæ habent vel adquirere poterunt in his villis—scil. in Grisethorp, Hwallisgrava, Semara, Iretun et in Etun, exceptis pratis ejusdem villæ—scil. Etun; de quibus nichil habebunt nisi per voluntatem monachorum Rievallensium. In Hotun etiam, et inde usque ad villam de Bruntun, constitutum est nichilominus ut de[149]inceps Abbas vel aliquis frater unius Domus locum ad ædificandum non recipiat nisi prius alterius Domus Abbati et Cellerario fuerit ostensum ut communi consideratione ad pacem utriusque Domus fieri possit. Animalia grangiæ de Grif<sup>2</sup> habebunt pascua sua infra nemus tantum Scaltunæ a Brunesdale versus Sproxtonam. Reliquum vero Scaletunæ in plano et boscho remanebit Bellelandensibus. Divisa autem inter grangiam de Hestelscaith et grangiam de Beghlande hæc est—scil., a spina et lapide quæ sunt super Askeledic per metas statutas usque ad viam de Bolthebi, et a via de Bolthebi recta linea usque ad proximum caput caucæ,<sup>3</sup> et ab illo capite caucæ per cilium montis et metas et divisas quas monachi utriusque Domus perambulaverunt et statuerunt usque ad divisas inter Beghlandam et Kerebi, et ultra quantum se extendit terra Adam filii Odonis sub cilio montis. Pecora vero de Hestelscaith, tam animalia quam oves, nunquam intrabunt pascua Beghlandæ, nec pecora Beghlandæ uspiam intrabunt pascua de Hestelscaith ab Askeldic usque ad metas quas statuerunt inter se. Est regalis via divisa inter eos. Et a meta posita juxta Hestelscaith usque ad fossatum quod dividit terras Herdenæ et Dale exten[149<sup>b</sup>]dunt divisæ eorum per metas quas inter be misread cauee; but the second time it is plainly cauce. The form is of interest, a more frequent one being calceta or calcetum. This latter form is nearer the “low Latin calciata, short for calciata via, a causeway, from calciare, to make a road with lime, or rather with mortar containing lime” (Skeat’s Etym. Dict.). The form cawse, cawsee, occurs in Barbour’s Bruce. The old French form is caucie, mod. French chaussée.

Plane inter fratres de Lauescales<sup>1</sup> et de Bildesdala, et fratres de Singleswath erit divisa illa via qua itur de Halmbi ad Clivelandam quamdiu durat terra de Halmbi. Inter favercam plane monachorum Rievallensium, quam habent in Sitlintun, et favercam monachorum Bellelandæ quam habent in Emmesleia, talis divisio est ut, scil., Bellelandenses habeant necessaria ferrariis suis—scil., minaria et carbones in his sex villis et silvis earum—scil. Emmesleia, Brectuna, Sitlintuna Philippi, Denebi, Brerethuisel, Thornehil,<sup>2</sup> et fratres Rievallenses habeant necessaria suis ferrariis—scil. minaria et carbones, in his tribus villis—in duabus videl. Sitlintunis, quæ sunt de feudo Adæ filii Petri et Mathæi filii Saxi, et in Floctona et in Threpwda. Et nominatim ex parte Bellelandæ remissa est calumpnia super duabus bovatis terræ in Welleburna, et de Oswaldesengas, et de fossato quod fecerunt in terra Staintunæ ad deducendam Riam, et de ferrario in Staintuna et Floctuna, et de ponte laqueato, et de via a ponte per medium boscum versus Beghlandam. Ex parte vero Rievallensium remissa est calumpnia de communi pastura Mortuniæ. Hæ querelæ et omnes aliæ sopitæ sunt, ut diximus, et penitus oblivioni traditæ, ut nunquam in posterum revocentur in litem pro quolibet eventu qui eis accidere poterit. Sane si, a die quo hæc Conventio renovata fuit, Rievallenses et Bellelandenses molendina vel stagna vel pontes fecerint super Riam, ita facient ut stagnum non excedat modum, sed sufficiens sit ad molendinum. Similiter et pontes, [149<sup>b</sup>] ut sufficiant ad transeundum. Quod si in aliquo modo excesserint vel stagna vel pontes, aut ex aliis quibuslibet

eventibus aliqua controversia inter eos aliquando acciderit, ad arbitrium iiii<sup>or</sup> monachorum—duorum, scil., ex parte Rievallis quos Abbas Bellelandæ elegerit, et duorum ex parte Bellelandæ quos Abbas Rievallis elegerit, sine tumultu et retractatione et interpositione plurium quam istorum iiii<sup>or</sup>, emendetur; ita tamen ut cætera capitula quæ supradescripta sunt integre conserventur. Usus vero et aisiamenta Sproxtonæ habebunt in perpetuum et Rievallenses et Bellelandenses, sicut solebant habere usque ad diem qua hæc compositio facta fuerat. Quod si aliquando inde controversia aliquando exorta fuerit, per iiii<sup>or</sup> monachos, secundum modum prædictum, pacificetur. Si quis fratrum metas prædictas transgressus fuerit, [propter] negligentiam suam et incuriam, proxima Dominica in Capitulo fratrum verberetur, et ea die non cum aliis ad mensam, sed in terra, comedat. Negligentia autem judicabitur si, ipso nesciente et in aliis rebus occupato, pecora quæ custodit in alienis pascuis paverint. Si vero scienter id fecerit—id est, supino vidente et sedente vel stante, in alienis pascuis inventa [151] fuerint, tribus Dominicis prædicta pœna plectetur. Si, vero, visus ab aliquo fratre, et jussus exire, non obedierit, amoveatur ab ordine suo, et ultimus omnium sit donec præmissam pœnitentiam perfecerit tribus Dominicis, ita ut ipsis tribus diebus non nisi aquam bibat. Pueri qui de Domo sint, pro tale culpa vapulent usque ad sanguinem. Conductitius, si talia commiserit, magister ejus moneatur semel et iterum. Si denuo non correxerit, magister conductitii, ac si ipse fecisset, prædictam pœnam sustineat. Hæc carta lecta est in utroque Capitulo, præsentibus Abbatibus, Domino Silvano<sup>1</sup> Rievallensi, et Rogero Bellelandensi, et tam ab ipsis quam utroque Capitulo in perpetuum confecta. Sit pax et gratia omnibus observantibus eam in veritate. Qui autem obstinate pacem hanc turbaverit timeat quod scriptum est—"Qui conturbat vos, portabit judicium, quicumque est, ipse."

<sup>1</sup> In connection with the preceding note, the collocation of these two names is to be observed. On the one hand, Sylvanus is Abbot of Rievaulx in 1170, and on the other—unless we assume a second Abbot of the same name—Roger is still Abbot of Byland at the same date.

Sanctissimæ Virginis Mariæ de Beghland, salutem et orationes. Notum sit caritati vestræ nos [151<sup>b</sup>] in perpetuum concessisse Deo et Domino Abbati, Willelmo,<sup>1</sup> et fratribus Ecclesiæ Sanctissimæ Virginis Mariæ de Rievalle, ut faciant fossatum per terram nostram ad pedem Montis Escheberch, sicut eis expedire cognoverint, et ut habeant in suos usus terram quam ex eorum parte eodem fossato includunt ita quiete et libere sicut quietius et liberius usque in hodiernum diem tenuimus. Valete.

by Byland, permitting and empowering the latter to throw up a dyke along a certain part of the lands belonging to the former.

CCXLV. cci. Dilectis in Christo Co-Abbatibus et fratribus de Rievalle et de Beglanda, Frater G., Cisterciensis Abbas, et Frater G[aufrius]<sup>2</sup> dictus Abbas Clarevallensis, in Domino salutem. Lætificat nos plurimum et omnino gratum habemus et multum sedet cordi nostro fraternæ pacis et caritatis inter vos reformatio. Quia tamen de ipsa vicinitate locorum divortium timemus animorum, admonere in Domino curavimus discretionem vestram quatinus omnem adhibeatis curam et sollicitudinem quo modo pax ista firmiter teneatur, nec ab ea temere devietur a quoquam, quum non dormit neque dormitat inimicus caritatis, quam graviter impugnare non cessat. Ea propter prohibemus vobis, et omnimodis interdiciamus quatinus non grangiam nec terram nec pasturam ab aliquo requiratis vel accipiatis contra formam ordinis et terminos constitutos. Nam, sicut [152] per experientiam didicistis, ex ipsa sola vicinitate facile poterit emergere dissensionis occasio nisi multa fuerit adhibita cautio.

Exhortation addressed by the Abbots of Cîteaux and Clairvaux to the Convents of Rievaulx and Byland to be careful over the preservation of mutual peace and goodwill.

CCXLVI. ccii. In nomine S. et Individuæ Trinitatis, Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti. Confirmatio societatis et pacis inter Domos ad Cisterciensium Capitulum pertinentes et eas quæ pertinent ad Ordinem vel ad Capitulum de Semplingham. Igitur ad custodiam pacis et caritatis communi assensu utriusque Capituli constitutum et confirmatum est ut nullus Cisterciensium canonicum, vel novicium, sive conversum de Ordine de Semplingham, nullus de illo Ordine monachum, novicium vel conversum de Cisterciensium Ordine, nisi ex pari consensu recipiat. Nullus ex utroque Capitulo grangiam deinceps ædificet, vel bercariam, infra duas leugas, ad mensuram Angliæ, a grangia vel bercaria alterius Ordinis, excepto quod, si in villa aliqua infra has metas data fuerit, sine aliquo pretio vel servitio cuius erat terra, usque ad unum aratrum licebit suscipere, et per aliquem sæcularem excolere, ita ut nullus fratrum ibi habitet, nec<sup>1</sup> grangia ibi fiat. Animalia aliquis sæcularis, ipse qui terram tenuerit, ibi pascere poterit, secundum legitimam æstimationem terræ ipsius [152<sup>b</sup>] ad arbitrium legitimorum hominum, vel Abbatum, per quos querelæ, si quæ emergerint, terminabuntur. In quo verbo Fratrum de Semplingham melior est conditio, quia Cisterciensibus taliter aliquid tenere non licet. Quia vero Capitulum Cistercii remotum est, et statutum est ut a Capitulo ipso tres constituuntur Abbates qui plenam, auctoritate Ordinis, habeant potestatem, cum fratribus de Semplingham tribus qui sanioris erunt consilii, terminandi querelas, si quæ emergerint inter eos, nec licebit cuivis eorum ad aliam audientiam causam deferre donec personæ ad hæc designatæ convenerint semel et iterum, et de controversia terminanda vel compositione vel iudicio laboraverint. Ecclesias infra terminos suscipere non prohibebuntur fratres de Semplingham, sine grangia vel bercaria; domos tamen ad mansionem clericorum, et grangiam ad decimas vel messem de terra Ecclesiæ reponendam, et animalia eidem terræ congrua, infra villam habere licebit. Nec grangiarum constructio prohibita est ubi aqua grandis interjacet circa fines illos, nec vado nec ponte transmeabilis. Ubicunque Ecclesia una usuarium tenet vel pasturæ, prati vel nemoris, sive in perpetuum, sive ad tempus, altera Ecclesia, nec per se, nec per aliquem personam, aliquid [153] ibi deinceps sibi acquirat, nec eos qui tenent dum tenuerint, dolo aliquo vel aperta oppressione gravabit. Similiter de terris quas ad firmam temporalem tenent, dum eas tenent, nullo modo ab aliis exinde gravabuntur, nec interim quoquo modo illi sibi eas acquirere conabuntur. Servientes mercenarios Domus unius Ordinis Domus alterius Ordinis, donec tempus suum expleverint, non attrahet sibi, neque recipiet. Si quis fratrum hoc præsumpserit, in suo Capitulo regularem recipiat disciplinam, et ad Capitulum alterius Ecclesiæ mittatur ibi quoque similem pœnam subiturus. Mercenarius autem sic receptus nullo modo retineatur. Si pueri a parentibus redditi a fratribus de Semplingham fuerint educati, vel aliqui forsitan similiter a Cisterciensibus, cum adoluerint, sine eorum assensu, recipere eos aliis penitus non licebit. Dum aliqua Ecclesia, vel mercatores ejus aliquid, sive mobile sive immobile, mercari cœperint, donec destiterint, pars alia sese exinde non intro-mittet. Tunc autem non imputabitur teneri ipsa mercatio cum sine termino aliquo, vel induciis, a venditore discessissent. <sup>1</sup> The more usual form of this name is Kilverdesmersch. The prefix is the same as in the Domesday and mediæval forms of the modern place-name Killerby; namely, Chilvert, Kilward. And, it may be remarked, that a Ketel Vedur is named once and again in Landnamabok, as one of the early settlers in Iceland, and it is perhaps a question whether that is or is not the original form of the name preserved alike in Chilvertesbi and Kilverdesmersch.

veying this donation in the notes to No. dlxxii. in the Whitby Chartulary. It runs: "Godwinus, Presbyter Hospitalis pauperum de Witebi, et totus Conventus ejusdem loci . . . Sane laborum vestrorum quos propriis manibus et sumptibus colitis, sive de nutrimento vestrorum animalium, nullus omnino a vobis decimas exigere præsumat. Addentes etiam auctoritatem Apostolicam, prohibemus ne quis fratres vestros,—clericos, videl., sive laicos,—post factam in Monasterio vestro professionem, absque licentia vestra suscipere audeat, vel retinere. Sancimus etiam ne quis, Archiepiscopus vel Episcopus, sive cujuslibet Ordinis [159] persona, locum vestrum a divinis interdicat officiis, nisi Abbatis vel fratrum ipsius loci evidens et manifesta culpa extiterit. Liceat autem vobis, cum commune interdictum terræ fuerit, clausis januis, et exclusis excommunicatis et interdictis, divina officia celebrare. Paci quoque et tranquillitati vestræ paterna sollicitudine providentes, auctoritate Apostolica prohibemus ut nullus infra clausuram locorum sive grangiarum vestrarum violentiam vel rapinam vel furtum facere, vel hominem capere audeat ; et si quis hoc temerario ausu præsumpserit, tanquam sacrilegus judicetur, et excommunicationis ultione plectatur. Præterea omnes libertates, seu etiam immunitates ac regias consuetudines a karissimo filio nostro Henrico, Rege Anglorum, vobis et Ecclesiæ vestræ indultas, et scripti sui pagina roboratas, auctoritate Apostolica confirmamus, et illibatas statuimus perpetuo permanere, prohibentes ne quispiam hominum vos aut Ecclesiam vestram de omni temanatala, Danegeldo, omnibus assisis, consuetudinibus, auxiliis, placitis, et de omni terreno servitio, quod alicui sæculari personæ pertinebat, audeat infestare, sed liberi et quieti ab hujusmodi exactionibus maneatis, quemadmodum prædictus filius noster, Rex Henricus, sive avus ejus, senior Henricus, scriptis suis vobis rationabiliter confirmaverunt.

It will perhaps be remarked that I have printed Honatune, Honetun there, and changed it to Houatune, Houetun here. In previous notes, however, it has been remarked that the place in question, and its name alike, are lost, and that, at the best, Houeton is but a conjecture, and based simply on the consideration that Houton, Houetun, Hutton, have more verisimilitude than Honton or Honetun.

<sup>1</sup> Copy of this charter is preserved in Dodsworth's Collections, vol. vii. f. 136, and will be printed below (see No. cccix.). Another charter, also pertinent to the same matter, and derived from the same source, emanating from Richard Cumin's widow, will also be given as No. ccxciii.

ported and strengthened by their own act and deed; and the direct boldness and plainness of speech with which the Roman Pontiff reprehends their conduct, and insists on their change of action, and on the restitution by them of their unjust re-sumptions, is fully worthy of attentive consideration. What was the result of this interference on the part of the Sovereign Pontiff is of course evident from the fact that that the monks received back the property which had been reft from them. But it would be a matter of no little interest if we were permitted to see the action, as well as the influence, of the Apostolical injunctions.

carior et acceptior esse probatur, fraternitati vestræ per Apostolica scripta mandamus quatinus infra xxx dies post harum susceptionem, prædictos viros sollicite moveatis, et districtæ auctoritate nostra compellatis, ut præfato Abbati et fratribus nemora, novalia, terram et cætera ablata, sine mora et difficultate restituant, et in pace deinceps et quiete dimittant, dampna data resarciant, vel in præsentia vestra plenam super his omnibus justitiam exhibeant. Si autem monitis nostris obtemperare contempserint, eos, nostra freti auctoritate, publice, accensis candelis, excommunicetis, et terram eorum interdicatis, et si in excommunicatione decesserint eis sepulturam prohibeatis ecclesiasticam indulgere. Præterea de Rogero de Molbrai et Nigello, filio ejus, Alano de Bulefordia, Roberto de Vado, Radulfo fratre ejus, et Everardo de Ros, et Roberto filio Ernisi, nisi prædictis Abbati et fratribus ablata restituerint, [166] et dampna data resarcierint, vel sub vestro examine justitiæ plenitudinem exhibuerint, eandem justitiam faciatis. In eo autem quod de compellendis monachis albis et nigris, canonicis regularibus et sæcularibus, ad solvendas decimas de terris conductis quas habent ad terminum vel ad firmam, a nobis tuæ discretionis prudentia postulavit, te vel alium quemlibet audire vel exaudire nulla ratione possemus nisi manifeste vellemus obviare justitiæ et prædecessorum nostrorum institutionibus contraire, ne videremur Religionem prosecui quam, si forte in nobis non habemus, in aliis diligere et fovere tenemur. Cautum siquidem habetur in scriptis prædecessorum nostrorum, Romanorum Pontificum, quod Religiosi viri ab exactione decimarum de laboribus suis quos propriis manibus vel sumptibus colerent, et de nutrimentis animalium suorum, prorsus essent immunes. Set piæ recordationis A. Papa, dedecessor<sup>2</sup> noster, "labores" in "novalia" pro sua

Papal re-script to Archbishop Roger of York, animadverting upon the injustice of exacting tithes from monks or canons of any Order.

<sup>2</sup> The word stands thus, and very plainly written. Besides being an unusual word, it does not seem to carry any apparent significance with it. Were it otherwise, some idea might be formed as to the right completion of the name whose initial A. we have just before. The only pertinent remarks on the general matter that can be made seem to be of this kind: first, that inasmuch as voluntate convertit. Illud etiam nos a tuæ petitionis affectu videtur retrahere quod in Veteri Testamento non recolimus nos unquam legisse ut Levitæ Levitis decimas persolvissent. In novo quoque, sicut tua discretio non ignorat, non ambigimus esse statutum ut populus ecclesiis illis decimas solvant ubi ecclesiastica recipiunt sacramenta. Unde Apostolus ait—Non est magnum si temporalia metimus ubi spiritualia seminamus. Non itaque grave tibi sit, sicut non debet esse, si ratione Divinæ Scripturæ et nostra honestate pensata, petitionem illam, quantumcunque te diligamus, et tibi sicut karissimo fratri nostro deferre velimus, non duxerimus admittendam. In nullo patereris repulsam quod secundum Deum et justitiam a nobis fieri postulares.

CCLXIV. CCXXVIII. Alexander . . . Rogero, Ebor. Archiepiscopo, Apostolicæ Sedis Legato, et dilectis filiis Archidiaconis et aliis Ecclesiarum prælatis in ejus Episcopatu constitutis . . . Auctoritati Romanæ Ecclesiæ manifestius derogat qui ejus privilegiis contraire præsumit, cum non debeant a quolibet præsumptione temerarie violari. Inde est quod cum Religiosi viri, fratres Cisterciensis Ordinis, [167] Apostolica privilegia noscuntur habere, quæ obtinere volumus inviolabilem firmitatem, discretionis vestræ Apostolica prohibemus auctoritate quatinus nullus vestrum in Monasterium Rievallense, aut in Abbatem vel fratres ejusdem Monasterii, contra tenorem privilegiorum suorum, interdicti aut excommunicationis sententiam proferre præsumat, nec verba eorundem privilegiorum pervertere audeat, the pontificate of Pope Alexander III. terminated in the same year as that of Archbishop Roger of York, we may assume, under the circumstances of their long contemporaneous occupation of their respective chairs, that the Pope just named is the author of this Rescript. And this assumption is certainly not lessened in probability by the knowledge that Pope Alexander did feel and express himself strongly on the subject here dealt with. In the Furness Coucher, No. CCCXLI., we find him speaking of of some who "by a perverse and sinister interpretation pervert the sum and substance of Apostolic Privileges," "asserendo de novalibus debere intelligi, ubi noscitur de laboribus esse inscriptum," an interpretation he pronounces to be perverse and contrary to common sense (intellectui sano). While, further on, he expresses himself thus: "Nam si de novalibus voluissemus intelligi, ubi posuimus de laboribus, de laboribus poneremus, sicut in Privilegiis quorundam aliorum apponimus." Now Alexander's immediate predecessor in the Holy See was Adrian IV., and it is barely possible that dedecessor may be intended to imply the said 'immediate predecessor.' But this suggestion must be taken for what it is worth. There is nothing in the Bull to invalidate such conclusion. What there is of that kind worthy of comment is the difference of tone and mode of address from the Pontiff to the Prelate, as compared with what we have remarked in some of the foregoing documents, wherein the Pope had used very plain language indeed in addressing the same Archbishop.

Bull addressed to the Scottish Bishops directing them to treat certain enactments recently made in violation of the privileges granted to the Cistercians as of no force.

<sup>2</sup> This was a matter which in the case of the secular inhabitants of any given locality was provided for by the local Court of the Manor or vill; and, almost invariably, the said Court was a Byrlaw Court. One of the duties of the Byrlawmen, as the duly constituted officials were called, was to see that no "commoner" put more than his proper proportion of stock to pasture on the common pasturing grounds. Even yet, in districts like that in which these lines are written, where there is a great area of common, and there are a large number of "common-rights," what is technically called "burdening the common" is a matter that comes under the jurisdiction of the jury, who are a body of freeholders, and others of local position, and represent the Byrlawmen of a somewhat earlier period. In the Furness Coucher, No. CCLXXXVIII., an agreement will be found, providing, among other things, that, in cases of dispute, of the same nature as the one under notice, between the manorial lord of a certain place and the Convent, the disputed case was to be settled "secundum Birelage," and without recourse to the ordinary Courts of Law. In the present instance the dispute is between two convents, and is referred accordingly.

auctoritate propria exponere, universitati vestræ per Apostolica scripta præcipiendo mandamus quatinus, occasione illius statuti, fratres Cisterciensis Ordinis non cogatis, nec permittatis compelli, decimas solvere de terris quas propriis manibus aut sumptibus excoluerint, sive sint eorum propria, sive ab aliis ipsas teneant. Gravissimum enim et molestissimum habemus, nec possumus æquo animo pati, si, occasione illius statuti, auctoritati privilegii derogaretis quod Fratribus Cisterciensis Ordinis noscitur ab Apostolica Sede indultum. <sup>2</sup> Honorius III. There is a copy of this Bull in the Furness Coucher, No. CCCLXXVI. It is a common form. Corrupt as is much of the Coucher copy, yet, as compared with the present copy, the Furness scribe's work was much the more correct. The whole series of documents now on hand is badly copied. No. CCLXXIII. in the Appendix.

Concession by Abbot Ailred of Rievaulx to William de Vesci to enclose a park for himself in Eduimersch of given dimensions.

<sup>2</sup> Simon of Evesham was one of the executors of the will of Dean Geoffrey, who died in 1239. He held the Precentorship in 1241 and 1243.—Le Neve.

<sup>3</sup> Considering all the circumstances involved in the document there can be no hesitation as to the way in which this name has to be filled in. There were but two Abbots whose names began with A, and this must have been the earlier of the two.

A copy is also found in Dodsw. ix. f. 161, which is headed: "Ex Cartulario Abbatiae Riev. in Com. Ebor., in Bibliotheca Cott. remanente Id. Jan. 1622:—

Transcriptum Foundationis Prioratus de Kirkham."

The reference given at the foot of the copy is D. 118, which signature denotes Dodsw. 121, f. 118. On referring to this it is seen to be stated that the copy was taken from the Cott. ms. Cartulary, f. 134. The numeral thus given is in error for f. 144. There is a little variation between No. CCXVI. and the copy above, but limited to the spelling of the place-names, as Kirkham for Kircham, Kyrkeby for Kirkebi, Helmesley for Helmesle, Derwent for Derewenta, Tilestune for Tilestona, Wytewelle for Witewelle, Fudeston' for Rudell', Neutone Glendale for Neutona in Glendale, and two or three minor differences.

With this copy of the deed in question the entries in the Cartularium Rievallense, known as Cott. mss., Julius D. 1, come to an end. What follows is from different sources, which will be duly specified as occasion arises.

the grantor being one of the witnesses to the present deed: "Carta Alani de Surdevale . . . Sciatis me concessisse . . . Ecclesiæ S. Mariæ Rievallis . . . totam donationem Roberti de Surdevale, fratris mei, scil., communem pasturam ad ccc oves in territorio de Bothlum, Tenendam . . . sicut in carta prædicti Roberti, fratris [written patris] mei, continetur . . . Hiis T. Drogone de Harum; Radulfo de Surdevale; Willelmo Daniel (sic: but wrong); Roberto Cementario; Bernardo de Helmeslac; Patricio de Dale." The probable correction for the erroneous Daniel would be Daivill.

<sup>3</sup> The said Robert, son of Drogo, must, of necessity, be a villein, with the standard two bovates for his tenement. Such holdings in after days seem to have constituted their tenant a 'husbandman.' That designation, some two or three centuries later than this deed, was as distinctive and as well defined as Miles, Armiger, Generosus, or 'Yeoman.'

lonem, ad easdem trescentas oves, ad quas prædictus Robertus, avunculus noster, concessit eis communem pasturam in Bothlun, quarum agni ibunt ibidem annuatim, cum matribus suis, usque ad separationem; et liberum egressum et regressum ad bercariam suam de Schipnum ad eandem pasturam, quantum terra nostra durat. Et nos et hæredes nostri non onerabimus prædictam pasturam alienis pecoribus, nisi propriis pecoribus nostris et hominum ejusdem villæ; et præterea omnes divisas inter Welburnam et Bothlum et Nagelton, quas Rogerus de Molbrai illis dedit et carta sua confirmavit, quas et Robertus de Daivilla illis concessit: hæc omnia concessimus prædictis monachis . . . Tenenda libera . . . sicut in carta præfati Roberti, avunculi nostri, continetur. Et nos [warranty]. Hiis T. ## CCC. [vii. 96] CARTA RICARDI MALEBISSE.

<sup>4</sup> See No. ccciv., where this name is given under the form Aldwinoftes. It may be the modern Antofts. And the name Hollins of the adjacent hill and wood may preserve the name Aldwine or Alden.

dinum, cum secta et multura hominum meorum de Fritona, ... sicut carta Hugonis avunculi mei, quam inde habent, testatur et proportat... Datum A° D° M° cc° xxiv°." The Grantor is Walter de Percy de Kildale, whose mother, Agnes de Flammaville, had for her first husband John de Birkin, and for her second William de Percy de Kildale. See Whitby Chartulary, pp. 699, 700, and notes.

Gratiæ de Bordelby,<sup>1</sup> prædicti Abbas et Conventus et prædicti Prior et Conventus amicabiliter concordati sunt in hunc modum —videl., quod prædictus Abbas et Conventus Rievallis relaxent pro se et successoribus suis prædictis Priori et Conventui Domus Montis Gratiæ et successoribus suis totum jus et clammium quod habent vel habere poterunt in futurum in solo et communia pasturæ de Bordelby prædicta, ratione communiae prædictæ pro qua quidem relaxatione prædicti Prior et Conventus, et successores sui, solvent annuatim prædicto Abbati et Conventui et eorum successoribus in perpetuum octodecim denarios ad festum Pentecostes.<sup>2</sup> Et si prædictus redditus octodecim denariorum a retro fuerit in aliquo anno ad terminum prædictum Pentecostes, quod tunc bene liceat prædicto Abbati et Conventui Rievallis, et eorum successoribus, in dominio de Bordelby distringere et distractiones retinere quousque eis de prædicto<sup>3</sup> redditu, et de arreragiis, si quæ fuerint, plenarie fuerit satisfactum. In cujus rei testimonium partes prædictæ partibus harum indenturarum sigilla communia Domorum suarum apposuerunt. CCCXIV. [vii. 134] Radulfus, Prior, et Conventus Dunelm. Ecclesiæ<sup>4</sup> . . . Noverit universitas vestra nos ratam habere concessionem et confirmationem quam Venerabilis pater noster R[icardus], Dunelm. Episcopus, Domini Regis Cancellarius, fecit Abbati Rievallis de Crossebi in Alvertonshire, cum pertinenciis, in qua sunt tres carucatae terræ, et de tota Cottona in qua sunt aliæ tres carucatae terræ, et de quatuor acris et una perticata terræ in Tornetune, terræ arabilis, cum omnibus pertinenciis . . . excepto prato dominico de Crossebi; quod Venerabilis pater noster in manu sua retinuit. Hanc autem confirmationem eis fecimus salvo jure ecclesiæ nostræ de Alverton, et ecclesiæ de Lec, salvo jure . . .<sup>5</sup> Et in hujus rei testimonium huic scripto sigillum Capituli nostri apposuimus.

<sup>1</sup> It will be remembered that in No. CCLXXXVII. and following deeds are notices of successive grants in Harlsey and Bordelby, made to Rievaulx by different members of the Lascells family, and that the last-named vill furnished the site for Mount Grace.

numbered CCXL., with, however, some variations in the sequel. It will be observed also that in the present document Bishop Richard is named, whereas in No. CCXL. it is Bishop Hugh, and with a reference to the action of an earlier Bishop still. See No. CCCXVII., which is copy of the said Bishop's charter.

Grant to Rievaulx by Hugh de Baillol of ten acres of land at Newsam, contiguous to the Monks' court there, to be enclosed at their discretion.

<sup>1</sup> There is some perplexity occasioned by the use of this designation. Stephen de Bulmer was son of Radulphus, and grandson of Bertram de Bulmer. He married Emma, daughter of William de Turberville, and by her had issue, John, Thomas, and Hugh. John was succeeded by his son John; he again by another John; and this last by a fourth John, who succeeded to the Wilton (in Cleveland) inheritance on the death, without offspring, of Thomas, the grandson of Stephen's brother Alan. It is hard to see, then, in what sense Thomas de Muschamps is described as heir of Stephen de Bulmer. That there was a connection between the Bulmers and Muschamps is probable. Thus among the Testes to No. LXXV. we find Thomas de Muschamps, Walter de

CCCXVII. [vii. 136] . . . Ricardus,<sup>3</sup> D.G. Dunelm. Episcopus, Domini Regis Cancellarius . . . Noverit universitas vestra nos hac carta nostra confirmasse Abbati Rievallis . . . Ipsis vero monachis concessimus pratum quod ad rusticos ejusdem villæ pertinebat. Hæc omnia concessimus eis—Reddendo inde nobis et successoribus nostris novem marcas per annum ad terminos in Alvertonsira constitutos, salvo jure ecclesiarum de Leka et de Alverton. Si autem aliquis aliquando adversus ecclesiam Rievallensem super prædictas terras calumpniam moverit, nos et successores nostri pro eo [sic] stabimus, contra omnes homines defendendo, tanquam pro dominico nostro. Volumus itaque ut prædicti monachi teneant hæc omnia, cum omnibus prædictis divisis, etc. Abbas autem et Conventus ejusdem Ecclesiæ speciali familiaritate nos in patrem . . . et [136<sup>b</sup>] advocacionem recipiunt, ut et in vita et in morte pro nobis sicut pro abbate suo sint apud Deum devoti in omnibus quæ ad salutem nostram pertinent: nos quoque, vice eadem, ipsos in filios speciales suscipimus, ut in omnibus necessitatibus atque negotiis suis ad nos veniant sicut ad patrem, et ad eum qui ipsos et Domum ipsorum et omnia quæ ad ipsos pertinent sub manu protectionis nostræ manutenenda et defendenda suscipimus. John de Eyville, with the consent of his mother, grants to Rievaulx five bovates of land in Nawton.

<sup>1</sup> I am unable to fill in after this initial. Mr. Fowler notes a "Robert, some time between 1217 and 1226." Abbot H., then, must have preceded the said Robert. But it must be again noted that the accuracy of copying in the present series of documents cannot be guaranteed.

<sup>2</sup> Le Neve does not name any Archdeacon of Durham at or near the date required, with the initial S. to his name. On the contrary, he says that William was Archdeacon in 1219, and that there is reason for supposing that he still held the office in 1234. So that if there was an Archdeacon S., he must have succeeded Emeric de Tailboys, who deceased in 1213.

Further grant to the same by the same Donor of certain lands (specified) in Nawton, together with a renewal of the grant made in the last deed.

<sup>1</sup> It will be observed that only three half-carucates, with three bovates, in all, are specified, or something short of a total of two carucates. If "carucatas" might be read instead of "bovatas," the quantity specified would be made up, the one objection to that being that it is unusual to speak of "two half-carucates" instead of "one carucate." It is evident from the latter part of the document that the quantity intended really is three carucates. Almost certainly, however, we ought to read "carucatas."

is twelve, and not ten only. The mistake is, there is no doubt, in the numeral "sex" of the Little Busby grant, for in a long Inspeximus and Confirmation by Edward III., which will be given below, Walter de Moubray's grant in the will named is seen to have been of half a carucate, or four bovates, and not of six.

Notum sit omnibus præsens scriptum visuris vel audituris quod, A° Gr. M° cc° sexagesimo, in crastino S. Elenæ, apud Rievallem—Ita convenit inter Dompnum Adam, Abbatem, et monachos Ryevallis, ex una parte, et Dominum Simonem de Ver, ex altera—videl., quod idem Dominus Simon concessit et confirmavit pro se et hæredibus suis inperpetuum dictis Abbati et monachis et eorum successoribus totum manerium de Magna Reydesdale,<sup>2</sup> cum Kirkesletes,<sup>3</sup> Steindale,<sup>4</sup> Elvemire, et cum omnibus aliis pertinenciis suis, quod habent de Willelmo de Moubray de Tameton,<sup>5</sup> et totum manerium de Parva Reydisdale, cum pertinenciis—Tenendum . . . dictis Abbati et monachis in elemosinam quiete et solute ab omni exactione sæculari et secta curiæ—Reddendo inde annuatim dicto Simoni et hæredibus suis, octavo die ante festum S. Martini in hyeme, undecim solidos, octo denarios argenti pro omnibus servitiis et demandis. Concedit etiam prædictus Simon . . . prædictis Abbati et monachis . . . communem pasturam herbagii de Kaldemor<sup>6</sup> ad omnimoda animalia sua de Parva Reydisdale, [140] exceptis capris et porcis, usque ad aquam de Cepth,<sup>7</sup> exceptis pratis et campis arabilibus de Bildesdale, salva eidem Simoni et hæredibus suis mineria<sup>8</sup> sua. Et pro hac concessione et confirmatione dicti

<sup>2</sup> This is the first time this place—now Raisdale or Raysdale—has been mentioned, although the grants connected with it are, as will be seen, of considerable extent and importance. Dodsworth does not appear to have met with the original grant by William de Moubray de Tanton: at least he gives no copy.

<sup>3</sup> This name probably survives under the disguise of Crosslets, worn down from Cross Sletes, the element cross having superseded the kirke in the older name. There are High Crosslets and Low Crosslets in the immediate vicinity of two or three of the other localities named.

<sup>5</sup> Some notice of William de Moubray de Tamton (or Tanton, as the place is now called) will be found in the notes to No. ccxci. in the Whitby Chartulary. From documents cited there it appears that "Dominus" William de Moubray de Tampton and William de Tamton were not only contemporary, but were in some sense "fratres." The Walter de Moubray mentioned in the preceding deed was William de Moubray's father.

<sup>6</sup> Coldmoor lies something more than a mile east of Staindale. Coldmoor Cote yet retains its name, being so called also in Ministers' Accounts. These places are all marked on Sheet 42 of the six-inch Survey.

Et sciendum quod mora supra Birkelith erit communis dictis Abbati et monachis et eorum successoribus, et dicto Simoni et hæredibus suis, et hominibus eorum, usque ad Cokehow, sine disturbance utriusque partis. <sup>1</sup> This name is otherwise spelt Gower. There was a branch of the family seated in Cleveland from a somewhat early time, and in later times it was a family of some local importance.

<sup>2</sup> The correct reading of this name must remain a matter of uncertainty. It is met with once again, viz., in full name is supplied from No. CXXXVII.

<sup>1</sup> No. CXVIII. is a charter by the same Grantor, conveying a donation of thirty-three acres in the same vill of Normanby, and also with the assent of his two sons, who are likewise named in the present deed. The first named and presumably elder of these two sons, Roger, I take to be identical with the Roger Host, a grant in Normanby by whom is confirmed in the deed given below. The presence or suppression of an "l" makes an apparent, without creating a real, difference. As a case in point, take the name De Estures (Whitby Chart., No. CXXXVII.), which is certainly the same name with del Estre or del Hestre, and which is sometimes met with in the form Lestre. The element estre is represented by Halliwell's astre, a hearth, and in the Furness Coucher astrum stands for a mediæval iron-furnace, so that del estre, incorrectly de estre, signifies simply "of the hearth or furnace." Assuming, then, the identity of the names Lost and Host, I append here a copy of an original charter in York Museum:—"Adam de Brus. Sciatis me . . . confirmasse Ecclesiæ S. Mariæ Rievallis pischariam de Normanebi et viii acras terræ quas dimisit eis Rogerus Host, Tenendas libere et quiete, sicut in carta ejusdem Rogeri continetur et hæredum ejus. His T. Roberto Clerico de Martona; Willelmo Ingelram; Stephano Rosel; Willelmo Heriz; Symone Tolebu; Willelmo de Tametona, et Ricardo filio ejus; Stephano de Piketona; Hugone Huncle; Rainaldo de Tunstal; Rogero, genero Rogeri Host, et Willelmo fratre ejus; Alexandro Camerario; Roberto de Hot[ona]; Stephano Pincerna; Willelmo de Maltebi; Willelmo Coco; Johanne filio Johannis; Godefrido de Malt-ebi; Rogero filio Baldrici de Martona; Thoma Pistore."

<sup>2</sup> Two measures of considerable interest are specified here, the one, of the contents or area of a bovate, and the other, of the length of the perticata or perch. In the district of Cleveland only the area of the bovate varied between a minimum of 8 acres, and a maximum of 20. At least, that is so, as far as my present information extends. The general rule seems to have been that where the land was very heavy or 'stiff,' there the extent of the bovate was small; where light, or easily ploughed and cultivated, the acreage was large in proportion. In a rent-roll of Gisburne Priory, dating in or close upon the year 1299, some seven or eight of these varying areas of the bovate are given, the most interesting of the whole being two entries of the sort connected with the small vill of Ingleby Barwick, in one of which a low acreage is given, and in the other a measurement of one-third larger. On inquiry from a land-agent who had the management of an estate involving the land in question, I ascertained that in one part of the township named, two horses, to use his own words, "could easily do the work of three in the other part." The variation of the length of the perticata was not so great, but seems to have been more arbitrary. The two customary lengths seem to have been 18 feet, and 20 feet, and they were sometimes designated by the name of the place in which they were used. Thus, the perticate of Pickering is named in the Whitby Chartulary.

<sup>5</sup> As the two tofts last named are mentioned as apart from any tenement or occupation, it is to be assumed that the two tofts previously named are each of them the tofts attached to the several tenements of two bovates each. It has been noted recently that two bovates may be regarded as the normal amount, generally speaking, of the holding of a villein or nativus; although in a recent deed one was specified (with the appertaining toft) of one bovat only.

CCCXXXII. [vii. 152<sup>b</sup>] CARTA ABBATIS DE RIEVALLE:

Memorandum of a composition between the Houses of Rievaulx and Newborough, settling what lands in Welburne and Houeton were, and what were not, liable to payment of tithes.

nolvehou decimales sunt. De Houetona vero Colthmanelandes, et una cultura quæ est inter pratum et divisam quam nominant Balke, quæ est inter Houekelde<sup>1</sup> et viam et exitus Houetonæ, quæ est inter viam et pratum et Kalvecroft et Henepcroft,<sup>2</sup> et a divisa quam nominant Suinegarth usque ad nemus, non debent decimari. Reliquæ vero terræ decimas dabunt. In campo quoque de Scipnum culturæ et utraque parte viæ, infra divisas quæ factæ fuerunt coram Ernaldo, Abbate Rievallis, et Bernardo, Priore de Novoburgo, decimas dabunt. Cæteræ decimales non sunt. Hæc autem concessa sunt ex utraque parte, et scripta ad conservandæ pacis perpetuitatem, et ut nulli liceat ab hac forma pacis recedere, nec scriptas metas excedere nec transferre, nisi in periculum animæ suæ. Teste Capitulo Rievallis.

CCCXXXIII. [vii. 153<sup>b</sup>] . . . Thomas Bote de Neutona et Constantia, uxor ejus . . . Noveritis nos dedisse . . . B. Mariæ et monachis de Rievallē . . . in liberam elemosinam, totam partem nostram quæ nos contingebat de bosco et mora in Clivo de Oswaldekirk—scil., a divisa de Oswaldkirk usque ad altam viam ubi Crux statuta est in superiori parte de West Newton, et a fossato de Hescouwra<sup>3</sup> usque ad fossatum quod supereminet domum Willelmi de Walda, prout idem fossatum tendit usque ad prædictam altam viam, pro quatuor acris, sive plus sive minus ibi fuerint, quoad partem nostram—Habendum eisdem monachis et utendum et claudendum sicut voluerint ad majus com[m]odum suum, libere . . . Et nos [warranty]. Et ut ista donatio nostra rata et stabilis omni tempore permaneat etc. Hiis T. Willelmo de Harum; Roberto fratre ejus; Roberto de Calveton; Willelmo le Oyselur<sup>4</sup> de Neuton; Ada de Rievallē; Willelmo de Walda; Thoma Cadnay; Willelmo Freman; et aliis.

Grant by Thomas Bote of West Newton to Rievaulx of that share of the moor and brush in Oswaldkirk which belonged to himself and his wife.

<sup>1</sup> It is possible that this name, occurring as and where it does, may throw a little light on the form of the doubtful name Houeton, which most transcribers have taken to represent Hoveton. The suggestion due to the name under notice is that the place in question may have been Houton or Howton, as to sound.

and without the initial h, is of uncertain origin or meaning. The final element is of very frequent occurrence in the North of Yorkshire, and of unmistakeable application: it invariably denotes a corner, nook, angular-shaped piece of land, or "gore," and as is the suffix, so will also the prefix be—that is to say, of Scandinavian origin. This suggests two or three hypothetical derivations, of which I will only mention hestskei, a racecourse, although hestskau would be nearer in sound.

CCCXXXIV. [vii. 153<sup>b</sup>] . . . Willelmus de Harum, miles . . . Noveritis me . . . et pro salute animarum Drogonis, patris mei, et Margaretæ, uxoris meæ . . . confirmasse B. Mariæ et Abbati et Conventui Ryevallis . . . in liberam elemosinam, totum illud pratum quod vocatur Gocelynenge—quod, scil., pratum jacet in externa parte totius prati de Harum, juxta fossatum de Nonington Ker, per certas metas et divisas quæ tempore confectionis præsentis cartæ factæ sunt—quod quidem pratum prædicti Abbas et Conventus habuerunt ex donatione antecessorum meorum—Tenendum prædicto Abbati et Conventui de me . . . libere . . . sicut aliqua elemosina, cum libero ingressu et egressu sibi, hominibus, animalibus et carriagiis suis, quotiens opus habuerint, per totum territorium de Harum, excepto blado et pratis, ad dictum pratum suum muniendum, falcandum, præparandum, levandum, et ad loca sua cariandum, et per omnia utendum eodem prato sicut sibi utilius [154] judicaverint et voluerint. Licebit etiam eisdem prædictum pratum suum claudere fossato et sepe, secundum quod sibi melius viderint expedire, absque alicujus calumpnia et contradictione:—Ita, tamen, quod animalia mea et hæredum meorum, et hominum meorum de villa de Harum, in dictum pratum post fenum asportatum ingredi possint, et communiam herbagii habere in eodem donec prædictum pratum cum cæteris pratis ejusdem villæ, sicut moris est, mense Martis ponatur in defensum. CCCXXXVI. [vii. 160] . . . Nicholaus Burdun, filius Roberti Burdun de Grimeston . . . Noveritis me confirmasse B. Mariæ Ryevallis et Abbati et monachis, in liberam elemosinam, duas bovatas terræ in Nanelton quas habent ex dono Roberti Burdun, patris mei:—Ita quod nec ego nec hæredes mei, nec aliquis per nos . . . ; quas quidem duas bovatas terræ, cum pertinentiis, præfati Abbas et monachi et eorum successores tenebunt et habebunt libere, quiete, et honorifice, Faciendo forinsecum servitium Domini Regis, quantum pertinet ad duas bovatas terræ de eodem feodo in eadem villa, et faciendo omnia alia servitia quæ pertinent ad prædictam [terram] pro omni terreno servitio et demanda. Et ego, Nicholaus [warranty]. Hiis T. Roberto de Sproxton ; Willelmo de Barton [residuum laceratur].

CCCXXXVII. [vii. 175] . . . Willelmus Malebyse . . . Noveritis me dedisse B. Mariæ Ryevallis et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus, in liberam elemosinam, quatuor acras prati in pratis meis de Acastre meridionalibus, quæ abuttant super Linlandes—Tenendum et habendum dictis monachis et eorum successoribus de me et hæredibus meis solute ab omni terreno servitio, secta curiæ, et sæculari demanda, cum libero ingressu et egressu ad fena sua, et res suas carandas et asportandas, per terram vel per aquam, sicut commodius viderint sibi expedire. Concessi etiam dictis monachis et eorum successoribus quod libere possint naves suas onerare et exonerare in eundo et redeundo de nundinis, vel quocunque necesse habuerint—scil., inter Lidgate et Gevemerse: et super terram meam, cum caretis suis et cartis, sine conculcatione enormi vel læsione bladi vel prati, licentiam habeant eundi, et deducendi res suas, absque contradictione et impedimento meo vel hæredum meorum, ballivorum, vel hominum meorum. Et ego, Willelmus [warranty] prædictum pratum . . . et totam placeam inter Lidgate et Gevemerse ad naves suas onerandas et exonerandas, sicut prædictum est . . . Hiis T. CCCXXXIX. [vii. 198] . . . Ego Thomas, filius Thomæ de Aslakeby . . . Noveritis me . . . quieta clamasse, pro me et hæredibus meis, B. Mariæ et Abbati et Conventui de Bellalanda omnia homagia et servitia et redditus quæ habui in villa et toto territorio de Thormodeby ex dono Plesentiæ matris meæ—as extracted from Dodsworth, lococitato, and that given by General Harrison at p. 372 of his great volume. The latter makes the family spring from "Ulf, a great Danish nobleman," whose son is named Ranulph de Greystoke, grandson, William de Greystoke, whose son again is Ranulph—our Ranulf or Rannulf FitzWalter—after whom comes his son William, as in Dodsworth, and then Thomas FitzWilliam de Graystoke, whose four children are Robert, William, Thomas, and Johanna. Thus the Walter FitzIvo of No. CLXII. and other deeds in the present series is ignored. According to Harrison, Thomas FitzWilliam de Greystoke married Christiana, daughter of Roger Vipont; in the Dodsworth extract it is a daughter (name not given) of Robert, not Roger, de Veteriponte. There can be no doubt that both authorities are dealing with the same family, although the alliance with Beatrix de Folketon seems to have escaped General Harrison. The Grantor of the present charter seems to have died about 1253-4.

Confirmation by Walter FitzGilbert Scrope of certain grants in Flotmanby to Rievaulx by Simon Scrope.

<sup>1</sup> See Whitby Chart., p. 577, where a payment to the Abbey of liii s. iv d. "pro pendentia retium" is entered; and, moreover, attention is drawn in the notes to two similar entries in a Gysburne Priory rent-roll of like payments, in the same place as is here specified, of four salmon or the value of the same, "pro retibus pendendis." But the surmise there ventured, that the "hanging" was in the way of setting the nets, is here shown to be mistaken. They were hung out to dry.

<sup>3</sup> Dodsworth gives a copy of this deed also in vol. vii. p. 191, where Thurstino stands for the Trustino here; and again in vol. cxxi. p. 98, where the reference is "Cartæ Antiquæ, littera V. u. z." And yet again another copy is found on p. 113 of the same volume. It is to be remembered, also, that two copies are given in the Cartularium proper, or Julius D., and one by Dodsworth, vol. ix. p. 161, of the document printed above as No. ccxvi., headed "Transcriptum Cartæ de Kirham." These two documents, thus repeatedly copied, are of equally great interest and importance, and must be carefully compared with each other, as well as collated with No. cxlix. An attempt is made in the Introduction, to bring out at least a part of their full significance. Only explanatory or illustrative notes will be offered in the present place.

<sup>5</sup> Geoffrey was Bishop of Durham between 1133 and 1139-40. The date of the present deed, therefore, is limited to the interval between 1133 and 1139. Thus the King Henry mentioned is the first of that name.

Hoc scriptum cyrographatum testatur quod Johannes de Euer concessit, remisit et quietum clamavit Abbati et Conventui Ryevallis . . . pro se et hæredibus suis, totum jus et clamium quod habuit vel habere potuit in putura<sup>5</sup> forestarum, vel servitiis earundem<sup>6</sup> forestarum, quam puturam Dominus Johannes aliquando exigebat de dictis Abbate et Conventu ratione terrarum et tenementorum, cum pertinenciis, quæ dicti

Release and quitclaim by Sir John de Eure to Rievaulx of the right of puture, and other services, due to him from the Westerdale and Great Broughton lands held by the monks.

<sup>4</sup> John de Eure, son of Hugh de Eure, of Stokesley and Ingleby. He is said, in Foster's Visitations of Yorkshire, to have been knighted before 1307. From the present document, however, it is apparent that he was knighted before 1302. He obtained Charter of free warren in 35 Edward I. He died 1326-7.

<sup>5</sup> PUTURE, a custom claimed by keepers in forests, and sometimes by bailiffs of hundreds, to take man's meat, horse's meat, and dog's meat of the inhabitants and tenants within the perambulation of the forest, hundred, etc. The land subject to this custom is called "terra putura." Others, who call it puture, explain it as a demand in general, and derive it from the monks, who, before they were admitted, pulsabant, knocked at the gate for several days together (Wharton's Law Lexicon).

Abbas et Conventus habuerunt in Westerdale die confectionis hujus scripti. Concessit etiam idem Johannes quod dictus Abbas et successores sui . . . quieti sint de homagio faciendo eidem Johanni et hæredibus vel assignatis suis, pro terris et tenementis, cum suis pertinenciis, quæ dicti Abbas et Conventus tenuerunt die confectionis præsentium in Parva Brocton et in Kyrkeby in Cliveland, salvis tamen eidem Johanni et hæredibus suis fidelitate dicti Abbatis et successorum suorum, et aliis servitiis de dictis terris et tenementis, exceptis dictis homagiis tantum.<sup>1</sup> Ita tamen quod si dictæ terræ seu tenementa in parte, vel in toto, ad manum sæcularem in posterum deveniant tenenda in fidelitatem et hæreditatem, tunc dicti tenentes tam homagia quam alia servitia inde debita et consueta dicto Johanni et hæredibus suis faciant<sup>2</sup> et facere teneantur, non obstante præsentī scripto seu concessione prædicta. In cujus rei testimonium præsentī scripto, ad modum cyrographi confecto, prædictus Johannes, pro se et hæredibus suis vel assignatis, et prædictus Abbas, pro se et successoribus suis, sigilla sua alternatim apposuerunt. CCCL. [Original Charters, Bodl. Library, No. 30] . . . Thomas filius Paulini, Canonicus Ecclesiæ S. Petri Ebor. Notum sit omnibus vobis me omnino quietam clamasse Deo et Ecclesiæ S. Mariæ Rievallis totam calumpniam quam habui super divisas de Welleburna juxta terram meam de Nageltun et de Wimbeltun—quæ, scil., divisæ continentur in cartis Rogeri de Molbrai et Nigelli filii ejus, quas divisas idem Rogerus cum hominibus suis et vicinis perambulavit,<sup>2</sup> et juramento affirmari fecit illas esse rectas divisas de Wellebrune. Nam prædictam calumpniam movi super præfatas divisas de Wellebrune quia homines mei michi falso suggesserant quod pertinerent ad terram meam de Nageltona et Wimbeltuna. Sed quum nolui prædictos monachos injuste vexare, inquisivi diligenter a fidelibus hominibus et vicinis de eadem provincia, et certissime didici atque cognovi præfatas divisas pertinere ad Wellebrunam, meque super eas præfatam calumpniam contra rationem movisse. Et ideo totam prædictam calumpniam quietam clamavi sæpedictis monachis, et concessi eis terram suam fossato quiete claudere per supradictas divisas, sicut Robertus de Daivilla et cæteri vicini mei de eisdem viris ex parte sua illos facere permiserunt. Ego etiam, ipse, et Robertus Paulini,<sup>3</sup> nepos meus, et Johannes de Herefordia, cognatus meus, et Robertus filius Rainerii Puer, manibus nostris affidavimus quod ego nunquam faciam aliquam reclamationem super easdem divisas, nec per me nec per aliquem alium:—Ita quod si aliquis ex hominibus meis eosdem monachos vexare temptaverit de eisdem divisis, resistam ei, [et] etiam impediam eum pro posse meo. Petro, Canonico de Giseburnia; Roberto Paulini; Roberto, Clerico de Martona; Hugone filio Willelmi, et Radulfo fratre ejus; Johanne de Herefordia; Everardo Hauthain; Willelmo filio Edmundi de Braidewath; Roberto filio Rainerii Puer.

Formal renunciation by Thomas Fitz-Paulinus, Canon of York, of a claim touching the boundaries between Welburn, Nawton, and Wombleton, which he had been led to make against Rievaulx by false representations.

CCCLIII. [xciv. 137<sup>b</sup>] . . . Philippus de Colevill<sup>4</sup> . . . Sciatis me dedisse . . . monachis S. Mariæ de Rievallē, . . . totam terram meam, sine retenemento, quam habui, et quæ jacet ad exitum villæ de Thimilby inter terram ipsorum monachorum, quam habent ex donatione Roberti de Lunda, et viam publicam qua itur ad ecclesiam S. Stephani, a parte orientali, quæ terra habuit viginti sex perticatas in longitudine et tres in latitudine; et hanc terram tenebunt prædicti monachi et habebunt in . . . elemosinam, solutam, . . . : Ita quod ipsi monachi ædificabunt eandem terram, si voluerint, et de ipsa terra facient quicquid voluerint sicut de propria et perpetua possessione sua. Præterea remisi et quietam clamavi et concessi, pro me et hæredibus meis, eisdem monachis totam communiam et jus quod habui in tota terra illa quæ jacet inter prædictam terram quam dedi eis, et terram Jordani Harun, unde movi contra eos calumpniam per breve Domini Regis, quam terram habent ex dono prædicti Roberti:—Ita quod licebit eis tam ipsam terram quam terram illam quam habent ex donatione mea in prædicto loco fossare dale Nuns. He grants in a charter, still extant, with a large seal appended, all his land in Aslackeby (now Aislaby) in the county of Durham, to the Convent of St. Mary de Augo in Normanby. The nature of the connection between the Baliols and Guido de Bovincourt is not evident. But it is apparent that he was succeeded by the former in divers lordships held by him in the north of England. Reference to this grant will be met with again below.

be the first Abbot of Fountains of this name, whose rule lay between 1203 and 1209; for Robert de Meinill, the seventh in the list of Testes, died in 1206.

<sup>4</sup> The Grantor in this case may be assumed to be the Philip de Colville who married the heiress of the Engerams, lords of Arncliffe, Dale, and East Heselton. It would seem that she had been previously married, but without offspring by her first husband. At least she brought the manors named to the Colvilles. Robert Engeram, the father of the lady in question, is among the Testes.

Wyvelestorp, which I take to be the Hwersletorp of the Kirkham exchange deed, and Linton, and it would seem to be suggested by this deed, obscure as the whole subject-matter is, that the earliest benefactors of the two houses of Kirkham and Rievaulx had extensive possessions in this district; the matter is more fully dealt with in the Introduction.

CCCLXI. [Coll. Top. et Geneal. v. 109.] Robert de Cambort gave to the Church of S. Mary and S. Andrew de Marrigg, or Marrick Nunnery, two bovates of land in East Cowton which William FitzHenry held: "Hanc donationem in manu Rogerii Archiepiscopi confirmavi." This gift was confirmed by William de Chambort his son.

[Ib. p. 110.] Carta indentata. Conventio inter Monachos de Rivisvallibus et Moniales de Marrig de duabus bovatis terræ in Kutona quas iidem monachi habent ex donatione Simonis Chambord et Alani [fratris] ejus, cum toftis et croftis, in escambium pro xliiii<sup>or</sup> acris terræ in Herleseia, cum pertinenciis, et communi pastura, sicut in carta Roberti de Lasceles,<sup>3</sup> donatoris earum, continetur. Et sciendum est quod prædictæ moniales facient forinsecum servicium pro prædictis duabus bovatis terræ in Kutona. H. T. Gaufrido Fossard; Arnaldo de Upsale; Thoma de Laceles; Jukello de Smithetun; Radulfo Faderles; Thoma filio Hugonis filii Arturi; Ricardo Senescaldo Domini Philippi, Episcopi Dunelm.; Bernardo de Halnathaby, et Henrico Barat, socio ejus, tunc Baillivis Domini Regis.

Agreement between the Convent of Rievaulx and that of Marrick touching two bovates of land in East Cowton.

Omnibus videntibus et audientibus litteras istas . . . Agnes, Priorissa, et Conventus monialium de Marrigg, salutem. Sciatis nos, cum communi consilio et assensu totius Capituli nostri dedisse . . . Reinero filio Jocelini de Herleseia et hæredibus suis, in feodum et hæreditatem, totam terram nostram quam Robertus de Laceles dedit nobis, cum tofto et crofto et cum aliis pertinenciis suis in eadem villa de Herleseia, præter xliiii

Note of a Convention between the Convent of Rievaulx and Simon de Vere touching the manors of Great and Little Raisdale, with pasturage, etc.

<sup>1</sup> It is much to be regretted on all hands that no original grant of lands or territory in Raisdale appears to be extant. We learn much as to the early topography of Bilsdale from Walter Espec's charter, but of those divisions of Bilsdale, distinguished by the name of Raisdale, Bilsdale Birdforth, Bilsdale Midcable, Bilsdale Kirkham, and the like, no corresponding ancient delineation or local description, however imperfect, is known to exist. It is evident from the present deed that the old grants might have abounded with

<sup>4</sup> On coming to Ministers' Accounts in the sequel we shall find reason to think that these iron and stone privileges also passed eventually into the hands of the Convent. And other matters of interest in connection with the Raysdale property of the Convent will likewise receive a measure of illustration.

CCCLXIII. [Magn. Reg. Alb. S. Mariæ Ebor. f. 14<sup>b</sup>] CARTA CYROGRAPHATA INTER S[IMONEM] DECANUM, CAPITULUM, ET ABBATEM ET CONVENTUM RIEVALLENSES.

Omnibus . . . Capitulum Ebor., salutem. Noverit universitas vestra quod nos ratam habemus compositionem quæ facta est inter Dominum Simonem, Decanum nostrum, et Abbatem et monachos de Rievallē—videl., quod dicti Abbas et monachi Rievallenses dabunt annuatim Domino Simoni, Decano, et successoribus suis, Decanis Ebor., xx<sup>ti</sup> solidos bonorum et legalium sterlingorum in festo S. Martini—scil., nomine decimarum [de] terris quas dicti monachi habent in parochia sua de Pickering, quæ terræ spectant ad grangiam eorum de Keke-marays, pro quibus consueverunt solvere prædecessoribus suis unam marcham argenti. Et in hujus rei confirmationem huic cartæ sigillum Capituli nostri apposuimus. Acta sunt hæc A<sup>o</sup> Inc. Domini M<sup>o</sup> cc<sup>o</sup> vi<sup>o</sup>. Hiis T. CCCLXIV. [ib. f. 14] ORDINATIO FACTA PER ROGERUM,<sup>1</sup> DECANUM, ET CAPITULUM EBOR., ET PER ABBATEM ET CONVENTUM RIEVALLENSES.

Universis Christi fidelibus . . . Rogerus, Decanus Ebor. Ecclesiæ, et ejusdem Ecclesiæ Capitulum, . . . Quum cum omnibus, si fieri potest, pacem bene desideramus, ideo quæ pacis sunt quærimus. Hinc est quod cum super decimis de Kekemarays et de Loftmarays inter dilectos nostros, Abbates et Conventus de Rievallē, ex una parte, et Decanos Ecclesiæ nostræ ex altera, questio sit multotiens agitata, quæ nunquam perpetuæ pacis<sup>2</sup> sortiri<sup>3</sup> potuit effectum, tandem temporibus nostris, Deo miserante, ut utriusque Monasterii, scil., Rievallis et Ecclesiæ nostræ, tranquillitati caritative consuleremus, hoc fine conquievit:—videl., quod monachi de Ryevalle Decanis Ebor. sibi succedentibus quinque marcas sterlingorum pro bono pacis solvent perpetuo annuatim—medietatem, scil., ad festum S. Martini in hyeme, et medietatem ad Pentecosten, ita quod, hac compositione firmiter observata, cessabit in perpetuum omnis controversia inter Monachos Rievallenses et Decanos Ebor. inde hucusque super decimis prænominatis habita sive mota, cessantibus querelis omnibus inde habitis vel habendis, et omnibus pensionibus prius inde solutis. Omnia etiam, si qua de facto vel de jure lata sint occasione dictarum decimarum, utriusque partis consensu nullas vires imperpetuum optineant,<sup>1</sup> omnibus aliis perpetuæ pacis impediens evacuatis. Hanc vero compositionem perpetuo valituram ad instantiam et petitionem nostram, S. Trinitatis et S. Andreae Ebor. Priores, et Prior de Martona, in causa dictarum decimarum a Domino Papa delegati, confirmaverunt, necnon et Dominus Galterus,<sup>2</sup> D. Gr. Ebor. Archiepiscopus et Angliæ Primas, speciali instrumento suo roboravit eandem, et omnes hujus compositionis turbatores, vel qui contra eam de cætero venire præsumpserint, ad instantiam nostram sententia excommunicationis innodavit. Nos quidem ut imperpetuum præsens compositio maneat irrevocabilis et firma, præsens scriptum sigillis nostris communi assensu roboravimus. Acta sunt hæc A<sup>o</sup> Gr. M<sup>o</sup> cc<sup>o</sup> xx<sup>o</sup>, circa festum S. Johannis Baptistæ. Hiis T. Mariæ Ebor.; R[adulpho], Priore Dunelm., et de S. Trinitate et de S. Andrea Ebor. Prioribus; Willelmo de Moubray; Rogero de Ros; Johanne de Birkyn; et Roberto de Lasceles; et aliis.

CCCLXV. [ib.] CARTA ABBATIS RIEVALLENSIS.

Undertaking by Adam, Abbot of Rievaulx, to pay tithes to Pickering Church on all lands in that parish which might hereafter be acquired by the Convent.

CCCLXVI. [ib. ii. f. 13] SENTENTIA JUDICUM DELEGATORUM DOMINI PAPÆ DE DECIMIS ECCLESIAE DE PYKERING.

Omnibus Christi fidelibus . . . Decanus, Subdecanus, Judices a Domino Papa delegati, et Thesaurarius Lincolnensis, Judex subdelegatus a Domino Episcopo Lincoln. ad totam causam, salutem in Domino. Mandatum Domini Papæ in hæc verba suscepimus:—Gregorius Episcopus, S. s. Dei, Venerabili fratri Episcopo, et dilectis filiis Decano et Subdecano Lincoln., . . . Dilectus filius G[alfridus], Decanus Ebor. sua nobis petitione monstravit quod cum olim inter quondam R[ogerum], Decanum Ebor., prædecessorem suum, ex parte una, et Abbatem et Conventum Rievallis, Cisterc. Ordinis, Ebor. Dioceseos, ex altera, super quibusdam decimis et rebus aliis ad Decanatum spectantibus exorta fuit materia quæstionis, tandem dictus prædecessor compositionem quandam super eisdem decimis minus provide cum Abbate et Conventu prædicto, in enormem ipsius Decanatus iniit læsionem, quæ postmodum per venerabilem fratrem nostrum, Archidiaconum, et Capitulum Ebor. extitit minus licite confirmata. Quare idem Decanus nobis humiliter supplicavit ut super hoc indempnitati suæ congruum remedium apponere curaremus. Quia vero nobis non constat de præmissis, discretionis vestræ per Apostolica scripta mandamus quatinus, partibus convocatis, audiat causam et, appellatione remota, fine canonico terminetis, facientes quod decreveritis per censuram ecclesiasticam firmiter observari. Quod si non omnes hiis exequendis potueritis interesse, tu, frater Episcopo, cum eorum altero ea nichilominus exequaris. Valete. Datum Laterani v. Kal. Junii, Pontificatus nostri A<sup>o</sup> xii<sup>mo</sup>.—Hujus igitur auctoritate mandati utriusque partis procuratoribus—videl., procuratore Decani ad totam causam, et procuratore Abbatis et Conventus Rivallis ad litigandum, componendum et confitendum, legitime constitutis, in præsentia nostra comparentibus, procurator F[ulconis]<sup>1</sup> Decani, qui dicto G[alfrido] Decano successit, petebat compositionem per bonæ memoriæ R[ogerum], quondam Decanum Ebor., super decimis de Kekemarays et Loftmarays initam,

<sup>1</sup> The initial written in here, and in two other places, appears to be P. But, according to Le Neve Fulco Basset was Dean of York next after Geoffrey of Norwich, succeeding him in the year 1239, and remaining in the office until 1242, when he became

Bishop of London. The places named in this and the preceding documents are Loft Marrishes in the Township of Allerston, still known by that name, and in the vicinity of Marrishes Station, the name Kekmarish or Kekmarais being no longer extant.

tanquam Decanatuī dampnosam, rescindi et infirmari, et indemnitati ecclesiæ suæ de Pikeringe provideri. Procurator vero Abbatis et Conventus Ryevallis e contra, per reconventionem petebat dictam compositionem tanquam legitimam, pro bono pacis initam, et de consensu Capituli Ebor. confectam, et auctoritate Archiepiscopi roboratam, et per iudices a Sede Apostolica delegatos confirmatam, per sententiam diffinitivam roborari et validam pronuntiari, memoratosque Abbatem et Conventum a petitione dicti F[ulconis] Decani sententialiter absolvi, proponens dictam compositionem Decanatuī [13<sup>b</sup>] non esse dampnosam set fructuosam. Dicebat enim possessiones de quibus petebantur decimæ Abbate et Conventu Ryevall. acquisitas fuisse ante Generale Concilium Innocentii Papæ per sexaginta annos et amplius, et per eosdem monachos de Wasto Regis ad culturam retractas, sicut per cartam bonæ memoriæ Henrici, quondam Regis Angliæ, patris Regis Ricardi, et confirmationes Romanorum Pontificum, Lucii et Urbani, in iudicio exhibitas, liquido apparebat, unde [de] dictis terris nullas decimasolvere debebant. Et sic asserebat Decanos Ebor. de lucro habere quicquid ex dicta compositione recipiebant. Adjecit etiam præfatus procurator Abbatis et Conventus decimas de terris memoratis provenientes non esse tantæ æstimationis, ut, licet a Decanatu subtractæ essent, cum tamen portio Decanatus nunquam fuerit, dici debeat enormis læsio Decanatus, ratione quod cum istis duabus marcis, et aliis quinque, sunt vii quas debet Abbas Rievallis Decano: Sed redditus ii marcarum nondum est assignatus, unde petendum est ab eo quod fiat assignatio. Proposuit etiam idem procurator Abbatem et Conv. Rievallis, ob firmam pacem et quietem Domus suæ, et honorem Ebor. Ecclesiæ, velle adjicere redditum duarum marcarum imperpetuum Decanatuī Ebor., ne aliquis scrupulus enormis læsionis apud posteros de cætero remaneat, et hoc sup[p]lementum plene sufficere proponebat, quod quidem procurator partis adversæ non deficiebatur. Hiis igitur et aliis in jure propositis plenius intellectis, et procuratore Decani omnino deficiente in probatione enormis læsionis Decanatus Ebor. prætextu compositionis prænominatæ, procuratore etiam Abbatis et Conventus Rievallis, omni probationi, productioni testium, instrumentorum ulterius producendorum, renuntiante et instanter postulante causæ conclusionem, nos, Deum præ oculis habentes, et communicato bonorum virorum ac juris peritorum consilio, nichil temere in præjudicium Sedis Apostolicæ, seu compositionis præfatæ, provide, satis et sufficienti modo confectæ, volentes attemptare, Abbatem et Conventum Rievallis, auctoritate Apostolica nobis commissam, a supradicta

<sup>5</sup> If the dates thus given may be depended upon, and there seems no prima facie reason for distrusting them, they afford some interesting data that will not prove valueless in the attempt to reconstruct the early history of the Abbey. There is, however, some little obscurity attaching to the present statement. On consulting Espec's Foundation Charter, it is seen that a certain portion of Bildsdales, by no means inconsiderable, is included in the first or original grant which, it is customary to assume, must have dated in 1131. Yet here Walter Espec is mentioned as giving Bildsdales in 1145. Notice

Torphinus de Alvestain dedit nobis unam carrucatam terræ in Alvestain, cum pertinenciis suis. [1160. See No. LXXXVI.]

Walterus Engelram dedit nobis in Heselertona xxx acras terræ, et pasturam ad M. oves.

of Rivaux" (p. 300). Judging from the dates already noticed in the present document, the date of Copsi's grant may have been about 1160 or after; or some thirty years subsequent to the foundation of Rievaulx.

<sup>6</sup> There is possibly sufficient reason for placing Abbot Sylvanus two places higher in the roll of abbots than that occupied by him in the accredited lists. There can be but little doubt that he was Abbot as early as 1170, and probably some little time before that. Moreover, the presumption, from the place occupied by him in this enumeration of grants, taking into consideration the early character of them all, would be that he was one among the early abbots.

Willelmus de Amundevilla dedit nobis unam acram terræ in campo de Treford juxta piscariam de Neus[um].

Terram de Tesedale, cum pertinenciis suis et pastura ad lx equas, cum pullis suis duorum annorum, et ad sexies xx<sup>ti</sup> animalia, et ad xii vaccas et duos tauros, cum nutrimento suo, et terram de Westerdalle, cum pertinenciis suis, et pasturam ad sexies xx animalia, et piscariam de Neuhus—hæc omnia dedit nobis Bernardus de Baiol.

Grangiam de Broctun, cum pertinenciis suis, dedit nobis Jordanus Paen et cæteri liberi homines ejusdem villæ.

Foundation of the Houses of Kirkham, Rievaulx,

Dominus Walterus Espeke, miles strenuus et decorus, in ætate juvenili duxit in uxorem quandam nomine Adelinam,<sup>2</sup> quæ concepit et peperit nomine Walterum, similem patri suo. Qui, formosus adolescens, multum delectabatur in cursibus velocibus equitare. Contigit ut quadam die, cum equum velocem ascendisset, et ipsum ad currendum ultra vires urgeret, apud parvam petrinam crucem versus Frythby<sup>3</sup> equus suus graviter cespitavit, et ille subito de equo cadens, collo suo fracto, vitam finivit temporalem. Quidem<sup>4</sup> cum rumor infortunii ad patrem suum pervenisset, conflēt<sup>5</sup> dolore nimio. Deliberavit de hæredibus sibi disponendis, et<sup>6</sup> præcipue, quia<sup>7</sup> vir conquestus erat et armorum actibus quicquid habuit ac-

that is absolutely clear is that valescit cannot be correct. The intended meaning would seem to be "he retired from."

<sup>9</sup> There seems to be considerable reason for doubt as to the exact site of Walter Espec's sepulchre. The statements touching it are conflicting. One is to the effect that he was buried in the Chapter House. Here, the Church seems to be named, humatur, Idus Martii A.D. millesimo centesimo quinquagesimo quarto. Cujus animæ propitiatur Summus Deus. Amen.

Pro reorum venia Kirkham domus bona,
Rievallis deinceps, et hæc tertia Wardona
Est fundata primitus a dicta persona,
Pro quorum meritis datur illi trina corona.

Amen.

D. xxxiii. Cyrograffum inter nos et Johannem de Torin de x bovatis terræ, cum pertinenciis, in Parva Buskeby concessis ei et hæredibus suis, pro homagio et servitio suo, in feudo, faciendo forinsecum servitium.

but the meaning of ecclesia may be simply as in a charter, and equivalent simply to "Conventual Foundation." There is yet a third theory, I believe, namely, that his tomb was really in the "Slip."

<sup>1</sup> I have thought it better to print this here rather than in the Appendix, inasmuch as, fragmentary as it is, it still serves to show how many charters, and of what considerable interest, are missing, or rather lost. As to the number of lost charters, possibly the next list may serve to supply some illustration.

<sup>2</sup> This sentence, it will be seen, is repeated at the head of the catalogue printed below. With respect to the "Cartæ Regum," it is obvious that we have copies of many of them in the preceding pages. But many of those now included are not now to be met with, as, for instance, the original grant of the Waste below Pickering, the three charters by Scottish Kings, etc. The least or most superficial observation of the number of Broughton charters catalogued below will suffice to show what an enormous mass of records of the kind specified must have existed among the muniments of the Abbey. It is further to be observed that the transcript of the titles of the said deeds is not by any means free from error. The annotations on slips of this kind, or notes in illustration, will be inserted between square brackets in the body of the text.

CCCLXXII. [Patent Rolls, 6 Edw. III. pt. 2. m. 23] Pro Confirmation by King
Abbate et Conventu de Ryevalle. Edward III. of all grants and concessions by the various donors, hitherto made to the Convent.

Rex <sup>1</sup> omnibus ad quos . . . salutem. Donationem, concessionem et confirmationem, quas Willelmus de Loftisco <sup>2</sup> per cartam suam fecit Deo et B. Mariæ et Abbati et monachis de Rie-

<sup>1</sup> This is a document of no ordinary value, as well as interest, for it displays to our view, mapped out, as it were, in one broad sheet, all the possessions which had accrued to the Abbey up to the period of its date (1332), and that is very nearly tantamount to saying all that ever tended to swell the actual Conventual endowments. Necessarily, a document which may be spoken of in such terms must be of very considerable length. In order to compress it as far as possible within reasonable limits, after the first page or two, which are printed nearly in extenso, all the mere formal phrases of customary use will be omitted, and the omission indicated in the customary manner by dotted spaces. But it is hoped that nothing of real interest and historical value is left out.

valle de tribus bovatis [terræ], cum pertinenciis, in Parva Buskebia<sup>1</sup> in Clyueland cum toftis et croftis et omnibus pertinenciis : Donationem etiam et concessionem et confirmationem quas Sibilla filia Willelmi le Nounneman per cartam suam fecit Deo et B. <sup>1</sup> As has been previously remarked, no original grants of the lands in Raysdale, which belonged to the Abbey, seem to have been preserved; and in this connection this, with some half dozen or so of the entries which follow in near, but not unbroken, succession, will be found of interest.

<sup>1</sup> The writing here is not quite plain. The name might be supposed to be meant to be Tusci. But inasmuch as the name Tosti (or the

<sup>1</sup> Expansion and explanation are equally difficult in the case of these two names. Tonedale might possibly be intended for Thorndale, but local corroboration is absent. It would consist with the writing to read Suthg'inam, and to expand it by "Suth-grainam," grain being in local use in the district as the designation of a branch or side-section of a valley or ravine, and such explanation would consist with the language employed in the passage.

<sup>1</sup> It seems expedient to draw attention to this local name and its unmistakable origin. The name Sivine, Siwine (and in other forms, all doubtless originally due to Sigwin), is of frequent occurrence, and, in scarcely fewer instances, is corrupted into Swine. And hence amateur derivationists are not seldom led into connecting such names with the porker family instead of a human being. In one instance, at least, known to the editor, the "human being" was a female. The names (in some form or other) Swinelandes, Swinethwaite, Swinestische, Swineridding, as well as others, occur. Riding or ridding is simply a clearing made in wood or brush for agricultural purposes.

<sup>2</sup> The Convent of Furness owned certain house-property in York, which may (or may not) be the buildings referred to here. In a Papal Confirmation printed in the Furness Coucher at p. 667, una mansio in Civitate Ebor. is named, and in the Introductory Chapter, p. lviii, a "demise of the tenement at York, known as 'Furness House,'" is specifically mentioned, not to refer to other instances.

CCCLXXIV. MINISTERS' ACCOUNTS:<sup>2</sup>

Rivallis nuper Monasterium in Com. Ebor.

Compota omnium et singulorum ministrorum et firmariorum omnium et singulorum dominiorum, maneriorum, terrarum, et tenementorum, ac aliarum possessionum, tam temporalium quam spiritualium quorumcunque, cum suis pertinenciis sive spectantibus, quæ ad manus excellentissimi Principis nunc, Henrici VIII., D. G. etc. devenerunt, et in manus existunt, ex sursum-redditione nuper Abbatis ibidem, et ejusdem loci Conventus, tertio die Decembris anno xxx<sup>mo</sup> dicti Domini Regis nunc (1538), scil., infra tempus hujus compoti; et quæ an-

later, in order to facilitate collation with the very full and interesting notice of the possessions of the Abbey as presented to us in the nearly preceding Confirmation by Edward III.

nexantur Coronæ dicti Domini Regis et hæredum suorum . . . virtute cujusdam Actus in Parlamento suo apud Westmonasterium xxviii<sup>vo</sup> die Aprilis, anno regni sui xxxi<sup>o</sup> inchoato, et usque ad xxvii<sup>um</sup> diem Junii extunc proxime sequentem, eodem anno tricesimo primo ibidem continuato, inde, inter alia, editi et provisi, prout in eodem Actu inter alia continetur, viz., a festo S. Michaelis, etc.

Arr[er]agia : Nulla, quia primus compotus. Summa : Nulla. Firmæ terrarum Dominicalium.

Sed reddit compotum de ix li. vii s. viii d. de firma scitus dicti nuper Monasterii, unacum omnibus domibus, ædificiis, columbariis, ortis, pomeriis, gardinis, stagnis, et aliis commoditatibus infra præinctum ejusdem Monasterii, ac cum terris dominicalibus . . . prout nuper in tenura nuper Abbatis et Conventus . . . fuerunt, et sic per Commissionarios Domini Regis ibidem æstimata per annum :—viz. de firma scitus dicti nuper Monasterii, vi d. : unius parcellæ terræ vocatæ Abbates Gardyne, continentis unam acram, vi d. : duorum parvorum clausorum, vocatorum Kyrkegarth et Karloo, continentium per æstimationem ii acras, xii d. : unius prati vocati Thabbote Ynges continentis xv acras, xvi s. ; unius clausi vocati Stankeng, continentis xii acras, xii s. ; unius clausi vocati Myddelle Ynge continentis iv acras, iii s. ; unius prati vocati Calcarhousse Enge, continentis vi acras, vi s. ; unius parcellæ terræ vocatæ Bakehousse Garth, continentis i acram, viii d. ; unius clausi jacentis prope le Stanke<sup>1</sup> juxta le Milne-beke, continentis unam acram [et] dimidiam, xii d. ; unius clausi vocati le Comon-Stable garth, continentis iii acras, ii s., duarum parvarum parcellarum prati jacentium inter Comon-Stable Garth et le Comon-Stable, vocatarum le Olde Walles, continentium ii acras, dimidiam, cum tenemento ad portas . . .<sup>2</sup> unius clausi jacentis prope le Comon-Stable, vocati Subprum<sup>3</sup> Close, continentis ii acras, ii s. ; unius clausi prati vocati Olde-Benson Close, continentis i acram, xii d. ; unius clausi vocati Chapelle Garth

continentis unam acram, xii d.; unius tenementi adjacentis juxta portam exteriorem dicti nuper Monasterii, cum clauso vocato Passynder Pasture, continentis ii acras, unius clausi vocati Stubham Enge continentis ii acras, cum parvocrofto adjacente, infra scitum prædictum, nuper in tenura Ricardi Benson, per annum, xlvi s. viii d.; unius Molendini vocati le Yron Smithes<sup>1</sup> infra scitum prædictum, nuper in tenura Lamberti Semer, per annum, xxvi s. viii d.; unius Molendini, vocati le Walke-Milne, infra scitum prædictum, nuper in tenura dicti Lamberti Semer, per annum, lx s.; unius Molendini granatici infra scitum prædictum, per annum, vi s. viii d.:—In toto, ut supra, sic in tenura supradicti Thomæ, Comitis Rutland, hoc anno. De firma herbagii omnium boscorum jacentium infra et juxta terras dominicales, continentium inter se cccxli acras, non reddit, pro eo quod supradictus Thomas, Comes Rutlande, habuit et occupavit dictum herbagium ut parcellam terrarum dominicalium prædictarum, absque aliquo redditu inde adhuc soluto, pro eo quod clamat dictum redditum pertinere, colore Litterarum Domini Regis Patentium adhuc non ostensarum.

Et de x li. xi s. x d. de firma graungie vocatæ Gryffe Graunge, cum omnibus terris, pratis, pascuis, et pasturis eidem pertinentibus, viz., cum ædificiis, horreis, et pasturis eisdem pertinentibus infra le Felde Garthe, xii d.; unius clausi vocati Lathgarth, continentis ii acras, ii s.; unius campi, vel le flate terræ arabilis jacentis super le Northe-side dicti le Lathgarth, continentis xxx acras, x s.; unius le flate terræ arabilis vocati Morterpo . . .<sup>2</sup> continentis vi acras, ii s.; unius le flate vocati Coote Flate, continentis vi acras, ii s.; unius le flate jacentis super le Thabote Hage, continentis lx acras, xx s.; unius clausi vocati Yngraye Close, continentis vi acras, ii s.; unius campi terræ arabilis, vocati Jodicefelde, continentis lx acras, xx s.; unius pasturæ vocatæ Tillestones, continentis lx acras, xx s.; unius clausi pasturæ vocatæ Fatte, continentis xxiv acras, viii s.; unius pasturæ vocatæ Hye le . . .<sup>2</sup> continentis xxx acras, x s.;

<sup>1</sup> It will be observed that this is one of three mills named as situate within the precincts of the late Monastery, namely, this called the Iron Smithies; another described as a walk-mill or fulling-mill; and a third specified as a corn-mill. That there was a forge within the precincts there is no doubt; but it is not likely to have been in operation during the Convent times. The position it occupies precludes that idea. The actual site of the home Convent forge or furnaces was lower down the stream of the Rye. The mill that still remains was, in all probability, the Convent corn-mill.

unius campi vocati Tlysteley-felde<sup>1</sup>; continentis xl acras, xiii s. iv d.; unius pasturæ vocatæ Gardielle, continentis vi acras, xviii d.; unius pasturæ vocatæ Stoney Gardielle, continentis viii acras, ii s. viii d.; unius pasturæ prati vocatæ Gryffe Enge, continentis xl acras, xiii s. iv d.; unius alterius pasturæ prati, vocatæ Spenser Ynge, continentis viii acras, ii s. viii d.; unius clausi vocati le Barkehouse Ynge, continentis x acras, iii s. iv d.; unius pasturæ vocatæ Brodeng, cum Baxter Lees, et cum holmes eisdem pertinentibus, continentis xl acras, xxvi s. viii d.; unius parcellæ terræ vocatæ Horseclosse, continentis vi acras, ii s.; unius alterius clausi pasturæ vocati Horseclose, continentis iv acras, ii s.; unius clausi pasturæ vocati le Upper Doveholme et le Nether Doveholme, continentis xx acras, vii s. iv d.; unius le Shepecote, vocati Gryscote, cum clauso vocato Grene Close, continentis x acras, iii s. iv d.; unius clausi prati vocati Fogge Close, continentis x acras, x s.; unius clausi pasturæ vocati Stoke Enge, continentis iv acras, xxvi s. viii d.: In toto ut supra, sic in tenura supradicti Thomæ, Comitis Rutlande, hoc anno.

Firmæ Graungie vocatæ NEW-LATHES.

Et de vi li. xv s. vi d. de firma graungie vocatæ New-lathes Graunge, cum omnibus terris, etc.: viz., unius mesuagii, cum magno le Shepecote, cum ædificiis pertinentibus, vi d.; unius clausi prati vocati Fewlome Enge, continentis xvi acras, xvi s.; unius prati vocati Doveholme, continentis vi acras, vi s.; unius prati vocati Krynglecarre, cum le Sprynge<sup>2</sup> eidem pertinente, continentis xvi acras, xvi s.; unius pasturæ vocatæ Sowreleez, continentis xxx acras, xvi s.; unius clausi pasturæ vocati Busky Closse, continentis xvi acras, viii s.; unius pasturæ vocatæ Yowsky Parke, continentis viii acras, iv s.; unius pasturæ vocatæ Lyngery Felde, continentis xxx acras, vis. viii d.; duarum pasturarum vocatarum Thistleley-feld [xl],<sup>3</sup> et unius pasturæ jacentis subtus eandem, vocatæ le Southfelde [xl],<sup>3</sup> et unius pasturæ vocatæ le Crossefflate, continentis iv<sup>xx</sup> acras, xxvi s. viii d.; unius clausi vocati Conygarth Felde, continentis xx acras, vi s. viii d.; communis pasturæ vocatæ Hayeth, continentis lx acras, xv s.; duorum parvorum clausorum jacentium a retro Graunge vocatorum Belle Close, et unius orti vocati

Lath Garth, continentium viii acras, v s. iv d.; unius pasturæ vocatæ Newte Leeze, continentis iv acras, ii s.; unius parcellæ terræ vocatæ le Conygarth, cum domo et ii clausuris eidem adjacentibus, ac cum warena cuniculorum ibidem, vi s. viii d.; In toto ut supra, et sic etc. Summa vi li. xv s. vi d.

this local name are here met with within the compass of the same number of lines. It is hardly necessary to remark that the true form is Sonley.

the eatage of a single ox during the pasturing period of the year. The term "gate" is in full use still, and in the same sense, in this part of the county. A farmer with more stock than he can feed on his own pastures, "gates" them, or takes so many "gates" in any convenient place in which he can meet with them. The term occurs repeatedly in an old estate-book belonging to Lord Feversham.

<sup>1</sup> This is a word of by no means usual occurrence; indeed I do not remember having met with it before in any document of the nature of the present records. The meaning, however, is by no means obscure. Halliwell gives the word PIKES, with the definition, "Short butts which fill up the irregularity caused by hedges not running parallel," a definition as perspicuous as a good many others which disfigure that otherwise most valuable book. What is intended is a nook or corner occasioned by the convergence of two fences (or other boundaries), and having a more or less triangular shape in consequence of its more or less definite severance from the parallel slips into which the remaining bulk of the enclosure is divided.

<sup>2</sup> For the manuscript from which this document is derived I am indebted to the kindness of Canon Raine. He gave me to understand that he had met with the original among other papers and documents preserved at Belvoir, and that his copy was taken there. Scarcely a word is required from the Editor to enhance the great interest attaching to such a record, and alike as relates to the direct history of Rievaulx Abbey, and to the more general, but scarcely less interesting and important, history of the arrangement and fittings of Cistercian houses. If I am not misinformed, some important additions in this connection may possibly be made before very long to what is actually known and correctly ascertained touching the Abbey buildings at Rievaulx. One only needs cast a glance over the highly interesting and most instructive results which have been realised by competent examination at Fountains and Easby—not to mention other like cases—in order to appreciate what would be the positive gain, in the direction indicated, to our present measure and means of learning, by a systematic and scientifically conducted examination of the beautiful and singularly suggestive remains at Rievaulx. As already noted in former instances in these pages, what of them is still left is mouldering away year by year for want of a little fostering care and protective expenditure. On every consideration, what is still spared for the admiration and instruction of the ever-increasing number of thoughtful and inquiring students of the past, its works and its history, ought not only to be as carefully preserved—at least saved from the effects of unresisted ruin and decay—as can be done by the application of modern skill and science, but what there is recorded in stone in that which is left (and both under the present surface as well as above), committed to the more enduring record of faithful and appreciative description at the hands of a man, or body of men, uniting the necessary historical and technical knowledge. In the case of the two Monasteries cited above, it is seen that there is no difficulty about the provision of the necessary funds for one part at least of what is named in the preceding paragraphs; and there is little reason to doubt that the rest would be forthcoming, were it generally known that it would be suitably and worthily expended. The Editor has reason to conclude, as the result of inquiries made on the spot, that at the rate of sixpence a head, levied on all the visitors to the Abbey, a total sum of more than £100 would be annually realised; and from what he has seen himself, of what lies almost on the surface, or only slightly shrouded by the sward and lighter débris, it is simply impossible to estimate what actual and most interesting discoveries, as well as preservations, might be accomplished with even that sum annually set apart for the purpose.

<sup>1</sup> "An enclosure, screen, or railing, such as may be used to . . . separate a chapel from the main body of a church" (Parker's Glossary of Architecture). It is hardly necessary to remark that this screen or parclose is not to be confounded with the main screen, occupying its usual place, or between the practical choir and the nave. There is the utmost certainty that the parclose here named would cross the "chaunsell" or choir in the rear of the high altar. See note <sup>2</sup>.

<sup>2</sup> The expansion of this word is somewhat uncertain. The signification is perhaps self-evident, or so nearly so that it may be taken for granted as being equivalent to "parteth" or "partitioneth." A moment's consideration is enough to attest this position. Still "partitioneth" is rather a violent guess for

<sup>3</sup> The bases of these five altars are still perfectly evident rather than simply traceable only. Three, at least, out of the five have piscinas let into the floor at no great distance from what used to be the foot of each several altar. This fact of the five altars under the east window it is that renders the assumption as to the meaning of the contracted word noted just above so satisfactorily certain.

<sup>4</sup> No altars are specified here as having occupied positions in these two chapels in the south transept. Still there is no doubt that there were such altars. And it will be noted that, on coming to the two chapels in the north transept, the altars standing in them severally are duly noticed.

steple was due to violence, or to the processes of natural decay. It is scarcely credible that the monks

<sup>1</sup> The word sele in the sense of canopy has already been noticed in the present series of notes. We have the verb here in a varying sense. After writing about the word, as in the aforesaid note, Professor Skeat goes on to say, "The word was afterwards extended so as to include the notion of covering with side-hangings, and even to that of providing with wainscoting or flooring. Cotgrave has, 'plancher, a boarded floor; also a seeling of boords.' But all are mere developments from syll, a canopy, or from the Latin caelum, used in the sense of cieling in the 13th century."

<sup>3</sup> One naturally, at first sight, fixes on the word grayle as what is to be understood here: that is to say, the gradale or graduale of the ancient services, defined by Mr. Way, in his notes to Pr. Pm. as "a service book containing the responses, or gradalia, so called because they are sung in gradibus, or in course." Skeat, however, suggests the translation "upon the steps" as preferable for in gradibus. But whatever the first inducement as to the identity of the word may be, yet, on pursuing the paragraph a little further, it is at once apparent that the word "other" in the clause, "other bretasynges" bears reference to this word gralles—inasmuch as there is no other word with which it can be correlated—and that consequently gralles must be of the same general nature as bretasynges, as to which word see next note. This, of course, throws us at once upon grill, Fr. grille, a grating, of which Skeat says that it was formerly spelt grail or greil. The word is still in use in French Convents.

<sup>4</sup> Skeat gives "Brattice, a fence of boards in a mine," with the further notice:—"M. E., bretage, bretasce, brutaske (with numerous other spellings), a parapet, battlement, outwork," etc., and the following quotation from Pr. Pm., "Betrax, bretasce, bretays, of a walle, propugnaculum." Parker (Gloss. of Architecture) gives "Brattishing, Brandishing, Bretizment, Bretasyng, Bretise, Bretisement: a crest, battlement, or other parapet." And it is to be remarked that Parker, Skeat, and the editor of the Promptorium all give what may be termed a military turn to their explanations and illustrations of the word, save only that the first-named, among his instances, gives the following: "And on the height of the said cover (of the shrine of St. Cuthbert at Durham) from end to end was a most fine brattishing of carved work, cut throughout with dragons, and fowls, and beasts, most artificially wrought." This extract, it seems hardly necessary to observe, is essentially illustrative of the use of the word bretasynges in the instance before us.

CCCLXXVIII. CONVENTUAL LEASES, YORKSHIRE.

Extracts
pertinent to Rievaulx
from Conventual Leases of Yorkshire Monasteries.

869. 2 March, 15 Henr. VIII. [1523-4]. William, Abbat of Rivaux, dimised to Nicholas Walker, Yoman, and Esabell his wife, "Sownlay coitt<sup>1</sup> with Stabyllaynge, xviiith acre, and Cartereynges, xliiith acre, in Muscote eynges, [with] viiith acre and a halve in Sownlayeynge," for the term of their natural lives: Esabell not to marry again without the licence of the Abbat: at a yearly rent of £7, 2s. 8d.

871. 6 July, 30 Henr. VIII. [1538]. Rowland, Abbat of Rievalx, dimised to Ralphe Bawde of Helmysley, Gentelman,

"ther maner called Lunde, and all arable land and medowe ground, common of moore, common of pasture, etc." from the feast of S. Helen last past, and for a term of 31 years, at a rent of £5 payable at the feast of S. Peter ad Vincula, and £5 at the Purification of the Virgin.

872<sup>a</sup>. 20 Jan. 1530. Edward, Abbat of Rivaulx, demised to Thomas Mylson, Yoman, "the rowme and office of their common stable to himsylffe oonely duryng his naturall lyffe: his wages weekly viii whiett lowes of the leweray bread,<sup>1</sup> and iii of the browne breide, and ii gallons of the convent aill,<sup>2</sup> so that for oon of them he shall keip the brewhouse door of the komying day, and iiij gallons of the leweray ayll,<sup>2</sup> and everie day oon servyce or a dysch of meitt from the kytching: And yf the said Thomas do find any fawte in the said servyce of meitt, then, if it please him, he shall haue and be served as the servanttes of the back-hous<sup>3</sup> and brewhous is served, or els as servandes in the hall, if he wyll. . . . Also the said Thomas shall haue and resawe a leweray coitte<sup>4</sup> when that other different kinds or qualities specified. Here convent ale and livery ale are named. In what follows, yeoman ale—yeoman ale of the great vat—Abbot's ale, and greenhorn or greenhow (for it is written both ways) ale, besides the 'charke' mentioned in one place, are all enumerated. As an Essex lad, more than sixty years ago, I remember the brewhouse attached to most of the large farmsteads there, in which, as occasion required, small beer, harvest beer, ordinary or table beer, ale, strong ale, were all brewed; and all these kinds with the ordinary malt, the quantity used creating the differences implied. But from memoranda touching the "assise of ale" (and otherwise) it is known that there were divers kinds of malt employed in the manufacture of mediæval beer, some being made from oats and some even from rye. So that the varieties of ale might be both numerous and distinct, a mixture of different kinds of malt being specified from time to time.

servandes resawith ther coittes: and also he shall have a kowe-gaitt<sup>1</sup> in the common pasture, after forme and maner as other servandes hath; and also common of pasture for an other kowe as other stable men, and oon loode of wood and oon of turwes, at the assig[n]ment of the Abbot and Convent, at the carriage<sup>2</sup> of the said Thomas."

872<sup>b</sup>. 22 June, 26 Henr. VIII. [1534]. Roland, Abbat of Rivaulx, demised to William Adams of Marres and his wife, and Joh[anna] Adams his doghter, or, after the death of them to Johan Harland his son-in-law, "ther Grange-place called Kekmarres with all closes and all other thinges perteing to the said place as Robert Harland had when he departed of this worlde; that is to say, all that the said Robert . . . after a division and particion was maid betwix the said Roberte and a newe place that W[i]lliam Norram latly was dwellyng uppon, to which newe place was and is except a greatt felde called the Est felde, and a close called Wyethe clos and a new clos in the Est more," from the feast of the Invention of the Holy Cross called S. Helen day then next, for 31 years, at a yearly rent of £4, 16s. 8d.

873. 2 June 1528. William, Abbat of Rivaulx, let to William the Prior of Bridlington . . . [illegible]. Indorsed "Campe and Twillynge, alias Twyndill."

term "livery chiefly denoted external marks of distinction, such as the roba estivalis et hiemalis given to the officers and retainers of the Court." Not that I would be understood as implying that the eminent scholar named was mistaken in his position that the livery did actually and commonly carry with it the sense of external marks of distinction, but only that we should not let our modern notions of what is meant by a "livery" interfere with our perception that the word, in old times, bore a very much wider, and in some respects a very different, sense from that of a distinctive dress, garment, or appendage. In other words, we should remember that the appropriate or inherent sense of the word itself is by no means to be lost sight of. And that "inherent or appropriate sense" is well illustrated in the series of records with which we are now occupied. For the "leweray bread" and the "leweray ayll" were equally articles of "livery" with the "leweray coitte," which is the occasion of the present note: and of course it cannot be contended that there was any sign or token or symbol of distinction in them. The real fact is that bread, meat, fish (salt and fresh), ale or beer, salt, wood, turf, were all "leweray," that is, articles delivered at stated seasons to dependants, servants, retainers, quite as much as distinguishing garments, colours, or appendages to garments: and in this connection the present entries are of value.

<sup>2</sup> The convent assigns the fuel, but the party to whom it is assigned is to be at the charge and trouble of "leading," "carrying," or conveying it home.

874. 5 Feb. 1508. John, Abbat of Rivaulx, let to Richard Jhonson, John Jhonson, and Richard Jhonson, [son] of the said John Jhonson, "tenementum suum de Middilton in Teysdail," from the feast of the Invention of the Holy Cross then next to come, for 10 years, at a yearly rent of 17s. 8d.

875. 16 Oct. 1534. Roland, Abbat of Rivaulx, let to John Kyghley of Airdal ther meisse and walkmylne in Airdaill<sup>1</sup> with a cloisse joining unto it and halfe of the Cowper housse, from the feast of S. Andrew next ensuing, for 41 years, at a rent of 13s. 4d.

876. Michaelmas, 1436. An agreement between William, Abbat of Rivaulx, and Thomas, Prior of Mount Grace, about Morton Grange in East Harlsey.

877. 16 April 1537. Rowland Blyton, Abbat of Rivaulx, let to Thomas Stringar of Malton, Yoman, "a chambre and a stable under it, standyng in Malton within ther tenement which is in y<sup>e</sup> holdyng of oon Henry Johnson," from the feast of S. Helen then next, for 15 years, at a yearly rent of 12s.

878. 30 Septr., 29 Henr. VIII. [1537]. Roland, Abbat of Rivaulx, let to "Thomas Butler and John Butler, his son, of Nunyngton in the county of York, Gentelman, a farmhold called Sonley Coott and Stabull-ynges with xviii acrez, Carter-ynges xiiii acrez in Muscote ynge, with viii acrez and a halfe in Sonley ynges," for 40 years next after the death of Isabel Walker, now fermer of the same, at a yearly rent of £7, 2s. 8d.

879. 12 Dec. 1534. Roland, Abbat of Rivaulx, let to Cristofer Bowes of Angrum, Yoman, the Grange of Angrum, with all things thereto pertaining, as well within the said ground of Angrum enclosed, as other parcell of land lying within the field of Welberie, from the feast of S. Helen then next, for 47 years, at a yearly rent of £6.

name of Harriet, the Air being the survival of the same syllable in the name presented in this memorandum. If that is so, the preponderance of likelihood is that the existing water-mill near the entrance to the Abbey represents the old walk-mylne (or fulling-mill) mentioned here.

880. Nov. 7, 1487. William, Abbat of Rivaulx, let to Richard Johnson their tenement in Middilton in Teysdalle from the feast of the Invention of the Holy Cross then next, for 12 years, at a yearly rent of 27s. 8d.<sup>1</sup>

881. June 6, 30 Henr. VIII. [1538]. Rowland, Abbat of Rivaulx, let to William Jorden, Yoman, and Mabel his wife, a messuage in Righton, to hold to them and Peter and Robert his sons for [illegible].

882. Dec. 10, 1534. Lease by Rowland, Abbat of Rivaulx, to Humfray Watson and John his son, of "oon meisse and fermhold in Great Broghton, with three oxengange of lande, laitly in the holding of Richarde Hoggarde," from the Invention of the Holy Cross, 1544, for a terme of 31 years, at a yearly rent of 20s.

883. May 24, 1533. Lease by Edward, Abbat of Rivaulx, to Robert Henryson of the new house in the Marres in the Newhouse Lathe, at a yearly rent of £7, 6s. 8d.

884. March 15, 29 Henr. VIII. [1537-8]. Lease by Abbat Rowland to Bartholomew Twynge of East Heslarton of "there messuage, with a laith and other houses of office, and fowre oxgange of land, with certain forbye<sup>2</sup> land lyeing within the town and felde of East Heslarton, now in the holding of Elesabeth Wilkynson, also two messes<sup>3</sup> now in the holding of William Mawe and Robert Hunter, with all the shepe-gates<sup>4</sup>

<sup>2</sup> There seems to be some little uncertainty in the Glossarists as to the exact meaning of this word. Thus Halliwell gives it with the explanation, "past, near"; and then he adds, "it is explained, besides, in addition to, West. and Cumb. Dial." Jamieson's first signification is "past, beyond"; and his second, "besides, over and above," and this in either case, whether the word be used as a preposition or an adverb. Forby, as an adjective, he explains by "extraordinary." Halliwell's reason for adding the meaning "near" is not apparent, and I do not think the word includes the idea of nearness or contiguity. The instance he gives implies the idea of nearness just as much and just as little as it is implied in the statement that, when the Priest and the Levite saw the man who had fallen among thieves, they "passed by on the other side." The word is used as an adjective here, and there can be no hesitation in assigning the meaning of "additional," or "over and above," to it.

and common of pasture being within the town and felde of East Heslarton aforesaid belonging to the said Abbat and Convent," from the death of Elizabeth Wilkinson, widow, for the term of 40 years, at a yearly rent of 36s.

885. July 14, 30 Henr. VIII. [1538]. Lease by Rowland Blyton, Abbat, to Thomas Cowper of Bowforth, Yeoman, of the Grange of Bowforth, To hold to the said Thomas Cowper, Cecil his wife and Thomas his son, from the feast of S. Helen then last past, for the term of 41 years, at a yearly rent of £4, 6s. 8d.

886. April 2, 1535. Lease by Abbat Rowland to Ralph Barton of Loftmarees, Yeoman, of "there grange-place of Loftemarres, and the halfe parte of Calfoitt, with all the landes, tenementes, etc." from the feast of the Invention of the Holy Cross, 1545, for the term of 35 years, at £11 a year.

887. March 2, 15 Henr. VIII. [1523-4]. Lease by Abbot William to Nicholas Walker, Yeoman, and Esabell his wife, of Sownlay, etc. [as in No. 869].

888. Dec. 10, 26 Henr. VIII. [1534]. Lease by Abbat Roland to Thomas Jackson of Marres and Roger his son, or any son of the said Roger's lawfully begotten, of "there grange in the Marres called Cowhouse," from the feast of S. Helen then next, for a term of 33 years, at a yearly rent of 8 marks.

889. May 10, 1531. Lease by Abbat Edward to Antony Jackson, Milner, of Howkeld Mylne, of their miln of Howkeld, from the feast of the Invention, called S. Helen's day, then last past, for a term of 10 years, at a rent of 22 quarters of harde corne,<sup>1</sup> that is to say of wheitt and rye.

890. June 26, 30 Henr. VIII. [1538]. Lease by Abbat Rowland Blyton to Ralph Alderson of Swawdall, John Alderson and Nicholas Alderson of Maryke, Yeomen, of "the office of the ferme gathering<sup>2</sup> in Swawdall, and the oversight of the woddes does not convey the idea of right in any way, any more than cow-gate does. The notion of quantity or amount, of adequacy or sufficiency, is what is really involved. Sheep-rake is a word of more frequent occurrence, and sheep-stray perhaps more frequent still.

<sup>2</sup> This no doubt means that the person (or persons) employed acted as collector of the fermes or fixed rents made in lieu of all other payments or duties ('services'), as the following phrases imply the duties of the modern bailiff or farm-bailiff.

891. Aug. 10, 1534. Lease by Abbat Roland to Robert Hunter, of their grange of Newstede in lez Marres, Calfcote, and Cowhouse-yng, from the Invention of the Holy Cross, 1535, for a term of 41 years, at a rent of £31, 10s.

892. Oct. 10, 1524. Lease by Abbat William to Robert Hunter, of the same premises, from Holy Cross day 1523, for 31 years, at a rent of £21, 10s.

893. July 4, 30 Henr. VIII. [1538]. Lease by Abbat Rowland Blyton to Leonard Sayr of Browghton, Gentleman, of "ther manour or graunge of Greatt Broughton, and all arable laund, mayn, medowe, common of moore, common of pasture, hedge boot, brosing<sup>1</sup> wood for cattall in wynter, and all manner of inclosinges," from S. Helen last past, for 33 years, at £8 a year.

894. Feb. 26, 1534. Grant by Abbat Roland to John Benson and Jenett his wife, of a corrodie for term of their lives: grantees not to sell. The corrody consists of—"Everie week vi gallons of the convent aill, and ii gallons of yoman aill, or els, as John Braithwat hath his aill, and ii gallons of grenhorn,<sup>2</sup> x whit leverey lowes and vi rie lowes, and oons in a yere oon stone of tallowe, halfe a boschell of salt, and a boschell of oitt meill; every day oon meisse of meitt,<sup>3</sup> both fysche day and fleshe day, can be little doubt, the same as greynhow, which occurs in the Mem. with 896 prefixed. In all probability it differed little from the last or weakest brew taken from the malt (more brewings than one being usually taken when a full supply of malt had been originally infused).

<sup>1</sup> Halliwell gives "Brouse. Brushwood. West." Skeat's notice of Brouze, however, is such as to make this word one of some interest. He says, "to nibble; said of cattle. It occurs in Shak., but scarcely to be found earlier; a corruption of broust, from Fr. brouster, also brouter, explained by Cotgrave by 'to brouze, to nip, or nibble off the sprigs, buds, barke, etc., of plants'; a sense still retained in prov. Eng., brut (Kent, Surrey), which keeps the t while dropping the s; from O.F. 'broust, a sprig, tendrell, bud, a yong branch or shoot.'—Cotg. The word is also Celtic. . . . A collection of shoots or sprigs is implied in Eng. brushwood; and from the same source we have brush."

<sup>3</sup> One "mess of meat," where, from what follows, it is apparent that the word "meat" bears the meaning still customary in this district, namely, that of food in general. "Butcher's meat" is usually termed "flesh," or "flesh meat," and a "man's meat" is his share of all that comes to table—flesh, bacon, ham, bread, pudding, or what not. Forty years ago the "'daytal' man's 'wage' was a shilling a day and his 'meat.'"

ons of the day, served from the kitchyn, and to have a housse to dwell in, with a garthing, oon kow gaitt and oon lood of hay, oon lood of wood and oon of turwes caried to their doore,<sup>1</sup> and oon lood of wood and oon of turwes to be assigned be a officer, at the cariage of the said John and Jenett. If John die, his wife is only to have half, excepting the load of hay and cow-gate.

895. 26 March, 1526. Grant by Abbot William to John Braithwaite and Alyson his wife, of a corrody for the term of their lives: not to sell the corrody on pain of forfeiture; the grantees living at Skiplom; corrody to consist of "Everye weyke vi gallons of convent haill, and ii gallons of the Abbottes hayll, iiij gallons of grenhorne, x lewerye lowes and vi rye lowes, oone bouschell of salte and halve a bouschell of hoyt meyll: and also for their lewery meyll<sup>2</sup> oone beyffe to be delyvered to them at Martynmes by the assignment of the said Abbot or his offycers, as it please hym: and in the begynnyng of Lenten to have vii saltfeych, lx whyet heryn and lx red heryn: and a clois bounding of Wedercoitt clois." Also, if they get tired of living at Skiplom, they shall give up their farm-hold there and have a house to dwell in at the monastery, and a cow-gate, a load of hay carried to their door, and also two loads of wood and two of "towrwes" carried to their door.

896. 18 June, 1532. Grant by Abbot Edward to George Coottes of Rascall, Yeoman, and Alice his wife, of the service of keeping their swine during their lives, and for their service they shall receive "every weike, whiet leveray loves, xii; also of hostall loves, vii; also of yoman aile of the great fatt, v gallons; also of the aile called greynhow,<sup>3</sup> iii gallons; also every day a service of meitt from the kytching, or elles money,<sup>4</sup> as hath beene used aforetyme: also the broken breid of the livery meal was delivered once a year only, viz., at Martinmas. The beyffe, then, may be understood as delivered to them in lieu of their day-to-day livery meal; or it may be understood that their share or proportion of the beef delivered was the carcase of one ox. All the correlative Scand. words mean share, measure, due proportion, and it is not impossible that it may be used here in that sense.

<sup>2</sup> There is room for some little uncertainty as to the intended meaning of this word here. The word is of course our modern English meal; and in the same way "oone beyffe" is one beeve, or, more exactly, the flesh, or eatable part, of one ox. A "leveray meal" would be the meal delivered day by day at the convent kitchen or buttery. But the present

<sup>1</sup> Unless this be the bran eliminated from the meal previously to working it into bread, it is difficult to surmise what it is that is intended here. It may, however—and it would be more consonant with the apparent connection of the word—mean portions of over-baked or burnt bread.

<sup>4</sup> "Chark. Small beer, Yorks."—Halliwell. He also gives the Linc. verb to "chark, to expose new ale to the air in an open vessel until it acquires a degree of acidity, and therewith becomes clearer and sourer, fit for drinking." But it is evident that the word here means the small beer, the last and weakest mash from the malt.

<sup>6</sup> This probably means the enclosing fences. But inasmuch as heck is an alternative form of hedge—cf. the word heckberry—and besides has the two meanings of a half-door and a wattled or sparred frame, it is possible that the means of closing the swynnehowse at pleasure may be intended.

<sup>8</sup> The collocation of these two terms calls for a word of comment. Skeat explains the verb "to geld" by "to emasculate," and of course correctly. But "to lib" is with equal correctness defined by the words "to castrate." But the collocation of the words in the present place forbids the assumption that they are identical in meaning. Probably Halliwell's remark that "to geld" was "formerly used for the operation by which females are rendered barren," conveys the explanation required. The words "cow-gelder" and "sow-gelder" will both be familiar to most of us; and the libbing of pigs is heard of still in North-country places. Spay, otherwise splay, is another word for the operation mentioned by Halliwell; and but for the mention of "breeding speldings," it might have been suggested that speldings was but a form of spaidlings.

897. March 1, 26 Henr. VIII. [1534-5]. Indenture between Dan John Wilson, Prior of Mount Grace, and Robert Willson of Morton Grange, servant to the said Prior, reciting that on April 1, 21 Henr. VII. [1506], John Burton, late Abbat of Rivaulx, had demised to Henry Egglyston, late Prior of Mount Grace, the manor or grange of Morton next unto East Harlsay, four messuages, eight oxgangs, etc., for a certain term of years, at a yearly rent of £13, 6s. 8d.: and that the Prior and Convent of Mount Grace is determined and concluded to meddle with little husbandry, therefore they assigned their lease to the said Robert Wilson.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Some little illustration of this lease may be obtained in the following extract from "Exchequer Depositions by Commission: 41 Eliz. [1599]. Easter. No. 29." James Kaye of East Harleseye, husbandman, aged fourscore and more, swears, in answer to certain interrogatories—That he knoweth the parcelles of grownd called the Dale Bancke, alias Wyker Dale Bancke, the Pitt Raynes, Netheridge Holme, the Beckes, otherwise Wyker Beckes, and Wyker Dale, by their severall names, and that they lye in one close and not severed by any hedge or fence: that he knoweth the field or pasture in East Harleseye aforesayd called Wyker, and certayne lees therin which did belong to the late dissolved Monasterye of Ryvax, called Ryvax Lees, otherwise Wyker Lees, and further sayth that the most parte of those lees lye upon the northsyde of Wyker towards Netheridge Holme, and other some of the sayd lees lye distante upon the south from them devyded by one land, and the rest on the nether ende of the dale in the same close: All the sayd feild of pasture called Wyker, except, the sayd lees, belonging to Ryvax Abbeye, is and allways, tyme out of memorye of man, hath bene parte and parcell of the mannor and towne

<sup>1</sup> See p. 1, No. I. There are three paper leaves at the beginning of the Cartularium preſerved in the Muſeum, which ſupplies all the material for the firſt 204 pages of the preſent volume. Theſe three paper leaves are followed by four leaves of parchment. The fourth parchment leaf is numbered 1, and is folded in ſix, and on it is written what is headed “Genealogy of Roos.” I had originally intended to print this in its place at the head of the Chartulary; not as a perfect and entirely correct genealogy, but as an integral part of the Cartularium, and I regret now that I did not do ſo. What is printed here is, however, mainly derived from it; and I append in theſe notes anything of intereſt which is to be found in the ſaid “Genealogy” and is not included in the text.

<sup>2</sup> The firſt line in the Genealogy contains the ſingle name Eſpec, with a blank after it, indicating that his wife’s name and family were unknown. It may be mentioned here, in paſſing, that there can be little, if any, doubt that he was the William Speck whoſe name is found, among thoſe of other Tenants in capite, in the Bedfordſhire Domesday, as holding Wardon and other manors at the date of the ſaid record. The ſecond line gives as the firſt of the three daughters of Eſpec, “Hauuiſia, uxor Willelmi Buſcy”; ſecond “Albreda, uxor Nicholai Trayly”; third, “Adelina, uxor Petri, Domini de Ros, qui ſepultus eſt Rievalle”; and then follows Walterus Eſpeck = Adelina, uxor Walteri, with the following commentary ſubjoined: “miles strenuus Conqueſtoris, tria fundavit monaſteria: 1. de Kirkham, A.D. 1122 (22 vel 23 Henr. I.); 2. de Rievall., 1133 (33 vel 34 Henr. I.); 3. de Wardon, 1136 (1 vel 2 Steph.). Monaſterio autem de Kirkham dedit juſ patronatus ſeptem eccleſiarum per ipſum appropriatarum eiſdem in proprios uſus habendarum, et poſſeſſiones 1100 mercarum in Com. Northumbriæ: plus multo Rievallo, ut per illius Monaſterii Regiſtrum patet. Wardonæ quantum ignoratur. Satis amplum tamen reliquit patrimoniuſ tribus ſororibus, hæredibus ſuis: et ſepultus eſt Rievall., 7 Idus Martii, 1154 (1 Henr. II.).” All the dates within the brackets appear to be in Richard Gascoigne’s handwriting. An entry with his ſignature is found on the third of the paper leaves preceding the parchment leaves adverted to a little above.

Monasterio Abbatiae Rievall. ; qui quidem Robertus duxit Sibillam de Valoniis in uxorem et genuit ex ea Everardum de Roos ; qui Everardus duxit quandam Rosam,<sup>1</sup> et genuit ex ea Robertum de Roos, dictum Fursan ; qui Robertus duxit in uxorem Isabellam, filiam Regis Scotiæ, et genuit ex ea Willelmum de Roos et Robertum. Dictus vero Robertus Fursan levavit castra de Helmslay et de Warke, et Templariis dedit Ribstane, et postea divisit terras suas, et dedit Willelmo filio suo et hæredi castrum de Hemmisley, cum pertinenciis suis, et advocationem Monasteriorum de Kirkham, Rievall, et de Wardona ; et Roberto filio ejus dedit castrum de Warke, cum pertinenciis suis, et cum baronia in Scotia ad tenendum de Willelmo fratre suo et hærede ejus per servitium militare ; et præterea dictus Robertus Fursan factus est Templarius, et Londini est sepultus. Willelmus de Roos duxit in uxorem Luciam<sup>2</sup> et genuit ex ea quendam Robertum de Roos ; qui quidem Willelmus sepultus est in Monasterio de Kirkham, in medio coram summo altare. Robertus filius ejus duxit in uxorem Isabellam, hæredem D'Albany,<sup>3</sup> et genuit ex ea Willelmum de Roos, et sepultus est apud Kirkham in tumba marmorea ex parte australi. Willelmus

Adelina by Peter de Roos. Still there is no question that there was another son by this marriage. For in Walter Espec's charter of foundation of Rievaulx (No. XLII., p. 16), after the enumeration of eleven testes, is added : "Testimonio etiam et concessu nepotum meorum : scil., Will. de Bussei, et Jordani et Rogeri, qui sunt filii sororis meæ Hauwis primogenitæ patris et matris meæ ; et nepotum meorum Gaufridi de Tralli, Willelmi et Gilleberti et Nicholai, filiorum mediæ sororis meæ Albreæ ; et nepotum meorum Everardi et Roberti, filiorum sororis meæ Odelinæ postgenitæ." This is a statement too distinct and precise to be overlooked. Dugdale affirms that Everard de Roos was a minor at his father's death, and a ward of Ranulph de Glanville's.

<sup>1</sup> "Having married Rose, one of the daughters and heirs of William Trusbut (of Wartre, in Holderness), he died before the thirty-second year of Henry II., leaving her a young widow, and two sons surviving ; whereof the eldest was then thirteen years of age, and called Robert with the addition of Fursan." It will be observed that the other son is not named in this Genealogy. Dugdale also makes a further statement concerning Robert Fursan, which occasions some little questioning ; namely, that in 14 John "he took upon him the habit of religion, whereupon the custody of all he had, viz., Werke Castle, with his whole barony, was committed to Philip de Ulcote. But therein he did not long continue (as it seems) ; for in January following" —the date of the assumed profession being May 15, 1212—"the Shreevalty of Cumberland, and the forest there were committed to his custody." But even without this precise statement, the part he took in the baronial struggle with the King, which resulted in the concession of the Great Charter, is sufficiently notorious to show that he had returned to the world, if indeed he had actually ever left it. That he became a Templar, probably just before the close of his life, there is no uncertainty about. One reason for thinking it was quite late in his life that he retired to the Temple is that he gave Wark Castle to his son Robert in the eleventh year of Henry III., that being also the year of his own death (Baronage, i. 546).

filius ejus duxit in uxorem Matildam de Vaus,<sup>1</sup> hæredem medietatis terrarum Johannis de Vaus, et genuit ex ea Willelmum de Roos, et sepultus est in eodem Monasterio de Kirkham in tumba marmorea ex parte boreali. Willelmus de Roos, filius ejus, duxit in uxorem Margeriam de Badilesmere,<sup>2</sup> et genuit ex ea Willelmum, Thomam, Margaretam et Matildam, et sepultus est apud Kirkham in mausoleo lapideo juxta magnum altare, ex parte australi. Willelmus filius ejus duxit in uxorem Margaretam filiam Domini Radulphi de Nevil, qui moriebatur in Terra Sancta, sine hærede, ibique sepelitur. Ei successit Thomas frater ejus, qui quidem Thomas duxit in uxorem Beatricem<sup>3</sup> filiam Radulphi, Comitis Staffordiæ, et genuit ex ea Johannem, Willelmum, Thomam et Robertum, Elizabeth[am] et Margaretam; qui quidem Thomas de Roos obiit apud Uffington versus Terram Sanctam, et sepultus est in Monasterio Rievallis in medio chori. Qui quidem Johannes, filius ejus, duxit in uxorem Mariam de Orebe,<sup>4</sup> sororem Comitis Northumbriæ, qui decessit sine hærede masculo apud Cypresse, peregrinans versus Terram Sanctam, et sepultus est apud Rievallem in australi parte chori, juxta magnum altare. Cui successit Willelmus frater ejus, qui duxit in uxorem Margaretam filiam Domini Johannis de Arundell, et genuit ex ea Johannem, Willelmum, Thomam, Robertum et Ricardum, Beatricem, Aliciam, Margaretam et Elizabetham; qui Willelmus obiit apud Belveerum, primo die Septembris A. D. M<sup>o</sup> cccxiii, et sepultus medio chori Prioratus ibidem. Cui successit Johannes primogenitus et hæres ejusdem Willelmi, qui duxit in uxorem Margeriam,<sup>5</sup> filiam et hæredem Philippi de Spencer, qui Johannes obiit in Francia,<sup>6</sup> sine

<sup>4</sup> She is called Maria de Orbe in the Genealogy. Her will is in Testamenta Eboracensia, i. p. 201. In a note the editor says, "Henry Lord Percy, who died in 1368, was twice married. His second wife was Joane, daughter and sole heir of John, Baron de Orebye, by whom he had an only daughter, the testatrix, who married John Lord Roos, and died without issue at the early age of twenty-seven, in 1394. Her husband, of precisely her own age, had died at Paphos in the island of Cyprus, in the preceding year, on his journey to the Holy Land; and, what is remarkable, her husband's father, Thomas Lord Roos, and his uncle, William Lord Roos, had both died during similar pilgrimages—the former in 1384, when on the point of leaving England, the latter in 1352, whilst on his journey." It will be observed, however, that the Genealogy makes the explicit statement that the said William de Roos died, not on his journey to the Holy Land, but in the Holy Land, and was buried there.

<sup>6</sup> The name of the place at which he and his brother perished is illegible in the Genealogy, but the place intended may probably be Beaujé or Bauge, where he would be slain in company with the Duke of Clarence. Dugdale says that he distinguished himself at the siege of "Roan," 6 Henry v., and that "about two years after, being with the Duke of Clarence, who, with the English army in France, had marched far and successfully into the country; and with him advancing more boldly upon the Dolphin's army than was requisite . . . through the disorder of their

Statutum igitur ut, si forte inimico homine super-seminante zizaniam inter cardinales, de substituendo Pontifice plena non poterit esse concordia, et, duabus partibus concordantibus, tertia pars concordare noluit, aut alium nominare præsumpserit, ille ab universa recipiatur Ecclesia et habeatur Episcopus qui a duabus partibus electus fuerit et receptus. Si quis autem de tertiæ partis nominatione quia . . . <sup>1</sup> nomen episcopi sibi usurpaverit, tam ipsi quam qui eum receperunt excommunicationi subjaceant et totius secundi ordinis privatione multentur, ita ut etiam viatici, nisi tantum in ultimis, communicatio eis denegetur, et, nisi resipuerint, cum Datan et Abiram, quos terra vivos absorbit, recipiant portionem. Preterea si a paucioribus aliquis quam a duabus partibus fuerit electus ad Apostolatus officium, nisi major assensus [3<sup>b</sup>] affuerit vel concordia intercesserit, nullatenus assumatur, et prædictæ poenæ subjaceat <sup>2</sup> si humiliter noluerit abstinere. Ex hoc tamen nullum canonicis institutionibus et aliis ecclesiis præjudicium generetur, in quibus majoris et sanioris partis debet prævalere sententia, quia quod eis in dubium venerit superiori poterit judicio definiri. In Romana vero Curia et Ecclesia speciale aliquid constituitur quia non potest ad superiorem recursus haberi.

3. XI. Cum in cunctis ordinibus et ecclesiasticis ministeriis, et ætatis maturitas, et gravitas morum, et litterarum scientia sit attendenda et quærenda, multo fortius in episcopo hoc oportet inquiri, qui, ad curam aliorum positus, in seipso debet ostendere qualiter oporteat aliis in domo Domini conversari. Eapropter ne quod de quibusdam ex necessitate temporis factum est in exemplum trahatur a posteris, præsentī decreto statuimus ut nullus in Episcopum, nisi qui xxx annorum ætatem attigerit, et de legitimo matrimonio sit natus, qui etiam vita et scientia demonstretur commendabilis, eligatur. Cum autem electus fuerit, et electionis confirmationem acceperit, et ecclesiasticorum bonorum administrationem habuerit, decurso tempore de consecrandis episcopis a canonibus definito, hi ad quos beneficia spectant quæ habuerint,

The numbers employed in distinguishing the documents printed (or abstracted) in the Appendix will be Arabic instead of Roman as heretofore. It should be observed that in the original this title is rubricated.

<sup>1</sup> The reading here is doubtful. The MS. has  $\tilde{q} \tilde{r} \tilde{e} \tilde{u} p^t$ , where the third letter might be either n or u. Over both re and u are the circumflex-shaped marks of abbreviation, and at the upper right-hand side of the p the mark which frequently indicates the omission of the letters ost, otest, or otuit. The reading might be, “quoad rem, ut potuit,” which would make sense. But there is no authority for it, and quia non potest, in the last line of the present document, is certainly indicated by three, out of the four, precisely similar abbreviations.

disponendi de illis liberam optineant facultatem. Inferiora etiam ministeria, utpote Archidiaconatus, Decanatus, et alia quæ habent animarum curam adnexam, nullus omnino suscipiat, sed nec parochialium regimen ecclesiarum, nisi qui xxv<sup>tum</sup> annum attigerit, et scientia et moribus commendabilis existat. [4] Cum autem assumptus fuerit, si Archidiaconus in diaconem [sic], decanus et reliqui ammoniti non fuerint præfixo a canonibus tempore in presbiteros ordinati, et ab illo removeantur officio, et alii offeratur qui velit et possit convenienter illud implere. Nec prosit eis appellationis diffugium, si forte in transgressionem constitutionis ipsius per appellationem voluerit se tueri. Hæc sane non solum de promovendis, sed de illis qui jam sunt promoti, si canones non obsistant, præcipimus observanda. Clerici sane, si contra formam istam quemque [sic] elegerint, et eligendi tunc potestate privatos, et a beneficiis ecclesiasticis se noverint esse triennio suspensos. Dignum enim est ut quos timor Dei a malo non revocat, ecclesiasticæ saltem coerceat severitas disciplinæ. Episcopus, si aut fecerit contra hoc, aut consenserit fieri, in conferendis prædictis officiis, potestatem suam amittat, et aut per Capitulum, aut etiam per Metropolitanum, si per Capitulum ordinari nequierint, ordinentur.<sup>1</sup>

nitatem voluerint se conferre. In his autem, quibus,<sup>1</sup> tam de majorum conscientia vel consilio, quam de minore discretione quorundam, exceditur, et removenda ea in quibus excedunt, et quæ dubitationem faciunt decrevimus declaranda. Ecclesias sane de manu laicorum, et decimas, tam illos quam etiam quosque Religiosos, sine consensu episcoporum recipere prohibemus, dimissis etiam illis quas contra tenorem istum moderno tempore receperunt, excommunicatos et nominatim interdictos, tam ab illis quam ab aliis omnibus, juxta episcoporum sententiam, statuimus evitandos. In ecclesiis suis, quæ [5] ad eos pleno jure non pertinent, constituendos presbiteros episcopis repræsentent, ut eis quidem de plebis cura respondeant, ipsis vero pro rebus temporalibus rationem competentem ex[h]ibeant. Institutos autem inconsulti episcopi non audeant remove. Si vero Templarii aut Hospitalarii ad ecclesiam interdictam veniant, non nisi semel in anno ad officium ecclesiasticum admittantur, nec ulla ibi sepeliant defunctorum corpora. De Fraternitatibus autem hæc constituimus:—ut si non se prædictis fratribus omnino reddiderint, sed in proprietatibus suis duxerint remanendum, propter hoc episcoporum a sententia nullatenus eximantur, sed potestatem suam in eos sicut in parrochianos suos exerceant cum, pro excessibus suis, fuerint corrigendi. Quod autem de prædictis fratribus dictum est, ab aliis quoque Religiosis, qui præsumptione sua episcoporum jura præripiunt, et contra canonicas eorum sententias et tenorem privilegiorum nostrorum venire præsumant, præcipimus observari. Si autem contra institutum hoc venerint, et ecclesiæ in quibus ista præsumperint subiaceant interdicto, et quod egerint irritum et vacuum habeatur.

6. XIV. Quod a prædecessore nostro felicis memoriæ, Innocentio, factum est innovantes, ordinationes ab Octaviano et Widone, heresiarchis, nec non Johanne Stramensi, qui eos secutus est, factas, et abordinatas ab eis,<sup>1</sup> irritas esse censemus, adjicientes etiam ut qui dignitates ecclesiasticas vel beneficia per prædictos Scismaticos acceperunt careant [sic]. Impetratæ abhominations quoque, sive invasiones tot per eosdem scismaticos factæ de rebus ecclesiasticis, omni careant firmitate, et ad Ecclesiam sine omni honore revertantur. Si quis autem contraire præsumpserit excommunicationi se noverit subjacere.

7. xv. Nulla ecclesiastica beneficia, seu etiam ministeria, vel ecclesiæ alicui attribuantur seu permittantur antequam vacent, ne desiderare quis mortem proximi ejus<sup>2</sup> videatur, in cujus locum et beneficium se crediderit successurum, cum hoc etiam ipsorum gentilium legibus inveniatur inhibutum. Turpe nimis est, et Divini plenum animadversione judicii, si locum in Ecclesia Dei futuræ successionis expectatione habeamus quem ipsi etiam gentiles condemnare dicuntur. Cum autem prædictas ecclesias, seu quælibet officia ecclesiastica, vacare contigerit, vel si etiam modo vacant, non diu maneant in suspenso, sed infra sex menses personis qui digni ministrare valeant conferantur. Si autem episcopus, ubi ad eum [6] spectat, sine rationabili causa conferre distulerit, per Capitulum ordinetur. Quod si ad Capitulum ordinatio<sup>3</sup> pertinuerit, et infra præscriptum terminum similiter hoc non fecerit, episcopus secundum Dominum, in Religiosorum virorum consilio, hoc exequatur. Aut, si omnes neglexerint, Metropolitanus de ipsis, secundum Dominum, absque contradictione disponat. Præterea, si episcopus, sine certo titulo de quo possit necessaria vitæ percipere, in diaconum, vel in presbiterum ordinaverit, tamdiu ei necessaria vitæ subministret donec ei aliqua eidem ecclesiæ convenientia stipendia clericalis militiæ assignet, nisi forte talis fuerit qui ordinatus extiterit quod de sua, vel de paterna hæreditate, vel alia honesta causa, subsidium vitæ possit habere.

8. [xvi.] Clerici in subdiaconatum, et supra, et in minoribus quoque ordinibus constituti, coram sæculari judice advocati in negotiis sæcularibus fieri non præsumant, nisi propriam vel ecclesiæ suæ causam fuerint persecuti, et nisi forte pro miserabilibus personis, quæ proprias causas administrare non possint. Sed nec procuraciones villarum aut jurisdictiones etiam sæculares sub aliquibus principibus et sæcularibus viris, ut justiciarii eorum fiant, clericorum quisquam exercere præsumat. Si quis autem adversus hoc venire temptaverit, ac contra doctrinam Apostoli dicentis—

9. XVII. Monachi non pretio recipiantur in monasteria, non peculium permittantur habere: non singuli per villas et op[p]ida seu [in] quascunque parrochiales ponantur ecclesias, sed in majori conventu cum aliquibus fratribus maneant, nec soli inter homines sæculares spiritualium hostium conflictum expectent—Salomone dicente “Ut soli, quia si ceciderit etc.” Si quis autem exactus pro sua redemptione aliquid dederit, ad sacros ordines non ascendat. Is autem, qui eum receperit, officii sui privatione mul-tetur. Qui vero peculium habuerit, nisi ab Abbate fuerit ei pro injuncta administratione commissum, a communione removeatur altaris; et qui in extremis cum peculio inventus fuerit, et digne non poenituerit, non oblatio pro eo fiat, nec inter fratres recipiat sepulturam; quod etiam de diversis Religiosis præcipimus observari. Abbas autem, qui diligenter ista non curaverit, officii sui foris-facturam se noverit incursum. Prioratus quoque seu obedientiæ,<sup>1</sup> pretii datione, nulli<sup>2</sup> tribuantur; alioquin et dantes et recipientes a ministerio Ecclesiæ fiant alieni. Priores autem, cum in conventualibus ecclesiis fuerint constituti, nisi pro manifesta et rationabili causa non mittentur—videl., si dilapidationes fuerint, si in Conventu vixerint, aut tale aliquid egerint, aut si de communi consilio fratrum pro majoris necessitate officii fuerint transferendi.

10. XVIII. [7] Cum in eodem corpore omnia debent ex caritate tractari, et quod gratis receptum est gratis impendi, horribile nimis est quod in quibusdam ecclesiis venalitas per[h]ibetur locum habere ita ut pro episcopis, vel abbatibus, seu quibuscunque personis ecclesiasticis ponendis in sede, seu introducendis presbiteris in ecclesiam, necnon pro sepulturis et exequiis mortuorum, et benedictionibus nubentium, seu aliis sacramentis ecclesiasticis, aliquid requiratur, et non possit ista percipere ille qui indiget nisi manum implere curaverit largitoris. Putant autem ex his plures sibi licere quia legem mortis de longa invaluisse consuetudine arbitrentur, non satis, quia cupiditate cæcati<sup>3</sup> sunt, attendentes quod tanto graviora sunt crimina quanto diutius infelicem animam tenuerint alligatam. Ne igitur hoc de cætero fiat, nec<sup>4</sup> vel personis ecclesiasticis deducendis ad sedem, vel sacerdotibus instituendis, vel sepeliendis mortuis, seu etiam benedicendis nubentibus, seu aliis

sacramentis ecclesiasticis, aliquid exigatur, inhibemus. Si quis autem contravenire præsumpserit, portionem cum Giezi se noverit habiturum, cujus factum exactione muneris imitatur. Prohibemus insuper ne ab episcopis vel abbatibus, aliisve prælatis novi census imponantur ecclesiis, nec veteres augeantur, nec partem reddituum suis usibus appropriare præsument; sed libertatem quam majores sibi servari desiderant minoribus<sup>1</sup> suis bona voluntate conservent. Si quis autem aliter egerit, irritum quod fecerit habeatur.

11. XIX. [7<sup>b</sup>] Quoniam Ecclesia Dei in his quæ spectant ad subsidium corporis, et in hiis quæ ad profectum proveniunt animarum, indigentibus sicut pia mater providere teneatur, ne pauperibus, qui parentum opibus juvari non possunt, legendi et proficiendi desit opportunitas, per unamquamque Cathedralē Ecclesiam magistro, qui clericos ejusdem ecclesiæ et pauperes scholares gratis doceat, competens aliquid beneficium præbeatur, quo docentis necessitas sublevetur, et discentibus via pateat ad doctrinam. In aliis quoque instituatur ecclesiis, si retroactis temporibus aliquid in eis ad hoc fuerit deputatum. Pro licentia docendi nullus omnino pretium exigat, vel sub obtentu alicujus consuetudinis ab his qui docent aliquid quærat: nec docere quenquam ex petita licentia, qui sit idoneus, interdicat. Qui vero contra hoc venire præsumpserit, a beneficio ecclesiastico fiat alienus. Dignum quidem esse videtur ut in Ecclesia Dei laboris sui non habeat pretium, qui cupiditati animi dum vendit licentiam dandi, ecclesiasticum profectum nititur impedire.

12. XX. Presbiter sive Clericus qui ecclesiam per laicos sine auctoritate Episcopi receperit, et communione privetur, et, si perstiterit, a ministerio ecclesiæ et ordine deponatur.<sup>2</sup> Sane quia laici quidam ecclesiasticas personas, et ipsos etiam episcopos, judicio suo stare compellunt, eos qui de cætero id præsumpserint a communione fidelium decernimus segregandos. Prohibemus insuper ne laici, cum animarum suarum periculo decimas detinentes, in alios laicos possint aliquo modo transferre. Si quis [8] vero receperit et ecclesiæ non reddiderit, Christiana sepultura privetur. Præterea, quod in tantum laicorum quorundam processit audacia ut, Episcoporum auctoritate spreta, clericos constituent in ecclesiis, et removeant, et, cum voluerint, possessiones quoque ecclesiasticas, atque alia ecclesiastica bona, pro sua voluntate plerumque distribuunt, et tam ecclesias illas quam sacerdotes taillii et exactionibus gravare præsument—eos qui a modo ista commiserint anathemate duximus feriendos.

cum ab ecclesiis suis quidam multa beneficia perceperint, bona per ecclesiam acquisita in alios usus transferre præsumunt : hoc, igitur, quod antiquis constat inhibatum canonibus, nichilominus inhibemus, et, indampnitatem ecclesiarum providere volentes, sive intestati decesserint, sive aliis ecclesiis conferre voluerint, penes easdem ecclesias præcipimus remanere.<sup>1</sup> Præterea, quum in quibusdam partibus sub pretio [sic] statuuntur qui decani vocantur, et præterea pecuniæ quantitate episcopalem jurisdictionem exercent, præsentī decreto statuimus ut, qui de cætero id præsumpserit, officii sui dispendium patiatur, et Episcopus conferendi hoc officium potestatem amittat : ille autem officio suo privetur.

15. XXIII. Treugas a vespertina feria post occasum solis usque ad secundam feriam ante ortum solis, et ab adventu Domini usque ad octavas Epiphaniæ, et a Septuagesima usque ad octavas Paschæ, ab omnibus inviolabiliter observari præcipimus. Si quis autem treugam frangere temptaverit, post tertiam commonitionem, si non satisfecerit, Episcopus suus excommunicationis sententiam in eum dictet, et scriptam Episcopis vicinis annunciet. Episcopus autem nullus excommunicatum in communionem suscipiat : immo scriptam sententiam quisque confirmet. Si quis hoc violare præsumpserit, ordinis sui periculo subiaceat, et quum funiculus triplex difficile rumpitur, præcipimus ut Episcopi, ad solum Deum et salutem populi habentes respectum, omni tepiditate sopita, ad pacem firmiter tenendam mutuum sibi auxilium præbeant. Ne quis alicujus amore vel odio prætermittat. Quod si quis in hoc opere tepidus inventus fuerit dampnum propriæ dignitatis incurret.

notitiam non habuit. Ille quidem, omnibus aliis servituti subactis, sacerdotes suos in pristina libertate dimisit, et de publico eis alimoniam ministravit. Isti vero universa fere onera<sup>1</sup> imponunt ecclesiis, et tot angariis eas affligunt, ut illud eis quod Jeremias deplorat competere videatur—Princeps provinciarum factus est sub tributo. Sive quidem fossata, seu expeditiones, sive alia quælibet arbitrentur agenda, bona ecclesiarum seu clericorum ita evacuant ut nihil penitus potestatis in suis hominibus videatur eis remansisse; super quo dolendum est pro ecclesiis. Dolendum est nichilominus pro ipsis qui timorem Dei ad ecclesiastici ordinis reverentiam videntur penitus objecisse. Quocirca, sub anathematis districtione severius prohibemus ne tale de cætero attemptare præsumat, nisi Episcopus vel clericus tantam necessitatem inspexerit, ut absque coactore ad reservandas communes necessitates, ubi laicorum non suppetunt facultates, subsidia per ecclesias existiment conferenda. Si autem consules aut alii de cætero ista commiserint, et commoniti desistere forte noluerint, tam ipsi quam fautores eorum excommunicationi se noverint subjacere, nec fidelium communioni reddantur nisi satisfactionem fecerint competentem.

17. XXV. Cum in cunctis ecclesiis, quod pluribus et sanioribus fratribus visum fuerit incunctanter debet observari, grave nimis est, et reprehensione dignissimum, quod per quasdam ecclesias pauci, quanquam non tam de ratione quam de propria voluntate, ordinationem multorum et prudentium impediunt, et ordinationem ecclesiasticam procedere non permittunt:—quocirca presenti decreto statuimus, nisi a paucioribus et inferioribus rationabile aliquid objectum fuerit et ostensum, appellatione remota, prævaleat semper, et suum sequatur effectum, quod a majoris et sanioris parte consilii fuerit constitutum. Nec constitutionem nostram impediat, si forte aliquis ad conservandam ecclesiæ suæ consuetudinem se juramento dicat astrictum: non enim dicenda sunt juramenta, set perjuria potius, quæ contra auctoritatem ecclesiasticam et sanctorum fratrum veniunt instituta. Si quis vero hujusmodi consuetudines, quæ nec ratione juvantur nec sacris congruunt institutis, curare præsumpserit,<sup>2</sup> donec condignam egerit poenitentiam, a perceptione Corporis et Sanguinis Dominici alienus existat.

18. XXVI. Quoniam, in quibusdam locis, fundatores ecclesiarum, aut hæredes eorundem,<sup>3</sup> potestate in qua eos Ecclesia diu sustinuit abutuntur, et cum in Ecclesia Dei unus debeat esse qui præsit ipsi, plures sine respectu subjectionis eligere moliuntur, et cum una ecclesia unius debeat esse rectoris, pro sua defensione, plurimos eligunt et repræsentant. Quocirca, præsentī decreto statuimus ut, si forte in plures partes fundatorum vota se dividerint, ille præficiatur ecclesiæ qui majoribus juvatur meritis, et populi

20. XXVIII. Cum Apostolus se et suos manibus propriis decreverit exhibendos, ut locum prædicandi auferret pseudo-apostolis, et aliis quibus prædicabat non existeret onerosus,<sup>3</sup> prave<sup>4</sup> nimis et emendatione esse dignum dinoscitur, quod quidam Fratrum nostrorum Co-episcoporum ita graves in procuracione subditis suis existunt, ut, pro hujusmodi causa interdum ornamenta<sup>5</sup> [10<sup>b</sup>] ecclesiastica subditos exponere compellant, ut longi temporis vicium brevis hora consumat. Quocirca, præsentì decreto statuimus quod Archiepiscopi per parrochias visitandas, pro diversitate provinciarum, xl vel l evectionis [sic] habeant numerum; Episcopi vero xx aut xxx; Cardinales vero xx aut xxv nequaquam excedant; Archidiaconi v vel vii; Decani vero constituti sub ipsis ii equis contenti existant: nec cum canibus venatori[i]s proficiscantur, aut avibus; set ita procedant ut non quæ sua sunt, set quæ Jhesu Christi videantur quærere. Prohibemus etiam ne subditos suos taillis vel exactionibus Episcopi gravare præsumant. Statuimus etiam pro multis necessitatibus quæ aliquotiens superveniunt, ut si manifesta et rationabilis causa existat, in caritate moderatum valeant ab ipsis auxilium postulare. Cum tamen dicat Apostolus non debent<sup>6</sup> filii congregare parentibus, set parentes filiis, multum longe etiam a paterna pietate videtur si Præpositi subjectis suis graves existant, quos in cunctis necessitatibus posteris more parentum debent fovere.<sup>7</sup> Archidiaconi vero, sive Decani, nullas exactiones sive taillias in presbiteros seu clericos exercere præsumant. 21. XXIX. Quia nonnulli modum avaritiæ non ponentes, et diversas dignitates ecclesiasticas et plures parrochiales ecclesias, contra canonem sanctorum<sup>3</sup> institutum, nituntur acquirere, ita ut commune<sup>4</sup> officium vix suppleant, stipendia plurimorum sibi vendicent<sup>5</sup>—ne id de cætero fiat districtius inhibemus. Quod si aliter actum fuerit, et qui receperit, quæ contra sacros ordines susceperit, amittat, et qui dediderit, largiendi potestate privetur; et quia in tantum jam processerit quorundam ambitio ut non duas vel tres, set etiam sex, et plures ecclesias quidam perhibeantur habere, cum nec duabus possint debitam provisionem<sup>6</sup> impendere, per fratres et co-episcopos nostros hoc emendari præcipimus, et de multitudine canonibus inimica, quæ dissolutionis<sup>7</sup> materiam et vagationis inducit, et certum periculum animarum continet, . . . et eis assignari qui ecclesiis deservire valeant.

<sup>8</sup> This passage is hopelessly corrupt. The fuerint before laborare presupposes a si; but laborare is manifestly miswritten. Assuming the meaning to be "if they be caught or detected," one might suppose aberrare to be the word intended; though the suggestion is no better than a guess.

26. XXXIV. De Brabantionibus et Arragonensibus, Navaris, Dascul[is], et Coterellis, qui tantum in Christianos immanitatem exercent, ut nec ecclesiis nec monasteriis deferant [sic], nec viduis et pupillis, non pueris et senibus, nec cuilibet parcant ætati aut sexui, set more paganorum omnia perdant et vastent similiter, constituimus ut ipsi qui eos conduxerint, vel tenuerint, vel foverint, per regiones in quibus taliter debac [ch]antur, in dominicis et aliis diebus sollempnibus in ecclesiis excommunicati publice mentionentur, et eadem omnino sententia et poena cum prædictis hæreticis habeantur astricti; nec ad communionem recipiantur Ecclesiæ, nisi societate illa pestifera et hæresi abjuratis. Relaxatos autem se noverint a debito fidelitatis seu homagii,<sup>1</sup> aut totius obsequii, donec in tanta iniquitate permanserint, quicunque illis aliquo facto tenentur annexi. Ipsis autem, cunctisque fidelibus in remissionem injungimus peccatorum, ut tantis cladibus viriliter se opponant, et contra eos armis tueantur populum Christianum. Confiscentur quoque bona eorum, [13] et liberum sit principibus hujusmodi pestilentes homines subjicere sevituti. Qui autem in vera pœnitentia ibi decesserint, et peccatorum indulgentiam et fructum mercedis æternæ se non dubitent habituros. Nos etiam de misericordia Dei, et BB. Petri et Pauli auctoritate confisi, fidelibus Christianis qui contra eos arma susceperint, et ad Episcoporum, sive alorum Prælatorum consilium, ad eos decertaverint expugnandos, biennium de injuncta pœnitentia relaxamus: aut si longiorem ibi moram habuerint, Episcoporum discretionem<sup>2</sup> quibus hujus rei cura fuerit injuncta, committimus, ut ad eorum arbitrium, secundum modum laboris, major eis indulgentia tribuatur. Illos autem qui admonitioni Episcoporum in hujusmodi parere contempserint, a perceptione Corporis et Sanguinis Domini jubemus fieri alienos. Interim eos, vero, qui ardore fidei ad expugnandum eos laborem istum assumpserint, sicut eos qui Sepulchrum Domini visitant, sub Ecclesiæ defensione recipimus, et ab universis inquietationibus, tam in rebus quam in personis, statuimus manere securos. Si vero quisquam interim eos molestare præsumpserit, per Episcopum loci excommunicationis sententia feriat, et tamdiu sententia ab omnibus observetur donec ablata reddantur, et de illatis dampnis congrue satisfiat.<sup>3</sup> Episcopi vero, sive presbiteri qui talibus fortiter non restiterint, officii sui suspensione mulcentur, donec misericordiam Apostolicæ Sedis optineant.

diaconi, appellaturos quosdam in causis suis existimant, nulla penitus admonitione præmissa, suspensionis seu excommunicationis in eos sententiam feriunt. Alii etiam [cum] de superioris sententia et disciplina canonica reformidant, sine ullo gravamine appellationem objiciunt, et in defensionem iniquitatis usurpant quod ad præsidium innocentiae dinoscitur institutum. Quocirca, ne [i]idem Prælati sine causa valeant gravare subditos, vel subditi, pro sola voluntate, sub appellationis obtentu valeant correctionem eludere Prælatorum, præsentī decreto statuimus ut non Prælati, nisi canonica admonitione præmissa, suspensionis vel excommunicationis sententiam proferant in subjectos, nisi talis fuerit culpa quæ ipsis, genere suo, suspensionis vel excommunicationis inducat: nec subjecti contra disciplinam ecclesiasticam, ante ingressum causæ, in vocem appellationis perrumpant. Si vero quisquam pro sua necessitate crediderit appellandum, competens ei ad proseguendam terminus præfigatur, infra quem appellationem prosecui. Si forte neglexerit, libere tunc Episcopus auctoritate feriat. Si autem in quocunque negotio aliquis appellaverit, et eo qui appellatus fuerit veniente, qui appellaverit, si venire neglexerit, si proprium quid habuerit, competentem ei recompensationem faciat expensarum, ut hoc<sup>1</sup> saltem timore perterritus in gravamen alterius facile quis non appellet. Præcipue vero in locis religiosis hoc præcipimus observari, ne monachi sive quicunque religiosi, cum pro aliquo excessu fuerint corrigendi coram regulari Prælato,<sup>2</sup> et Capituli sui disciplina, appellare præsumant, set humiliter ac devote suscipiant quod pro salute sua fuerit eis injunctum.

28. XXXVI. [14] Ita quorundam animos occupavit sæva cupiditas, ut, qui gloriantur nomine Christiano, Sarracenis arma, ferrum, et lignamina deferant galearum, et pares aut etiam superiores in malitia fiant illis, dum ad impugnandos Christianos arma eis et necessaria subministrant. Set etiam [sunt] qui, pro sua cupiditate decepti, in galeis et piraticis Sarracenorum navibus regimen et curam gubernationis exerceant. Tales igitur ab Ecclesiæ communione præcisos,<sup>3</sup> et excommunicationi pro sua iniquitate subjectos, et rerum suarum per principes sæculi catholicos, et consules civitatum, privatione militari [feriendos],<sup>4</sup> et capiendos<sup>5</sup> [in] servos, si capti fuerint, fore censemus. Præcipimus autem ut ab his, qui ecclesias maritimarum urbium possident, crebra et sollempnis in eos fiat excommunicatio. Excommunicationis quoque pœnæ subdantur qui Romanos aut alios Christianos, pro negotiatione aut vel aliis honestis causis navigio vectos, aut capere, aut rebus suis spol-

29. XXXVII. Quia in omnibus fere locis ita crimen usurarum invaluit, ut, multis negotiis aliis prætermisissis, quasi licite usuras exercere valeant, et qualiter utriusque testamenti pagina condemnentur, nequaquam attendunt,—constituimus ut usurarii manifesti nec ad communionem admittantur altaris, nec Christianam. Si in hoc peccato decesserint, habeant sepulturam; set nec oblationem eorum quisquam recipiat, aut Christianæ tradiderit sepulturæ; et ea quæ receperit [14<sup>b</sup>] reddere compellatur; et donec, ad arbitrium sui Episcopi, satisfecerit, ab officii sui maneat executione suspensus.

76. [Placita de juratis et assisis. 44 Henr. III. [12<sup>59</sup>/<sub>80</sub>], Rot. i.] Assisa venit recognitura si Petrus de Roos injuste . . . disseisiverat Abbatem de Ryvalle de communa pasturæ suæ in Bolum quæ pertinet ad liberum tenementum suum in Skipnum, post primam . . . et unde queritur quod disseisivit eum de communa pasturæ ad trescentas oves in quadam mora quæ continet circiter trescentas acras, in qua communicare solebat per totum annum. Et Petrus non venit. Et fuit attachiatus per Alanum, Præpositum de Bothelum, et Rogerum, Præpositum de Pockeley. Ideo ipse in mīa. Et capiatur assisa versus eum per defaultam. Jurati dicunt quod prædictus Petrus disseisivit prædictum Abbatem de prædicta communa pasturæ suæ in prædicta mora in qua idem Abbas habere solebat pasturam ad trescentas oves, cum agnis suis quousque fuissent separati, injuste etc. Et inde consideratum est quod prædictus Abbas recuperet seisinam suam per visum recognitionis. Et Petrus in mīa.

78. [Assise Rolls, Ebor. N. 1, 16-2, f. 13<sup>b</sup>. Trinity Term. 1 Edw. I. [127<sup>2</sup>/<sub>3</sub>].] Abbas de Rievalle summonitus fuit ad respondendum Domino Regi de placito Quo warranto clamavit habere liberam warennam in omnibus dominicis terris suis de Crosseby, Raythesdale, Newetona, Heskayth, Welleburna, Broghthona, Mortona et Skypuna [Skiplum], et esse quietus de omnibus finibus et amerciamētis Comitatus et sectis Comitatus et Wapentachiæ, pro se et hominibus suis, in villis prædictis, et Gryf et Tillestona, Byldesdale, Cotona, Hauetona [Houetone], Stayntona, Sproxtona, Hundemandby, Rygtona, Boltona, Ravenesthorpe, Thrilleby, Bodeltona, Heselartona, Westerdale, Scaltona, Kyrkeby, Beverlay, Grenehov, Ebor., Herleshey, Welleberge et Pykeringe, quæ ad coronam et dignitatem Regis pertinent, etc. Et Abbas venit, et quo ad warrnam, etc., dicit quod ipse clamat habere liberam warennam in omnibus dominicis terris suis in prædictis villis, etc., per cartam Domini Henrici Regis, patris Domini Regis nunc, quam profert, et quæ testatur quod idem Dominus Henricus Rex concessit cuidam prædecessori istius Abbatis, etc., quod ipse et successores sui habeant liberam warennam in omnibus dominicis terris suis de Crosseby, Raythesdale, Neutona, Heskayth, Welleburna, Broghtona, Mortona et Skypuna in Comitatu isto, dum tamen etc. Clamat etiam omnes alias libertates in brevi contentas per cartam Domini Regis Ricardi, consanguinei Domini Regis nunc, datam anno regni sui primo, et per cartam de confirmatione Domini Regis Henrici, patris Domini Regis nunc, datam A° regni sui quinquagesimo quarto, quæ testantur . . . Cætera desunt.

79. [Placita Ebor. 7 Edw. I. [127 $\frac{8}{9}$ ], No. 1, 4-2, f. 30.] Willelmus de Wyvyll petit versus Abbatem de Ryvalle duo mesuagia et quadraginta bovatas terræ . . . in Thornton [in] Pykeringlithe, ut jus suum per breve de recto patens etc. Et unde dicit quod quidam Willelmus, antecessor suus, tempore pacis tempore Henrici secundi, proavi Domini Regis nunc, fecit seysinam de prædictis tenementis ut de feodo et jure, capiendo inde explecias ad valenciam etc. Et de ipso Willelmo descendit jus cuidam Ricardo, ut filio et hæredi: et de ipso Ricardo descendit jus quibusdam Amfelisiæ et Eustachiaæ, ut filiabus et hæredibus: et de ipsa Amfelisia, quia obiit sine hærede de se, descendit jus purpartis suæ prædictæ Eustachiaæ, ut sorori et hæredi: et de ipsa Eustachia descendit jus cuidam Nicholao, ut filio et hæredi: et de ipso Nicholao, quia obiit sine hærede de se, descendit jus etc. cuidam Ricardo, ut fratri et hæredi: et de ipso Ricardo, quia obiit sine hærede de se, descendit jus etc. cuidam Thomæ, ut fratri et hæredi: et de ipso Thoma, quia obiit sine hærede de se, descendit jus cuidam Willelmo qui nunc petit, ut fratri et hæredi: et quod tale sit jus suum offert etc. Et Abbas venit et defendit jus suum quando etc. etc.: et dicit quod non potest inde sine Domino Rege respondere: Dicit enim quod Dominus Rex Henricus, proavus Domini Regis nunc, dedit et carta sua confirmavit Deo et S. Mariæ et Ecclesiæ de Ryvalle . . . totum vastum suum et totam pasturam suam subtus Pykeringlithe, cum omnibus suis pertinenciis, de quibus vasto et pastura prædicta tenementa sunt quæ prædictus Willelmus petit versus eum: et profert cartam Henrici Regis quæ hoc idem testatur, et quæ specificat quæ tenementa idem Henricus Rex per certas metas et divisas subscriptas dedit . . . prædictis Monachis, etc.—scil., quicquid est inter Alvestanbek et Thacrivelinge in longitudine, præter pratum de Edmermerche, per has, scil., divisas:—a loco ubi Alvesteynbek cadit in Derwentam, etc. [as in former documents, with immaterial differences of spelling, often erroneous], et inde sicut Alvestanybek descendit in Derwentam:—Unde dicit quod non potest inde sine Domino

Rege respondere etc. Et Willelmus dicit quod prædictus Abbas auxilium Domini Regis non debet habere, quia dicit quod prædictus Willelmus, antecessor suus, de cujus seysina ipse placitavit prædicta tenementa, fuit deseysitus post confectionem prædictæ cartæ: et hoc paratus verificare prout Curia Domini Regis consideraverit bene; petit iudicium si prædictus Abbas auxilium a Domino Rege habere debeat, cum ipse sit paratus verificare seysinam prædicti Willelmi, antecessoris sui, de prædictis tenementis, ut de feodo et jure, post confectionem prædictæ cartæ etc.: Dicit etiam aliis rationibus quod prædictus Abbas auxilium de Domino Rege habere non debet per prædictam cartam, cum ipse sic paratus sit verificare etc., quod, tempore confectionis ejusdem cartæ, et semper postea prædicta terra, quam ipse nunc petit, fuit arabilis, et in eadem carta continetur quod Dominus Henricus Rex dedit Ecclesiæ de Ryvalle et prædictis monachis totum vastum suum et totam pasturam suam subtus Pykeringe, et sic in illa carta nulla terra arrabilis continetur: Unde petit iudicium etc.

Postea mandavit Dominus Rex quod Recordum et loquelæ istius et processus sibi mi[t]teretur, per breve suum in hæc verba, etc. Edwardus, D. G. Rex Angliæ . . . dilectis et fidelibus suis, Johanni de Vallibus et sociis suis, Justiciariis Itinerantibus apud Ebor., salutem. Cum Willelmus de Wyvill implacitet Abbatem de Rivalle coram nobis, per breve nostrum de recto, de duobus mesuagiis et quadraginta bovatis terræ cum pertinenciis in Thorentona in Pykeringlithe, et idem Abbas excipiendo coram vobis pluries proposuit quod eidem Willelmo ad narrationem suam seu ad breve nostrum prædictum non debet, nec potest, sine nobis respondere, nos ex causa illa super recordo et processu loquelæ illius plenius certiorari volentes, vobis mandamus quod recordum et processum loquelæ ejusdem, cum brevibus et omnibus aliis adjunctis loquelam illam tangentibus, nobis mittatis, et hoc breve, ita quod ea habeamus a die S. Martini in xv dies ubicunque tunc fuerimus in Anglia: Et scire faciatis partibus ex parte nostra quod tunc sint coram nobis facturæ et recepturæ quod de consilio nostro inde duxerimus ordinandum. Dies datus est eis a die S. Michaelis in unum mensem hic. Et interim loquendum cum Rege etc.<sup>1</sup>

80. [Abbreviatio Placitorum, p. 49.] Ebor. Willelmus de Wyville petit versus Abbatem de Rivallis duo mesuagia et xl bovatas terræ, cum pertinenciis, in Thorneton in Pykeringa. Abbas dicit quod Henricus Rex, proavus etc., dedit ei per cartam quam profert etc., et continet terras infra quandam perambulationem in eadem recitatam per metas et bundas, infra quas dictæ terræ continentur. Ideo dictus Abbas sine die.

de Vallibus et Alicia, uxor ejus, petunt versus Abbatem de Rivalle tertiam partem xl acrarum terræ et x acrarum prati . . . in Folketona, ut dotem ipsius Aliciæ, de dotatione Ranulfi de Folketona, quondam viri prædictæ Aliciæ. Et Abbas, per attornatum suum, venit et inde vocat ad warantiam Ricardum de Lascy, Julianam uxorem ejus, Rogerum le Pescur et Aliciam, uxorem ejus. Et prædicti Ricardus et Juliana modo veniunt et sponte warantizant prædicto Abbati tenementum prædictum et dicunt quod prædicta Alicia non debet inde dotem habere, quod dicunt quod prædictus Ranulfus, die quo ipsam desponsavit, nec unquam postea, tenuit prædictum tenementum in feodo, ita quod potuit ipsam dotare, et de hoc ponit se super patriam, et prædicti Willelmus et Alicia similiter. Ideo fiat jurata. Jurati dicunt super sacramentum suum quod prædictus Ranulfus, die quo prædictam Aliciam desponsavit, fuit in seisina de prædictis xl acris terræ, ut de feodo, ita quod ipsam inde dotare potuit; quoad prædictum pratum dicunt quod idem Ranulfus, die quo ipsam desponsavit, nec unquam postea, fuit in seisina. Ideo consideratum est quod prædicti Willelmus et Alicia reciperent seisinam suam de tertia parte xl acrarum terræ, et, quoad pratum, Willelmus et Alicia in mīa, et Abbas teneat in pace etc.

82. [Placita Ebor. N. 1. 7-2. 8 and 9 Edw. I. 127 $\frac{9}{11}$ , f. 16<sup>b</sup>.] Willelmus, Abbas de Rivalle, summonitus fuit ad respondendum Willelmo, Priori de Kirkeham, de placito quod permittat ipsum habere communam pasturæ in Bildesdala quæ pertinet ad liberum tenementum suum in eadem villa, de qua Adam, quondam Abbas de Rivalle, prædecessor prædicti Abbatis, injuste etc., disseisiaverat Ricardum, quondam Priorem de Kirkeham, prædecessorem prædicti Prioris, post primam etc.: Et unde dicit quod cum habere debeat communam in duabus acris pasturæ communiandi in eisdem, cum omnimodis averiis suis, per totum annum, et unde prædictus Ricardus, prædecessor suis, fuit seysitus, ut de feodo et jure Ecclesiæ suæ S. Trinitatis de Kirkeham, tempore pacis tempore Henrici Regis, patris Domini Regis nunc, capiendo inde explecias ad valenciam etc. Et de qua prædictus Adam, quondam Abbas de Rivalle, prædecessor prædicti Abbatis, injuste etc. disseisivit prædictum Ricardum, quondam Priorem de Kirkeham, prædecessorem suum, post primam etc. Et inde producit sectam etc. Et Abbas venit et defendit jus suum, quando etc. Et bene defendit quod prædictus Adam, quondam Abbas de Rivalle, prædecessor suus, inde disseisivit prædictum Ricardum, quondam Priorem de Kirkeham, prædecessorem prædicti Prioris, de prædicta communa. Et de hoc ponit se super patriam. Et Prior similiter. Ideo fiat inde jurata, etc.

83. [Placita Ebor. N. 1. 7-2. 8 and 9 Edw. I. [12<sup>79</sup>/<sub>81</sub>], f. 20.] Assisa venit recognitura si Willelmus, Prior de Kirkeham, Frater Johannes de Wlveley, Willelmus Spung, Thomas le Forester, injuste etc. Abbatem de Rivalle de communa pasturæ in Byldesdale, quæ pertinet ad liberum tenementum suum in eadem villa, etc. et unde queritur quod disseisiverunt eum de communa pasturæ suæ in una placea terræ quæ continet circiter duas acras quibus communicare<sup>1</sup> solebat cum omnimodis averiis suis per totum annum, etc. Et nullus eorum venit præter Johannem de Everley,<sup>1</sup> qui venit et respondet pro se et omnibus aliis. Et dicit quod assisa [? non] debet inde fieri, quia dicit quod prædictus Prior est capitalis Dominus de villa de Bildesdale, et quod ipse appropriavit de prædicta placea, sicut ei bene licuit per provisionem de Mertona etc. Et Abbas dicit quod prædicta provisio non jacet inter eos, quia dicit quod non fuit seissitus de prædicta communa quadraginta annis antequam prædictus Prior dominium ejusdem villæ perquisierat; et quod prædictus Prior perquisivit prædictum dominium de quodam Simone de Ver, jam quinque annis elapsis [blank] Dicit etiam quod ipse tenet in liberam elemosinam, et quod ipse non [est] tenens prædicti Prioris de prædicta elemosina.

mium et buscam ad prædictam grangiam ipsius Abbatis de Byldesdale, die Martis proximum post festum S. Hyllarii, A° Domino Regis nunc septimo, misisset, et iidem homines ejusdem Abbatis duos carros ejusdem de mæremio et busco eodem die carcassent, et eos ad grangiam prædictam duxisse voluissent, præfati Prior et alii in ipsos homines infra terram ipsius Abbatis apud Huehyrst in Byldesdale, vi et armis—scil. gladiis, arcubus, et sagittis, insultum fecerunt, et boves et carros prædictos carcatos ceperunt, et eos usque ad manerium prædicti Prioris in Byldesdale duxerunt, et per decem septimanas ibidem detinuerunt, et cum bobus illis terram ipsius Prioris excoli fecerunt, unde prædicti boves deteri[o]rati fuerunt, et præfatos homines ipsius Abbatis verberaverunt et wlnaverunt, contra pacem etc. :—unde dicit quod deterioratus est et dampnum habet ad valenciam viginti librarum. Et inde producit sectam etc. Et prædicti Prior et omnes alii, per at[t]ornatos suos, veniunt et defendunt vim et injuriam, quando etc. Et prædicti frater Johannes de Alveley, Willelmus Aykesheved, Rogerus ad Pontem, Simon Stot, Simon filius Aliciæ, Walterus At-ye-bek, Nicholaus le Cuper, et Willelmus Blake de Bradefelde, bene defendunt quod ipsi nunquam, dictis die et anno, hominibus ipsius Abbatis apud Huehyrst insultum fecerunt, nec boves nec carros prædictos carcatos ceperunt, nec eos usque ad manerium prædicti Prioris in Byldesdale duxerunt, nec per decem septimanas ibidem detinuerunt, nec cum bobus illis terram ipsius Prioris excoli fecerunt, nec aliquam transgressionem fecerunt sicut eis . . . ponit. Ponunt se super patriam. Et Abbas similiter etc. Ideo fiat inde jurata.

Jurati dicunt super sacramentum suum quod prædicti Frater Johannes de Alveley, Willelmus Aykesheved, Rogerus ad Pontem, Simon Stot, Simon filius Aliciæ, Walterus At-ye-bek et Nicholaus le Cuper, et Willelmus Blayke de Bradefelde nullam transgressionem fecerunt prædicto Abbati. Ideo consideratum est quod prædicti Frater Johannes et alii inde sine die. Et prædictus Abbas nichil capit per juratam istam, set sit in mīa pro falso clamio.

ritur quod prædictus Prior et alii detinuerunt prædictos boves ipsius Abbatis per decem septimanas, dicunt quod hoc fuit in defectu<sup>1</sup> ipsius Abbatis, eo quod noluit [prædictos] boves exigere per vadium et plegium, nec securitatem invenire ad transgressionem prædictam emendandum. Et quoad hoc, quod prædictus Abbas queritur quod prædictus Prior et alii excoli fecerunt terram ipsius Prioris cum bobus prædictis, bene defendunt, quod nunquam excoli fecerunt prædictam terram, et de hoc ponunt se super patriam etc. Et Abbas dicit quod prædictus boscos est boscos suos, in quo prædictus Prior nichil habet, tantummodo communam pasturæ in eodem : Et dicit, quia prædicti Prior et alii succiderunt arbores ipsius Abbatis in eodem bosco, misit carros suos ad cariandum<sup>2</sup> prædictum boscum ad grangiam suam prædictam, sicut ei bene licuit, et dicit quod, cum homines sui duxerunt prædictos carros versus grangiam suam prædictam, prædicti Prior et alii, prædicto loco de Huehyrst, qui est dominicum solium ipsius Abbatis, hominibus ipsius Abbatis insultum fecerunt, et prædictos carros ceperunt, et abduxerunt ad manerium prædicti Prioris in Byldesdale, ut prædictum est, petit quod inquiratur per patriam : et Prior similiter. [Ideo] fiat inde jurata etc. [Note at side, Inq'nd. Paschæ.] Juratores dicunt super sacramentum suum quod quia prædictus Abbas misit homines suos ad boscum ipsius Prioris de Byldesdale et arbores ipsius Prioris in eodem succiderunt et mæremium ejusdem bosci cum carris et caretis ab eodem loco usque ad Huehyrst cariaverunt, qui quidem locus est de feodo ipsius Prioris, idem Prior retromisit homines suos [ad] sequendum prædictas caretas cum mæremio honeratas usque prædictum locum de Hueghirst, [caret]tas illas et carros ar[r]estarunt, et illas cum mæremio ad manerium ipsius Prioris in Byldesdale duxerunt. Quæsi si prædicti Prior et alii retinuerunt prædictos boves, et terram suam cum ipsis excoli fecerunt, dicunt quod sic. Ideo consideratum est quod prædictus Abbas pro transgressionem prædicta in mīa : et prædicti Prior et alii in mīa eo quod excoli fecerunt prædictam terram cum bobus prædictis etc.

Et de hoc ponit se super patriam. Et Johanna dicit quod prædictus Thomas tenuit de prædicto Gilberto, quondam viro suo, unum molendinum aquaticum, per prædictum servitium etc., et quod idem Gilbertus, die quo ipsam desponsavit, et post, fuit in seisinā de prædicto redditu pro prædicto molendino per manus ejusdem Thomæ, et quod molendinum idem Thomas tunc tenuit et adhuc tenet etc. Et de hoc ponit se super patriam. Et Thomas dicit quod, prædicto die brevis impetrati, non tenuit prædictum redditum nec prædictum molendinum etc. Et de hoc ponit se super patriam. Et ideo fiat inde jurata etc. Et Rogerus de Moubray, de tertia parte versus eum petita, per licentiam reddit inde dotem suam. Ideo habeat inde seisinā suam etc. Quoad Johannem de Lythegreynes et Aliciam, uxorem suam, habet diem a die S. Hillarii in quindecim dies per præceptum Domini Regis.

pace, honorifice, integre et plenarie, sicut Rex Henricus, avus ipsius Regis, ea tenuit in dominico suo die qua fuit vivus et mortuus, libera et quieta de omni terreno servicio, virtute cujus cartæ Abbas qui nunc est, et similiter omnes Abbates loci prædicti, prædecessores sui, semper a tempore confectionis ejusdem cartæ usi sunt hujusmodi libertatibus, quod nullus minister forestæ de Pykerynge, aut alius forestarius quicumque, se quicquam in maneriis prædictis intromitteret,<sup>1</sup> præter ipsum Abbatem et ministros suos, et similiter quod agistare averia quæcunque in maneriis prædictis, infra vastum prædictum, debet pro voluntate sua: Et hoc paratus est verificare per ministros ejusdem forestæ prout cartæ etc. Ideo inquiratur inde veritas per eosdem etc. Qui scilicet forestarii, viridarii et regardatores, super hoc onerati et jurati, dicunt super sacramentum suum quoad clamium quod idem Abbas facit quod nullus minister forestæ, aut alius forestarius quicumque, se quicquam in maneriis prædictis intromittat præter ipsum Abbatem et ministros suos, quod ministri forestæ prædictæ, a tempore quo non extat memoria, se intromiserunt in maneriis prædictis tam de regardis, et leporibus ibidem captis, quam de venatione. Ideo, quoad hoc, consideratum est quod idem Abbas nichil capit per clamium suum in hac parte, set sit in misericordia pro præfato clamore suo. Et quoad clamorem suum quod agistare in maneriis prædictis debet pro voluntate sua, dicunt iidem ministri quod Abbas qui nunc est, et similiter omnes Abbatis loci prædicti, prædecessores prædicti Abbatis qui nunc est, a tempore confectionis cartæ prædictæ, et virtute ejusdem, usi sunt agistare in maneriis prædictis pro voluntate sua, prout superius clamatur. Ideo idem Abbas illud clamium habeat et gaudeat sibi et successoribus suis in perpetuum, salvo semper jure etc.

Abbas de Rievalle clamat esse quietus in maneriis suis del Marreys—scil., Loftmarreys, Lund, Neustede, et Kekmarreys, de expeditione canum, et de omnibus aliis assisis forestæ, præter de venatione, regardo, et captione leporum: et dicit quod idem Dominus Henricus, quondam Rex Angliæ, et progenitor Domini Regis nunc, dedit et carta sua confirmavit Deo et S. Mariæ et Ecclesiæ suæ de Ryevalle, et monachis ibidem . . . pro anima gloriosi Regis, avi sui . . . in liberam . . . elemosinam, totum vastum suum et totam pasturam suam subtus Pykerynge, cum pertinentiis suis; in quo quidem vasto maneria prædicta modo situata sunt, in pratis, pasturis, etc., et in omnibus aliis rebus per certas metas in eadem carta contentas, hæc optinenda in liberam elemosinam etc., et quiete de omni Tementale, Danegelda, et omnibus auxiliis et assisis et geldis, et omnibus consuetudinibus et occasionibus et placitis, et de omni servicio terreno quod sibi et successoribus unquam pertinuit, per cartam prædictam, quam hic profert et quæ hoc testatur: et dicit quod virtute cartæ prædictæ ipse et omnes Abbates loci prædicti, prædecessores sui, a tempore confectionis cartæ prædictæ hucusque quieti fuerunt, in maneriis prædictis, de expeditatione canum, et de omnibus aliis assisis forestæ prædictæ; et hoc præparatus est verificare per ministros ejusdem forestæ. Ideo inquiratur veritas per eosdem etc. Qui, scil., forestarii, viridarii et regardatores, ad hoc onerati et jurati, dicunt super sacramentum suum quod a tempore quo non extat memoria semper præsentatum fuit ad attachiamenta istius forestæ de canibus prædicti Abbatis et prædecessorum suorum de maneriis suis del Marreys non expeditatis, et aliquando ministri ejusdem forestæ accesserunt ibidem ad canes prædictos videndos, set idem Abbas nec aliquis prædecessorum suorum unquam aliquid solverunt, seu finem fecerunt cum eis, pro ipsis non expeditatis, et licet idem Abbas vel prædecessores sui amerciati fuissent hac de causa, tamen aliquando per donum<sup>1</sup> suum Custodi Castri, vel ejus locum tenenti, qui pro tempore fuerit, datum, et aliquando per favorem eorundem, nichil solverunt. Ideo dictum est eidem Abbati quod expectet inde judicium suum hic die Lunæ proximum post mensem Paschæ etc. Ad quem diem, apud Pykerynge, coram præfatis Ricardo de Wylughby et Johanne de Shardelowe venit prædictus Abbas per attornatum suum, et super hoc datus est eis dies hic, die Jovis proximum post Octabas Purificationis B. Mariæ, de judicio suo inde audiendo etc. Ad quem diem, apud Pykeryng, coram prædicto Johanne de Hambury venit Ricardus de la Pole et protulit breve Domini Regis patens, quod alibi irrotulatur, per quod breve Dominus Rex constituit ipsum Ricardum loco prædicti Johannis de Shardelowe ad Itinerandum in foresta ista, simul cum aliis Justiciariis duobus, vel uno eorum. Mandavit etiam Dominus Rex quoddam breve clausum præfatis Justiciariis duobus, vel uni eorum, de ipso Ricardo de la Pole in socium, loco prædicti Johannis de Shardelowe, admittendum, quod similiter alibi irrotulatur: virtute cujus brevis prædictus Johannes de Hambury admissit prædictum Ricardum de la Pole, loco prædicti Johannis de Shardelowe, in socium, ad præmissa faciendum etc. Et prædictus Abbas venit per attornatum suam: Et datus est ei dies hic etc., die Mercurii proximum post festum Ascensionis Domini, de judicio suo in hac parte audiendo. Ad quem diem loquela prædicta remansit sine die per absentiam Justiciariorum etc. Postea Dominus Rex mandavit præfato Ricardo de Wylughby, Roberto de Hungerford, Johanne de Hambury, et Ricardo de la Pole breve suum de Itinere prædicto resumendo, quod quidem breve alibi in isto Itinere irrotulatur: Ita quod placita et processus ejusdem Itineris inchoata et non discussa essent hic ad hunc diem etc., scil., die Lunæ proximum post festum S. tentium, ad procedendum ulterius etc., prout etc. Et modo apud Pykerynge, coram præfato Ricardo de Wylughby et Johanne de Hambury, Justiciariis, prædicto die Lunæ proxime post festum S. Andreae, venit prædictus Abbas resum[ere] in propria persona sua, et petit iudicium super veredicto clamii sui prædicti. Et quia manifeste liquet Curiae per cartam Domini Regis prædictam quod idem Abbas et omnes Abbates loci prædicti, prædecessores prædicti Abbatis qui nunc est, quieti esse debent in vasto et pastura subtus Pykeryng, in quibus maneria prædicta modo situata sunt, de omnibus geldis, consuetudinibus et placitis, et de omni terreno servitio, et omnibus aliis assisis forestæ quæ geld[abiles]<sup>1</sup> censentur, tam de expeditatione canum quam de aliis geldis quibuscunque; et compertum est per ministros istius forestæ quod nec Abbas qui nunc est, nec aliquis prædecessorum suorum, unquam aliquid solverunt alicui, sive Regi, sive Comiti qui pro tempore fuerit, a tempore confectionis cartæ prædictæ, sive finem fecerunt pro canibus suis ibidem non expeditatis, et Dominus Rex, per breve suum, mandavit præfatis Justiciariis hic quod ipsi ipsum Abbatem de hujusmodi expeditatione canum infra metas et divisas vastæ et pasturæ prædictarum quietum esse permittant, prout inde quietus esse debet, et ipse et prædecessores sui, Abbates loci prædicti, a tempore confectionis cartæ prædictæ inde quieti esse consueverunt:—Consideratum est quod idem Abbas eat inde quietus:—Salvo semper jure etc., cum alias inde loqui voluere.—Abbas de Rievalle clamat habere piscariam pro voluntate sua in aqua de Costa a loco ubi le Lowndyke cadit in Costam: Et dicit quod ipse et omnes prædecessores sui, Abbates ejusdem loci, a tempore quo non extat memoria, piscati fuerunt in aqua prædicta per divisas prædictas, tanquam in communi suo, qui pertinet ad liberum tenementum suum quæ est terra hidata de Kekmares et Newstede, et hoc paratus est verificare per ministros ejusdem forestæ. Ideo inquiratur inde veritas per eosdem. Qui, scil., forestarii, viridarii, et regardatores, ad hoc jurati et onerati, dicunt super sacramentum suum quod Abbas qui nunc est, similiter omnes Abbates loci prædicti, prædecessores sui, a tempore quo non extat memoria, piscati fuerunt in aqua prædicta de Costa per divisas prædictas, ut in communi suo pertinente ad liberum tenementum suum, quæ est terra hidata in Loftemarrays et Neustede, prout idem Abbas supponit. Ideo idem Abbas prædictam piscariam habeat—Salvo semper jure etc. Nos autem præmissa ad requisitionem Willelmi, nunc Abbatis de Rievalle, tenore præsentium duximus exemplificanda. In cujus etc. T. <sup>2</sup> Sheep in their second year, and sheep in their third year. The provincial equivalents for these words, still extant in some districts of the North (see Peacock's Lonsdale Glossary) are twinter and thrinter. Halliwell, however, gives the word twinter as meaning a "two-years-old beast"; but erroneously.

<sup>3</sup> This refusal on the part of the Convent to be contributory to either the restoration, repair, or rebuilding of the parish church of Kirkby Misperton may not be without its interest in the parochial history of the said place.

THE SURTEES SOCIETY.

REPORT FOR THE YEAR MD.CCC.LXXXVIII.

SINCE the last Report was issued, the work of the Surtees Society has been uneventful. The List of Members shews that it rests upon a firm basis, including as it does more than one hundred libraries and public institutions. The Council have had no occasion to regret their determination to limit the number of Subscribers to 350.

Of the original Members of the Society who were elected more than half a century ago, Dr. Whitley is the only survivor, whilst not many more than a dozen remain of those who joined us during the first twenty years of our existence. Such changes are inevitable. We are very proud of the loyalty of the great majority of our Members. In very many cases Membership has lasted for a life, and then the son has taken the place of his father.

Since the last Report was issued, the Correspondence of Dr. Stukeley, and the Memorials of Ripon, in two volumes, have been concluded. We have also brought out a second volume of Yorkshire Diaries, and a fifth volume of that most valuable work, the Testamenta Eboracensia. The last three works which we have issued are conspicuous for their variety as well as for their interest. They comprise a volume of ancient Churchwardens' Accompts, which may serve as a sample of a vast quantity of documents of the same class; the Chartulary of the Abbey of Rievaulx in Yorkshire, famous for its romantic position as well as for its history; and, lastly, a selection from the Halmote Court Rolls of the Prior and Convent of Durham, in the fourteenth century.

These documents are highly illustrative of the social life and position of the farmers and labourers in the county of Durham at a very early period, and throw a flood of light upon the ancient village communities with which they were associated.

The volumes in progress, as will be seen from the list, are not inferior to their predecessors either in novelty or value. The Secretary has also been engaged for more than thirty years on the preparation of a Glossary of Northern Words, from the earliest times to the beginning of the eighteenth century. His object was, primarily, to present to the Members of the Society an explanatory catalogue of the ancient English words which occur in our publications, but this design has been extended so as to include all other Northern words of a like character which have occurred to him in the course of his reading, chiefly among unpublished materials. It is proposed to issue, tentatively, the words under the letter A, to seek the opinion of the Members of the Society, and, if possible, to secure their assistance. Mr. Lawley has already rendered most kind and valuable help, and others, no doubt, will follow his example. The work will be a word-list, giving the meanings where they can be ascertained, without entering upon the knotty question of derivations. That may safely be left to Dr. J. H. Murray and his learned associates, to whom the publication of such a work as the present would be a most welcome boon.

THE SURTEES SOCIETY,

ESTABLISHED IN THE YEAR 1834,

In honour of the late Robert Surtees, of Mainsforth, Esquire, the author of the History of the County Palatine of Durham, and in accordance with his pursuits and plans; having for its object the publication of inedited Manuscripts, illustrative of the intellectual, the moral, the religious, and the social condition of those parts of England and Scotland, included on the east between the Humber and the Frith of Forth, and on the west between the Mersey and the Clyde, a region which constituted the ancient Kingdom of Northumbria.

NEW RULES AGREED UPON IN 1849; REVISED 1863.

I.—The Society shall consist of not more than three hundred and fifty members.

II.—There shall be a Patron of the Society, who shall be President.

III.—There shall be twenty-four Vice-Presidents, a Secretary, and two Treasurers.

IV.—The Patron, the Vice-Presidents, the Secretary, and the Treasurers shall form the Council, any five of whom, including the Secretary and a Treasurer, shall be a quorum competent to transact the business of the Society.

V.—The twenty-four Vice-Presidents, the Secretary, and the Treasurers shall be elected at a general meeting, to continue in office for three years, and be capable of re-election.

VI.—Any vacancies in the office of Secretary or Treasurers shall be provisionally filled up by the Council, subject to the approbation of the next general meeting.

VII.—Three meetings of the Council shall be held in every year, on the first Tuesday in the months of March, June, and December; and the place and hour of meeting shall be fixed by the Council, and communicated by the Secretary to the members of the Council.

VIII.—The meeting in June shall be the anniversary, to which all the members of the Society shall be convened by the Secretary.

IX.—The Secretary shall convene extraordinary meetings of the Council, on a requisition to that effect, signed by not less than five members of the Council, being presented to him.

X.—Members may be elected by ballot at any of the ordinary meetings, according to priority of application, upon being proposed in writing by three existing members. One black ball in ten shall exclude.

XI.—Each member shall pay in advance to the Treasurer the annual sum of one guinea. If any member's subscription shall be in arrear for two years, and he shall neglect to pay his subscription after having been reminded by the Treasurer, he shall be regarded as having ceased to be a member of the Society.

XII.—The money raised by the Society shall be expended in publishing such compositions, in their original language, or in a translated form, as come within the scope of this Society, without limitation of time with reference to the period of their respective authors. All editorial and other expenses to be defrayed by the Society.

XIII.—One volume, at least, in a closely-printed octavo form, shall be supplied to each member of the Society every year, free of expense.

XIV.—If the funds of the Society in any year will permit, the Council shall be at liberty to print and furnish to the members, free of expense, any other volume or volumes of the same character, in the same or a different form.

XV.—The number of copies of each publication, and the selection of a printer and publisher, shall be left to the Council, who shall also fix the price at which the copies, not furnished to members, shall be sold to the public.

XVI.—The armorial bearings of Mr. Surtees, and some other characteristic decoration connecting the Society with his name, shall be used in each publication.

XVII.—A list of the officers and members, together with an account of the receipts and expenses of the Society, shall be made up every year to the time of the annual meeting, and shall be submitted to the Society to be printed and published with the next succeeding volume.

XVIII.—No alteration shall be made in these rules, except at an annual meeting. Notice of any such alteration shall be given, at least as early as the ordinary meeting of the Council immediately preceding, to be communicated to each member of the Society.
